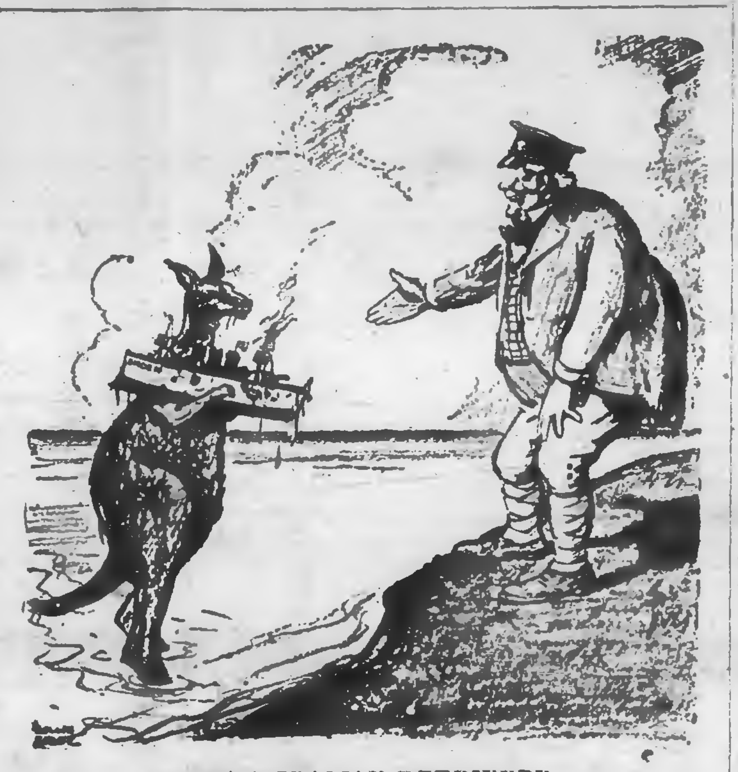
Colonel Miller made one of his usual military speeches in which he pointed out how important was the training of the home guard in the execution of the simple rudiments of military drill.

Get Out the Flag.

Canon Davidson came through with a suggestion that he termed a public recognition of the British flag. He wanted to see a flag floating from every house, store and public building in the city. The Union Jack should fly from every house that had sent a member to the war. He claimed it would be a stimulus to the people and cheer them up if dark hours gathered later on. "Popularize the flag," he said.

The question of buying distinguishing badges for the officers, and home guard buttons was left with a committee.

On Thursday night if the weather is suitable, the home guard will march out in full strength and afford the citizens an opportunity to see how strong and efficient the organization is becoming.



THE AUSTRALIAN RETRIEVER.

FURTHER OBJECTION IS MADE TO DISPOSAL PLANT

Deputation From Otonabee Wait on Secretary of Provincial Board of Health

That the residents of Otonabee intend to take a stand and fight to the last ditch against the city erecting the sewerage disposal plant in Otonabee on the banks of the Otonabee River opposite Rye's boat house is brought more forcibly to mind by the fact that a number of residents in the North West portion of the township have organized an Association to oppose the approval of the plans by the Provincial Board of Health. C. F. Kitney has been appointed secretary of this association. A deputation composed of deputy reeve Deyell, the secretary and others accompanied by the solicitor and Mr. Thompson, M.L.A., waited on the secretary of the Provincial Board of Health in Toronto yesterday with a view of registering their opposition to the site selected.

Dr. McCullough gave close attention to the representations of the delegation and appeared much impressed by their views, but pointed out that the plans had not yet been submitted to him, and that when this was done he would do his duty to fix a date when all parties could be present, and in the meantime he would of course not in any way endorse the city's view.

The deputation returned last night well pleased with the result of their visit.

That action must be taken by the city immediately goes without stating. It is necessary to have a clear path else the expenditure on the outfall sewer may be wasted. The plans, The Review learned today, will be submitted to the Provincial Board of Health in the course of a week or two and it will be very likely a week later before the matter is finally settled. Work is progressing on the construction of the sewer and more expense being incurred daily while the engineering department will soon commence working out the plans for the disposal plant.

Next Tuesday at 11 o'clock, the Board of Health will hear the arguments of both parties.

G. A. WARBURTON COMING TONIGHT

The arrival in the city tonight of Geo. A. Warburton of Toronto, will be the signal for the launching of a campaign in the interests of the patriotic fund. Mr. Warburton is a veteran campaigner at raising funds for purposes of this nature, having been highly successful in London, Hamilton, Toronto and Woodstock and other cities.

A certain element of secrecy is being observed over what plan of boosting Peterborough's funds will be adopted.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN FATAL

Walton Street Man Took Eye Mixture for Medicine

Accidentally mistaking eye mixture for medicine, Mr. Fred D. Weir, 401 Walton Street, had an extremely narrow escape from death at an early hour this morning. His condition late this afternoon was still serious but his physician believed all danger was past.

It appears that Mr. Weir drank the eye lotion believing he was taking medicine. Shortly after he was seized with violent pains and the mistake was discovered. Dr. N. H. Sutton was hurriedly called and remained with the sufferer most of the morning, administering antidotes and other medical relief. Mr. Weir was reported to be unconscious but out of danger. His many friends will regret to hear of the accident and extend best hopes for quick recovery.

Mexico City is Scene of Riot and Police Are Powerless

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 25. — Serious rioting occurred here last night. A mob gathered in front of the National Palace, marched to the stores where arms and ammunition were kept, battered down the doors, and sacked the places of their contents. There was much shooting, but few casualties reported.

The inadequate police force were stripped of their arms and were powerless to maintain order. Pawnshops and other establishments were looted. Later in the evening a guard was formed of civilians and former federal soldiers who received arms at police headquarters and at the Brazilian legation and endeavored to establish order.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY NOV. 25, 1914

LOYALTY TO THE HOME CITY.

LOYALTY to the home city is a principle that has played no small part in the growth of progressive communities. Toronto, Hamilton, Winnipeg have become the progressive cities they are because their residents knew it was good business to develop them.

Development meant improving factory and store, vacant lot, old houses, the extension of street car lines, pavements and permanent roadways It meant the employment of local labour and as much interchange of local business as possible. Work that is done outside the home city sends money to develop some other place. While a certain amount of outside work or buying is necessary, it has been recognized that when local labour is employed, local buyers have more money to purchase from stores. The stores do more business and they require more supplies from local and outside concerns. So runs the endless chain of intricate business relations in any progressive city.

Most business men in Peterborough recognize the logic of this policy, and those who are loyal to this city, investing their money in its development, and employing local labour, are deserving of the highest commendation and support. A factory, or house, or store that is built by local labour, an improvement in machinery to local plants, or any expenditure of this nature is a boost for the home city. Buyers should keep facts like these, as they arise, in mind, and support those business men in Peterborough who show their loyalty to this city by helping in its development.

HOW TO BEAT THE GOVERNMENT.

THERE IS a case being tried in Toronto by Mr. Justice Kelly in which a former evangelist and more recently a real estate dealer in Winnipeg, Rev. C. Jeff McComb, was confronted with a letter he had written from Toronto on June 16th, 1913, and addressed to the Fiat Co., Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The letter of the erstwhile preacher runs thus:

> "We arrived in Toronto on Friday evening, perfectly safe and sound. We had a most delightful trip in every way.
>
> "Permit me here to suggest, in the absence of Mr. A. G. Farrow, that you give his new automobile body the same serial number as his old one so as to escape paying duty. In our own case we had no trouble along this line; a couple of dollars and a cheery word to the inspector goes a long way.
>
> "Signed C. J. McCOMB."

This letter is illuminating, and possibly some of Rev. C. J. McComb's converts could profit by their spiritual adviser's suggestion. Only don't get caught.

NO LONGER IMPORTED.

SOME YEARS AGO a Canadian lady, who has since become entitled to "Lady" in front of her name, sent with a friend who was going to Europe to buy a set of curtains. The cost of these curtains after she paid duty on them was $600.00. For a time she got considerable satisfaction in telling her friends that the curtains were made in some country in Europe; that they were imported, in short, that they were not made in Canada.

What a change has come over the practical sentiments of Canadian women. The lady who bought curtains no longer boasts that her household goods are made in a foreign country. She is too closely related to the practical side of Canadian business through her husband's work not to see that the important thing just now is to insist every time a purchase is made for the household that as far as possible the goods shall be made in Canada. She does not need to reason it out. It is a matter of instinct. The goods made in Canada not only provide Canadian labour with work and Canadian homes with the necessaries of life. They also provide the shrewd housewife with a chance to buy better goods or more goods for the same money.. They relieve her of the necessity of paying tribute to Caesar at the customs house. Goods made in Canada are first in sentiment, first in practice, and supreme in matters of economy. And the women of Canada are the practical workers in the movement, who are making it a commonsense and thrifty housewives' campaign to buy goods made in Canada.

IT APPEARS that Henri Bourassa will not be allowed to give an address in Ottawa. If he confined his speech to his hands, possibly a compromise might be effected.

WAR ON THE THEATRES.

THEATRES, like newspapers and some other businesses, have felt the effects of the war very keenly. Plays of the highest quality, actors and actresses of international fame, are unable to draw full houses. Recently, Maude Adams, at the Princess Theatre in Toronto, played on a Saturday afternoon to half a house. Under normal conditions there would hardly be a single empty seat. Theatres like the Royal Alexandra and the Princess have tried moving pictures, and even these fail to satisfy the needs of these theatres. Some have gone so far as to close temporarily, or rather, to open just occasionally, whenever the time seems opportune.

The same conditions hold true in other cities. Even in places feeling the bad effects of the war least, the theatres have been in difficulties. Ottawa feels the war perhaps less than any other Canadian city, owing to the large civil servant list, who receive their salaries in bad as well as prosperous times. Ottawa has five theatres that advertise, the largest being the Russel, which, with three others, advertised moving pictures for last Monday night. The other dissentient house advertised vaudeville.

There are two reasons for this policy. First, owing to the condition of the public, the shows are not on the road. We have seen notices in the newspapers of several good companies that have disbanded. Secondly, the people have not got the money to spend for entertainment of this kind, or, having it, are conserving it for other purposes.

If conditions start to improve in any real sense the fact would soon be noticeable in the conduct of theatres.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE REVIEW was the first paper in Peterborough to announce the sinking of the superdreadnought Audacious. The Examiner later took pains to say that this story was not officially confirmed and might not be true It has not yet been officially announced, but we are pleased to see that the Examiner published a picture last night of the sinking of the Audacious. The Examiner must have come to the conclusion that the Review's despatch was true, and incidentally this shows what a superior press service the Review has.

THE LIBERAL MACHINE at Ottawa, says Beck's Weekly, is said to be worried over the problem of finding a seat for the Hon. George P. Graham, whose home constituency rejected him and whose new one, South Renfrew, is said to be growing weary of an "absentee" member. Graham? Graham? Isn't he the man who runs the Montreal Herald? Why not run him in St. Mary's division when Mederic is elevated to the Legislative Council?

WE ADMIT we are not expert on what is a good asphalt road, but we submit that the asphalt pavement on Aylmer street at the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets looks defective. It has a rough, unfinished surface, quite different from that in front of the Creamery, and it might be well for Mayor Buller to give this part an inspection, if he has not already done so.

IF TORONTO ever wants to become a city of culture, it will have to overcome that hog-town characteristic so concisely expressed in one of its own phrases, "big eyes," and which was well exemplified in the furore it has raised over the criticism of the Minister of Militia and Defence.

REPEATED SLAPS in the way of refusals to hear Henri Bourassa address a public assembly ought to impress the futility of his policy on that cultured French-Canadian.

The Real Joffre.

(Canadian Courier.)

Gen. Boulanger's career is still a factor in the military life of France. Since his time there has existed a Republican prejudice against the notoriety of generals. To that is due the fact that few photographs have appeared of Gen. Joffre, the present Commander-in-Chief of the French army. Gen. Joffre's order of the day giving praise to Gen. de Castelnau was suppressed by the censor, apparently because it was considered against the interest of the Republic that a general should become a popular hero. Today it is a war of silence and anonymity which accords best with the genius of Joffre, a war of fatigue and resistance — a "scientific" war, as opposed to an "artistic" war of Napoleon. Joffre has become a master of the new system, which he did not invent.

Gen. Joffre spends a part of each day in a long, low rapid motor car, visiting the lines. It is impossible to visit all the points—much must be left to the corps commander after the general plan is settled—this robs a generalissimo of personal contact with his troops; he is more or less unknown to them, and Joffre probably has to show papers to his sentries. He wears out two chauffeurs a day in his rush from point to point.

His chief characteristic is calmness. He is as calm in war as in peace. And that quality has bred confidence. He has confidence in himself and has given confidence to others. His staff never for a moment doubts his capacity to win, and that conviction has percolated through to the masses of the troops. It has made him popular, though he has done nothing to engender that; on the contrary, he eschews popularity. He lives apart from press "reclame"; he does not seek it and he dislikes it. He knows how to combine the best in his own and other people's projects. He is modest as he is unassuming. His readiness to accept suggestion has fostered the belief that he is an adapter and organizer rather than strategist. He is both. His campaigns show the soldier as well as the engineer and organizer. But his great maxim is that in war nothing can be improvised. Every detail must be thought out; that marks his superiority over other modern commanders.

A Lucky Thing.

(Orillia Packet.)

It is a lucky thing that the German navy happens to be comparatively weak in the two weapons which have so far proved most effective in the present war — submarines and big guns. Admiral von Tirpitz, head of the German Admiralty, had but little faith in the submarine, and it was only under pressure that he consented to their construction. Consequently Germany had not more than thirty of them at the beginning of the war, whereas Britain, who has less use for them, had at least ninety. Similarly Von Tirpitz believed that the 11 and 12 inch gun was as large as was necessary, and even the latest German warships were not designed for anything heavier. For four years, on the other hand, Britain has been arming her superdreadnoughts with 13.5 inch guns, and her latest battleships have 15-inch guns. Yet of the eight British cruisers sunk since the war began, five have succumbed to submarines and two to superior guns. All of which goes to show that even German "experts" can make serious mistakes.

GLARING FALSEHOODS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I see that the Government has decided that there are no grounds to bar the Saturday Evening Post from coming into Canada because as it alleges it has published pro-British as well as pro-German articles which is misleading.

The pro-German articles are based upon glaring falsehoods, while the others are based upon admitted truths, which is an unfair comparison.

PROTECTION AND FREE TRADE.

Editor, The Review:

Dear Sir,—The remarks being made by our member in his address to St. Paul's Club on Protection and Free Trade were read by me with interest. There is one matter in connection with the same that affords a striking illustration of the absurdity of holding that Free Trade is necessarily a good thing. As in the case of the War Office in England, at the present time, which, notwithstanding free competition in Britain, the United States, Canada, Australia and various other countries, nevertheless it had to seize, practically, the different works and factories in order to prevent them from sticking the Government. Free Trade, by its general competition, was supposed to prevent all these things, but the truth of the matter will be found to be that such is not the case, and that the old idea of arguing what things ought to be in opposition to the plan of taking facts as they are, has got to go. Free Trade meant that laborers should not be allowed to combine, that workingmen of all kinds should be free to sell their labor where they liked or to have it sold for them. That sounded very well, but the idea was mighty soon given up. Where would labor be today without combination, which is the very opposite of what was contemplated by the men who discovered Free Trade? But let me again say, Mr. Editor, that the necessity for all things is keenest at war time, and that is the time to test the theories, and in war time the idea of Free Trade or anything but absolute government control is entirely out of the question.

Next Tuesday night the great Presbyterian missionary speaks on the recent development of industrial life in India, and everybody who takes an interest in the tremendous importance of the new Asiatic problem will be at Knox Church that night.

Yours truly.
THINKER.

How Daylight Varies

The variation of daylight in green houses and kindred phenomena have been investigated in a very thorough manner by leading scientists. The measurements of light intensity were made with a form of chemical photometer, and it was found that morning light was, on an average, 16 per cent. more intense, than afternoon light. This difference varies with the season, in some months reaching 30 per cent. Hence, other things being equal, a crop will show a greater development on an east than a west exposure. The light-transmitting properties of different kinds of glass vary greatly. Thus the loss of light from glass as compared with outdoor light ranges all the way from 13 to 36 per cent. or more. The practice of lapping the panes causes an average loss of light of about 11 per cent. The transmission of light naturally increases as the angle of the roof more nearly coincides with a right angle to the sun's rays. The reflection of light from surfaces is another important factor.

Why These?

He—On what grounds does your father object to me, dearest?"

She—On ours, principally. He says if he catches you here again he'll set the dog on you!

Camphor as Disinfectant

If a small piece of camphor is procured and placed in a bowl or glass of water it will be found to float on the surface, and when lighted will prove a good night light, especially as camphor is a "good disinfectant, and its smell not at all disagreeable.

Sugar Adds Strength to Tea

When a cup of strong tea is required, instead of putting an extra spoonful into the pot, add a spoonful of sugar. This opens the leaves of the tea and makes the tea stronger.

Strategy and Tactics

One reads in the papers that this general is a great strategist, and that one a brilliant tactician. These terms, although readily understandable by the military man, often convey little or nothing to the lay mind. In broad terms, however, the strategist is the organizer of victory; the tactician executes the strategist's plans and orders.

The strategist, like a first class chess player, must have the power of seeing many moves ahead. The tactician need not necessarily possess this gift. He deals with events as they happen; the strategist foresees them or ordains that they shall happen.

It is the strategist who decides, in advance, where, when, and by what forces a battle shall be fought; the tactician is responsible for the actual conduct of the combat.

The broad German strategic plan against France was to deal her a smashing blow before she had time to organize her forces. This was to be strategically accomplished by rushing the German troops through Belgium and over the unprotected French northern border, thus placing them in the best possible position for striking a deadly blow.

Thanks to Belgium, the plan, as we know, miscarried. But had it succeeded, the German strategists' work would have ended with the effective invasion of northern France, and the next move would have been with the tacticians.

At the same time, the strategist's work is, in a sense, never-ending. The moment a big battle has been fought he has to pick up the, perhaps, broken threads of his scheme, and make fresh strategical plans and dispositions. A big war, indeed, is, so to speak, an endless chain of strategical preparation, tactical battle —strategical preparation, tactical battle.

The sending of Britain's Expeditionary Force to the front was a strategic movement, the manner in which the crossing was carried out without a hitch was a tactical sucess.

Diseases of Grain And Some Remedies

Grain, like any other form of life, has its diseases, and undoubtedly the most serious and injurious one is the smut with which wheat, oats and corn are often affected.

The loose smut of oats is perhaps the most generally known phase of this grain disease, and occurs at heading time on growing oats, causing the destruction of the chaff and forming a powdery black mass. This latter is composed of the spores of the fungus, which is carried from year to year by the wind, the consequence being that some of it drops on the healthy grains. An easy and simple remedy for this is to spread the grain on a clean floor and sprinkle it with a solution of one pound of formalin in 50 gallons of water, then heap the sprayed grain into a pile and cover it with canvas for about twelve hours, and afterwards mix a little air-slaked lime with the treated grain to accelerate the drying.

Wheat also is subject to this loose smut, it spreads from diseased to healthy plants at flowering time and penetrates the young grain. A treatment has been devised for this. Clean the seed thoroughly and soak for 5 to 7 hours in water at a temperature of 63° to 72°. Place the grain in loose bags or wire baskets with a capacity of about half a peck. Fill two galvanised iron tubs with water, the first should be kept at a temperature of 110° to 120° Fahr. and the second at 126° to 129°. Now plunge each bag into the first tub for one minute and then into the second tub for ten minutes, stirring the grain all the while. The seed can be dried on the barn floor.

The disadvantage of the hot water treatment is that it takes too long to cure a large amount of grain at one time. The grower, however, can treat a little of the seed which is grown in a separate field and can use the crop for seed a second year. This field must be a good distance away from infected wheat, or must have bush or woodland between to prevent the wind-carried spores reaching it.

There is a more complicated variety of smut which also affects wheat, called Bunt, or stinking smut of wheat. Treat this form of the disease in the same manner as oats by spraying with a solution of formalin.

His Method

Mrs. Brown stood in the doorway of her suburban home and eyed the tramp critically.

"Are you willing to work for a meal?" she asked at last.

The tramp extended his hands expansively as though work was the one thing in life he hankered after; and his apparent sincerity overcame Mrs. Brown's last scruple.

She retired into the house and presently returned carrying a large plate of food and a businesslike-looking hoe.

When the tramp had eaten the food she handed him the hoe, and, pointing towards the garden path, remarked:

"Now, I want you to clean out that gutter. You see it's filled with mud."

The tramp glanced at the gutter, then at the hoe.

"I never use a hoe," he said, "when cleaning out a gutter."

"Never use a hoe! Then, what do you use? A shovel?

"No," said the tramp, as he moved towards the gate. "My method is to pray for rain!"

A YANKEE TAR

And the Many Deaths That Hung Over Him in Mexico

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Jack Scarborough was a bright fellow, but inclined to be wild—that is, he was one of those boys who have a passion for adventure. His father sent him to college, and since he could get his lessons without much study he devoted his spare time to mischief. Before the close of his sophomore year he was caught laying a fuse to set off a cannon cracker under the chair of one of the professors and expelled.

Going home under such circumstances was not to Jack's taste. So he enlisted in the United States navy. But, exciting the antagonism of a petty officer, his life on shipboard was not a happy one. One evening when the officer was giving him a tongue lashing Jack knocked him down and jumped into the water. The ship was lying at anchor at Vera Cruz, and under cover of the darkness that was coming on Jack swam ashore, and, although a posse was sent after him, he was not found, and his ship sailed without him.

This was at the time when Madero was deposed from the presidency of Mexico and General Felix Diaz was making himself prominent in the affairs of that country, famous for its revolutions. Jack enlisted under Diaz, was captured in arms and with a number of others set apart to be shot. Being an American citizen, he would have had an excellent chance for his life by applying to the American consul to interfere in his behalf. But by this course he would be turned over to the United States navy to be punished for mutiny and desertion, either one of which was a pretty serious offense. But Jack, who seemed born for trouble, made more for himself. Just before the prisoners were to be shot they were given an opportunity to enlist in the federal army in the service of Huerta, and Jack availed himself of it, thereby again becoming a deserter.

The new recruits soon found themselves in the City of Mexico, where Jack lived the life of an inactive soldier. During this time he picked up enough knowledge of the Spanish language to be able to converse in it. His disposition for hairbreadth escapes rendered his stay at the capital irksome, and he persuaded himself that the Constitutionalists were the true friends of good government, and their activity also attracted him.

Fortunately, as he considered it, he was sent out with his regiment to oppose General Villa and at the first opportunity deserted to join the forces of that chief, adding one more to his offenses punishable with death. This was Jack's last desertion, for he was captured with a number of others in arms against the Huerta forces and again ordered to execution.

Jack, now being in the interior, thought he might claim to be an American citizen without being turned over to the navy, so he sent in a protest against being executed on that ground. An order came for him to be taken to the commander of the force that captured him, and he appeared before that officer for examination. During the questioning Jack incidentally referred to his having been a student at a university in the United States. At this the officer pricked up his ears and asked if he was competent to prepare a boy for college. Jack said that he was. The officer asked him to repeat something in the Latin language, and Jack gave him the first few lines of Vergil's "Aeneid." This appeared to satisfy the officer, who said to the guard who had brought the prisoner to him:

"Leave him with me. He is a United States citizen."

When the guard had departed the general told Jack that he had a son sixteen years old who desired to enter one of the United States universities and if Jack could get him ready to do so within a year his life would be spared; if not he would be turned over to the Mexican army officials to be shot for desertion.

Jack, who had not been so far from death since he deserted from the United States navy, accepted the terms gladly. Besides, a year was a long while for Mexico to remain under one government, and quite likely Huerta would within the period give place to another.

The general turned Jack over to his orderly, who was ordered to take him to his hacienda, not far distant. On reaching the hacienda the prisoner tutor was received by the major domo, Ramon Casio, a crafty looking man, of half Spanish, half Indian, blood. He introduced Jack to the family, including his pupil.

There was no need to watch the tutor for fear he would add another to his many desertions. The moment he set eyes on the general's daughter, Rosa, two years older than her brother, Alfonso, the candidate for college he was perfectly satisfied to stay where he was. Rosa was a dark eyed beauty, with an olive complexion tinged with red and a mellifluous voice. It was not long before she learned just how many executions the tutor had hanging over him, and she loved him for every one of them separately. Indeed, she loved him so well that before he had been under the same roof with her very long she added another desertion to his record

Jack sized up the pupil, whose name was Alfonso, and was not so well pleased with the condition on which his life hung as he had been. The boy's physiognomy did not indicate a brain capable of taking in the studies in which the better grade of American universities require a candidate for matriculation to be proficient.

Rosa was as bright as Alfonso was dull. Knowing what Jack had to do to save his life, she turned in and helped him. When Jack had given him a coaching Rosa would take hold of her brother and give him another—that is, when she could make him take the dose.

Jack soon proved that Alfonso was so stupid that he could not be prepared for college in three times the period granted for the purpose. If the tutor were to be turned over to be executed because he could not fit his pupil for college in one year death was sure to follow. Alfonso was not only stupid; he would not try to learn. Rosa, who knew her father to be uncompromising when his word had been passed, begged her brother to apply himself to his studies, but to no purpose.

Every one who has any knowledge of lovers knows that the longer they are opposed in their love the more determined they become not to be balked in it, and if there is a penalty for loving the more reckless they are in incurring it. Moreover, the greater the penalty the more sure they are to render themselves liable to it. As for Dick, who had already incurred as many deaths as could be counted on the fingers of one of his hands, it is not to be expected that he would refrain from adding one more for the thumb.

But danger to oneself is very different from danger to a loved one. Dick knew that if caught making love to Senorita Rosa he would be put out of existence at once. This was nothing compared with the vengeance of an angry father on his daughter.

What would have been the outcome of this story had not the United States forces landed at Vera Cruz no one can tell. It put the idea of flight into Jack's head—not flight alone, but flight with the girl he loved. But he had no sooner conceived the idea of taking her within the American lines when up came the remembrance that a naval court martial awaited him to try him for the double offense of mutiny and desertion.

To make for Vera Cruz was not to be considered. But how about going either to General Carranza or General Villa? He had not deserted from Villa, though he had deserted to him. The move might be expedient if he were to go alone. But if he took Rosa with him, granting that they reached Villa's lines in saftey, how would the general look upon a gringo taking away a fair daughter of Mexico?

The only route open to the couple seemed to be to the Texas border. That was a long distance, and capture was almost certain. Vera Cruz even with the court martial would afford a better chance. And might he not enter Vera Cruz and pass out of it on a merchant steamer without falling into the hands of the naval authorities?

Jack and Rosa determined that they would better not live at all than live apart. They determined to break for Vera Cruz. They laid their plans accordingly, and one dark night Rosa stepped down from her room, passed through the patio and met Jack on the walk leading to the gate. The lovers were passing between the two huge brick pillars when a light was flashed in their faces.

"Senorita," said Ramon Casio, "I would advise you to return to your room. Signor, you will please come with me."

Had Jack not been encumbered by the girl he would have made a dash for liberty. He could not go with her, and he would not go without her. The three went quietly to the house. Rosa shut herself up in her room, while Jack was locked in his, though there was no necessity for this, for he would not have departed if left free to do so.

A few days after this the door of Jack's room was opened by the major domo and Jack was directed to follow him. He was taken to the library, where he found Rosa's father, the general. To Jack's surprise the general addressed him in a not unkind tone, asked him a great many questions about himself, including his family, his father's occupation and fortune.

"I have to choose between yielding to my daughter," said the general at last, "in this affair between you and losing her. I can kill you, but by doing so I will kill her as well. I can send you out of the country, but I would wreck her life. I am forced to consent to a marriage between you and her, but so long as I must do so I will do so with a good grace."

He offered Jack his hand, and at the same moment a door opened and Rosa came in. She threw herself into the arms of her father, then turned to Jack.

"Would you prefer," asked the general of Jack, "to return to America or remain in Mexico?"

"Neither are safe for me, general," Jack replied. "I think we had better go to Europe for a bridal trip and remain till a different government is established here. Then I will return and make you a dutiful son-in-law."

Jack married Rosa and without being required to fit Alfonso for college. When Huerta left Mexico it made a great alteration in Mexico. Jack's father-in-law changed sides just in time, and since he was considered a very fine man and had the confidence of the people he remained on top. He found himself enabled not only to take care of himself, but of Jack also, who became a Mexican citizen and is already looming into prominence on his own account and is to be provided for as an officeholder.

Joyful Punishment.

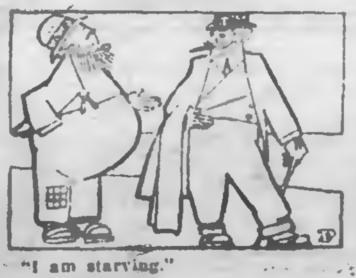
Noticing one of her small boys nibbling at some luncheon in school one day the teacher called the culprit to the desk. "You know," she began sternly, "that you must not eat during lesson hours! Now as a punishment you must stay here in front of the class and eat every bit of it."

The small boy did as he was bid, a curious grin overspreading his face.

The teacher misunderstood that grin until the last scrap had disappeared, when from the class a small voice wailed in tearful accents:

"Please, teacher, that wasn't his lunch he was eatin'; it was mine."

Cold Comfort.



"I am starving."

"Starving!"

"Yes."

"Well, why don't you do like the lady in the novel?"

"How is that?"

"Sit down and eat your heart out."

Needs a Hell.

"Do you suppose the sultan consults his wives?"

"Well, not on material things."

"Too haughty, I suppose."

"Not that. It would be too much like holding a political convention."

Prophetic.

We know not what's before us,
But we can safely guess—
A lovely anvil chorus
If we should win success.

Preparing Fish For the Table

Almost all fish are best directly after taken from the water. The more delicate the fish the poorer its keeping qualities. White fish bear transportation poorly. Cod fish loses its delicate flavor if packed in ice and transported over the country. Rich fish, like salmon and halibut, have much better keeping qualities than the lighter kind.

Fresh fish is firm, eyes full and rather bright, and the odor, while it is always fishy, will not be disagreeable. An ordinary fish, freshly caught and cooked, will far surpass in flavor and wholesomeness a fish kept for days or weeks, packed in ice.

To Prepare Fish For Cooking

Wipe fish inside and out with cloth wrung out of cold water. Remove any scales that may have been overlooked at the market by drawing knife over fish, beginning at tail and working toward head. Incline knife towards you to prevent scales from flying.

Small fish are usually served with head and tail on.

To bone a fish begin at the tail, run a sharp knife close to the backbone and with knife follow the bone its entire length, thus removing half the flesh from the bones. Turn and remove flesh from the other side. Pick out any small bones that remain after removing backbone.

Turbot

Any dry fish may be used, but those having much oil or color to flesh do not make as pleasing looking dishes. Halibut or whitefish are the nicest.

Steam 3 pounds of fish until tender. Remove bones, skin and flake the fish. Sprinkle with a little salt and white pepper. Make a sauce of 3 cups of milk, 6 tablespoons of flour blended with 6 tablespoons of butter. Stir to avoid lumps. Let cook 20 minutes. When slightly cool add 2 well beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon of minced onion and 1 tablespoon minced parsley. Put layer of fish, then layer of sauce in baking pan until all is used. Sprinkle top with crumbs and dots of butter and bake until brown.

Crabmeat Cutlets

Boil and flake 2 cups of crabmeat. Make a thick white sauce, using 1 cup of milk and 2 tablespoons of flour blended with 2 even tablespoons of butter. When smooth put into milk. Turn into double boiler and cook 20 minutes. Add ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of parsley, dash of nutmeg and ¼ teaspoon of minced onion. Cayenne if desired. Turn in the cooked crabmeat and stir all together. Allow to cool a little Make this mixture into little heaps or balls and allow to stand an hour in cold place. When ready to serve form into cutlet shape. Dip in beaten egg and then fine bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Drain and serve with slices of lemon or hot tartar sauce.

Salmon in Molds

Remove bones, oil and skin from fish in 1 can of salmon. Mince fine with fork and rub into the fish 3 tablespoons of melted butter until light and foamy. Add to them ½ cup of fine bread crumbs. Season fish to taste with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon of eggs and crumbs. Put in well buttered molds and steam 1 hour.

Hot Tartar Sauce

To ½ cup of thick white sauce add ½ cup of mayonnaise dressing, ½ teaspoon of minced chives and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. Put into double boiler to heat. Do not boil. Stir into this ½ teaspoon each of cucumber pickle, olives, parsley and capers, all minced fine. Serve at once piping hot.

Sauce For Salmon

Thicken 1 cup of milk with 1 tablespoon of flour blended with 1 tablespoon of butter. Put all in double boiler and cook 15 minutes. Stir often to prevent lumps. Add to this the liquor and oil from 1 can of salmon. Salt to taste and a dash of cayenne. Just before serving add 1 teaspoon of catsup. Take from stove and stir in one well beaten raw egg. Serve at once.

Whence Came Thimbles?

In the days of England's "Merry Monarch," women, and men too, wore silver bells on their thumbs—thumb bells they called them—and they wore them more for ornament than use. Through careless pronunciation and misspelling the thumb bells of the 16th century became "thimbles" and in time they came to be worn on the middle finger as a protection from the needle point when sewing. Sailors, as well as seamstresses, wear thimbles or thummels, as the seamen call them, but the sailor's thimble is a ring rather than a cap.

Feminine Facts

Statistics show that France has 1,800,000 families without children.

It is said that 47 per cent. of the stockholders in the Pennsylvania railroad are women.

In Denmark they usually furnish a school teacher with a house, a barn and also a few acres of ground.

Japan contains 500,000 factory girls.

In Singapore women are employed as road builders.

There are four women members of the Chinese parliament.

To Clean the Walls

A mop of cheese cloth strips, an inch and a half wide and eight inches long made fast to a light handle is the best thing for keeping a papered wall clean. Brush the paper well with it twice a month. Every spring and fall mix corn starch, whiting and powdered Fuller's earth in equal parts, dip the mop into the powder, and rub walls and ceiling well with it. Then shake all powder from the mop, cover it with a damp flannel. Go all over the wall again, wiping in long straight strokes.

Points for Mothers

Homemade Cap For the Baby.

"Don't you find that, to keep a baby anything like nice, one has always to be spending money?" asked the shopping mother as she gazed yearningly at the alluring things in the outfitter's window. "I really think I'll get that bonnet marked a dollar, baby is so shabby!"

"So would that one be," her companion observed critically, "in less than a month's time. Of course it looks pretty with all that lace trimming and puffed out silk and those fussy rosettes, but think how quickly it will catch the dust, and it certainly won't wash!

"I've long since discovered the futility of ready made baby things. I can make a little bonnet that will last for months. All you want is half a yard of Jap silk rucked by hand, lined with an odd bit of muslin and simply trimmed with two flat rosettes and strings of washing ribbon, finished with a little soft frill.

"For this, by the way, I buy not the ordinary cap frills, but neck frilling, as I can cut three from a yard. The net sort lasts the longest.

"Then when the bonnet gets soiled it is quite easy to let out the gathers, unpick the rosettes and just wash it, and with the ribbon nicely ironed out I find it comes up again like new."

"Yes," murmured the mother of four, "that's a hint worth trying."

Fare For the Kiddies.

In diet less meat or gravy should be given to children in hot weather than usual. Potatoes should be reduced in quantity or altogether omitted, while porridge, lentils, beans and similar foods should be abandoned altogether.

Very often a few days' strict dieting, substituting fish or eggs entirely for meat or soup, fruit and custard and cold milk puddings for suet puddings of various kinds and reducing the quantity of butter eaten, will work wonders in the case of a child who has been fractious and unwell.

Green vegetables, especially spinach, are distinctly valuable, provided they are well cooked, but salads or raw vegetables in any form should never be given to young children.

Such a diet, especially by knocking off butter and possibly some quantity of the milk taken, will be somewhat lowering, but to combat this the addition of malted milk to the dietary will be found very beneficial; indeed, it is good to let this take the place of ordinary milk or bread and milk once a day certainly for awhile.

Nutritive Jellies.

A thing mothers neglect too much is the value of isinglass. Most children love jellies, and when made with a good isinglass they are extremely good; needless to say the ordinary jelly, though very nice, has no nutritive value and so is not a suitable food for children at all except, of course, as a delicacy.

A nice and nutritious jelly is made by boiling one ounce of rice, sago and pearl barley together very slowly in three pints of water; strain the water and add to it one-half ounce of good isinglass (or more if the weather is very hot) and enough fruit juice to flavor it.

This jelly is very nourishing and is much liked by children, while the heat forming properties of the farinaceous foods are avoided at the same time that their food value is retained.

New Dolls From Old.

A doll with a broken head and arms can easily be transformed into a new toy. Make a rag head and arms and stitch them to the body. Cover the whole with black sateen.

Take two white linen and two black shoe buttons; pierce the linen ones through the center, put the shanks of the black ones through them and stitch these on for eyes.

Run a bit of white tape down to make the nose and across for the mouth. Use black fur for the hair.

A bright red frock or a green plush jacket and breeches with red waistcoat and yellow tie is made for attire, and there is a splendid golliwog.

Unwelcome Visitors.

The visitor who plays boisterous games with babies when they are just going to bed, teases them under the impression that she is amusing them and finally goes off, leaving the chicks thoroughly tired out and cross and their mother feeling extremely annoyed because she has to "face the music" and smooth things down again, is a nuisance.

Many people fail to realize the time before bedtime should be a sort of preparation for sleep. Boisterous play wakes children up, and as a result they take a far longer time than usual to go off.

The Why Stage.

When your child has reached the "why" period be sympathetic and gentle with him. Remember, asking questions is the best and easiest way of acquiring knowledge. His little mind is one big interrogation point.

Make a careful study of all his questions and answer them as fully as you can. To the child the mother is the source of all knowledge. Do not fail him. The longer he continues in this belief the stronger your hold on him.

MARTYRS TO BEAUTY

Female Loveliness May be Acquired if Not Bestowed by Nature

A famous man said recently that women were never as attractive at now in the history of the world.

And never did the average woman think so much of her appearance or practice so many artificial beautifying methods as at present.

Straightening the lines of the nose is an operation that is done every day, and injecting paraffine to fill out the cheeks is also done every day in the surgical beauty parlors.

A minute piece of skin is taken from the forehead just over the eyebrows so that they are elevated. This is supposed to give a calm expression.

Every woman who patronizes the masseuse will stand to be mauled and hammered if she thinks her chin is doubling. Many women sit with their feet in very hot water every night for fifteen minutes, as that is supposed to draw the blood down from a red nose.

Wigs and false hair of every hue and powders of as many colors as the Indian squaw used add to the attractiveness of the modern beauty and the awful "skinning operation" is done day after day in the big cities. This is so painful that most women are kept under the influence of opiates for a few days until the new skin begins to form.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

If silver is to be stored away for some time, pack it with dry flour; it will remain untarnished.

When making coffee sprinkle a little salt on the coffee before pouring on boiling water, and the flavor will be wonderfully improved.

To keep cheese for some time, and prevent it becoming mouldy or dry wrap it up in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep it in a dish.

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water and lay it on the injured part.

Frost-bitten vegetables should be soaked in cold water for one hour before boiling. A piece of saltpetre should be added to the water in which they are cooked.

When making a fruit pie do not put the sugar on the top under the crust but mix it with the fruit below, otherwise it makes the crust heavy and is more liable to boil out.

Needles and pins will never rust in a cushion filled with coffee grounds. Rinse the grounds in cold water spread on a sheet of paper to dry thoroughly, and then stuff the cushion.

Eucalyptus oil will remove grease stains from any kind of material without injuring it. Apply a little of the oil with a clean piece of flannel, and rub the material gently until the stains disappear.

To make glassware glisten, wash the glass and rinse in hot water, then plunge into cold water into which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, then polish with a dry cloth.

A simple method of making iron work proof against rust is to heat it until it is almost red-hot, and then brush it over with linseed oil. This makes a varnish which, unlike ordinary paint or enamel, does not chip off.

Much heavy cake is the result of the oven door not being closed as gently as possible.

Pickle Relish

Put three small or two medium-sized pickles, one slice of raw onion, three olives and one piece of horse radish an inch long through the grinder quite fine. Drain and add to one tablespoon of salad dressing. Mix thoroughly. When ready to serve beat in one tablespoon of lemon juice and one tablespoon of heavy cream.

Cabbage Juice For Sores

If at any time you have a gathered finger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

DR. GORDON SAYS VICTORY BY ALLIES WILL SOUND THE DEATH KNELL OF WAR

Dr. Gordon is meeting with considerable success in his campaign at Ottawa and as was the case in Peterboro, the accommodation at times is not sufficient. In the course of a recent address, Dr. Gordon predicted that the war would be ended or at least just about over by next fall.

The allies would be victorious, he said, and he pointed out how the winter would weaken the Germans and strengthen the allies, giving Kitchener an opportunity to muster his men from all parts of the British Empire. When we are preparing for Christmas next year the war will be over with the old flag flying victoriously in the breeze. The victory would sound the death knell of war.

"It is my conviction that the result of this war will be that Great Britain will lead upwards the Anglo-Saxon race and under its leadership, the great mother of Parliaments will be some day the Parliament of the federation of the world, the United States of America, the United States of Europe, the United States of Asia and of Africa, all the world, will be one empire, with one anthem, one flag."

It was Dr. Gordon's belief that the Anglo-Saxon race would be at the head of the world in this union.

UNCLE OF DR. FRANK PASSES

Failed to Rallv From Effects to Paralytic Stroke

Dr. Frederick Frank, uncle of Dr. R. W. Frank of this city and one of the pioneer residents of Orangeville and the Township of Caledon died yesterday at his home in Orangeville following a paralytic stroke on Sunday from which he never regained consciousness. Deceased was seventy-four years of age and resided at Orangeville over forty-five years, locating there on receiving his diploma as a dentist. He is survived by a widow, a son and a daughter, Dr. Fred C. Frank of Shelburne, and Miss Frank of the Faculty of the University of Saskatoon, Saskatoon. An elder surviving brother is Mr. Archibald Frank of Caledon.

The early history of Caledon is closely associated with the late Dr. Frank's immediate ancestors. His grandfather erected the first grist mill in the district between Toronto and Owen Sound about the year 1820 at Belfountain.

The funeral will take place at Orangeville on Friday. Dr. R. W. Frank of this city will be in attendance.

SOME TROUBLE IN IRELAND

Six Pro-German Papers Are Active

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Irish despatches received yesterday morning tell of a most extraordinary situation which has arisen in Ireland, a situation which will need strong action on the part of the authorities. It appears that six seditious newspapers, openly pro-German and anti-British, are being printed in Dublin and distributed throughout west Ireland with the primary object of stifling the recruiting campaign which is now being carried on there. The news sheets in question are The Irish Worker, Larkins' papers, The Sin Fein Irish Freedom National Volunteer and Irish Nation and Ireland. The last has recently been made a daily production.

Last week a prominent German organ gave serious quotations from these newspapers and also gave an address in Dublin at which arms could be bought by Irish rebels. This journal also stated that money was being collected in New York to support the movement. Public meetings have been held recently in New York by Irish-Americans, who are hostile to John Redmond, and at these meetings a number of Germans attended and Die Wacht Am Rhein was sung.

Larkin has now gone to the States to lecture against the British Government.

Overstocked.

Hubby was evidently worried and wifey was trying to cheer him up.

"Cheer up, John, and don't worry," she said. "It doesn't do any good to borrow trouble."

"Borrow trouble," echoed her husband. "Great Caesar's ghost! I ain't borrowing trouble; I've got it to lend!"

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Norwood, Nov. 25. — The Epworth League of the Methodist Church spent a social evening on Monday of this week with the young people of the Presbyterian church.

Next Sunday morning the members of the Norwood home guard will attend Divine service in the Methodist church. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Irwin, will preach.

An "at home," consisting of dancing, progressive euchre and other games, will be given by Rev. Father Galvin and members of his congregation next Wednesday evening at the town hall.

The annual high school "at home" will be held in the town hall on December 7th. Some of the best talent procurable is being secured, and a real good programme will be given.

Miss Lula Buck and Miss Mabel Laing were in Peterboro on Monday of this wek.

Messrs. E. B. Laing and Earl Cumming spent Saturday afternoon and evening of last week visiting friends in Hastings.

Messrs. R. Martin, A. Kemp and N. William took advantage of the ideal conditions of Monday morning for a fox hunt, and sallied forth bright and early with a bevy of four hounds, and were successful in bringing to earth and subsequently to Norwood a fine specimen of that wily animal named Reynard.

The farmers of the surrounding county report that foxes are very numerous this fall, and as a consequence many good runs are anticipated by our local hunters.

The ice on the pond is of such a thickness that many of the more venturesome youths of the village are enjoying skating and hockey.

While the apple crop in this vicinity was very light this year, Norwood citizens have been able to procure choice fruit at from $1.50 to $2 per barrel, the fruit having been brought in from the vicinity of Warkworth, where the crop was very plentiful.

Miss Jean Roxburgh is visiting friends in Hastings this week.

Mr. William Webster is seriously ill at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendren of Lakefield visited friends in Norwood on Monday of this week.

Several of our local fowl fanciers who are aspiring to high honors in the chicken line are contemplating exhibiting some of their best birds at the Guelph Winter Show. Messrs. W. E. Parkinson and Stanley Hendren have a few silver campines that should make the top-notchers sit up and take notice. Mr. H. W. Nicol has a few white wyandottes and white leghorns that should have a look-in at the money end of any show. We wish the boys a good measure of success in their worthy aspirations.

The Finlay factory is working on a nine-hour long-time schedule, commencing this week. The whistle blows at 7.30 and 5.30. This time will likely be followed through the winter months.

Mr. Fred Cumming, an old Norwood boy, son of Mr. Ira Cumming, arrived home Monday evening of this week after an absence of over two years. Fred has been holding down a good job in Kamloops, B. C., but things are quiet in the coastal province and Fred thought he would surprise his people here by popping in unexpectedly.

The Czar as a Bookworm

The Kaiser has always prided himself on his attainments. He has given his friends the impression that he was a great soldier, and a great sailor, that he could write poetry and compose music, and that some of his paintings deserved to hang in the Berlin salon. As a matter of fact he has not the intellectual attainments of the Czar, who has called himself the bookworm of Europe. Though narrow in his sympathies, the Russian Emperor is a wonderfully well-read man. His Asiatic tour instilled in him a love for Indian history.

The Czarina, though admired for her cold statuesque beauty, has been as much a mystery as her husband. She has been described as an Empress who, for all the emotion she shows, might have been carved out of marble; he, as a religious exalte. This impression of the Czarina is a false one. In the company of her children she is revealed as an affectionate, warm-hearted woman; away from the nursery she seems to hide her real qualities. Once the Empress was asked what recreation she liked best. She replied, "A poem well read and aloud. Poetry calms the soul and makes it strong."

Avoid Ptomaine Poisoning

To avoid danger in tinned fruits, after opening the tin, pour all the liquid into a saucepan and add a tablespoonful of castor sugar. Bring to the boil; then put in the fruit, and let it get cold in the syrup. It is then ready for use. By this process the danger of any tin flavor, etc., is destroyed, and it does not spoil the taste of the fruit.

TELL-TALE TELEPHONES

Modern science has added a new terror to the lives of office employes. The Turner loud-speaking telephone might well be termed "The Invisible Boss." Should Miss Smith, of the shipping department, ring up young Mr. Robinson, the salesman, and arrange a little dinner in Soho and a visit to the theatre, there is no knowing, with this new telephone, whether their employer himself is not listening.

There is no need to take the receiver off its handle or do any work at all. The employer merely presses a button, lolls back in his armchair, and a small box on his desk begins to retail the gossip of the establishment in a high-pitched, ventriloquial voice.

There is no possibility of making a mistake. The tones of the speaker are perfectly recognizable, and even the noisiest typewriter cannot drown the stentorian bellow of conversation that issues whenever any of the office lines are in use.

The employer's conversations, on the other hand, cannot be overheard by others.

The principle of the invention is very similar to that of the dictograph. In fact, Mr. Turner invented both instruments. The transmitter depends for its extraordinary clearness on a special microphone, which uses minute hollow balls of carbon in place of the usual graphite crystals. The receiver is connected with a sound-box similar to that used in gramophones. The combination of the two instruments and a special system of wiring produce one of the most efficient of modern inter-communication sets.

An Impossible Conjecture. ....

Some time ago a man was visiting the home of his youth and while passing down the main street chanced to meet a person he had known in days agone. Instantly they clutched hands, and in few minutes the reminiscent game was in full swing.

"And there was Aunt Hannah," said the visitor, asking about the old inhabitants. "How about her?"

"I thought you might have heard," answered the resident. "We buried her last year."

"Buried her!" exclaimed the visitor in a surprised tone. "Do you mean to say that she is dead?"

"Why, yes," returned the resident, wondering. "If you remember Aunt Hannah you can easily remember what a swell time we would have in burying her alive.

PASSENGER ON OLYMPIC TELLS GRAPHIC STORY OF AUDACIOUS DISASTER

Giant Liner Was in Grave Danger, and Escaped Mine by One Hundred Feet

MOMENTS OF SUSPENSE

The St. Catharines Standard publishes an interesting letter, bearing on the disaster to the British warship Audacious. The letter was received by Mr. J. A. McSloy, of St. Catharines, and written by Mrs. McSloy, who was a passenger on the liner Olympic, which went to the assistance of the Audacious.

The letter follows:—

Yesterday I cabled you my arrival in London. Just two whole weeks to come, and such a trip! I shall never forget if I live to be a thousand. I don't suppose anyone travelling will ever have the close call we had, and get through.

Well, to begin, we left New York, as you know, in brilliant sunshine, and delighful weather, but the second night out we were obliged to change our route the passengers never knew why). Then began very high winds and awful seas. I have been out in some rough weather, but never anything like this crossing. Of course, there was no freight to speak of, and so we rolled and rolled, day after day, and night after night. One time we rolled so badly towards five in the morning, we thought she would never right herself again.

Warned of Mines.

From about midway over we had been getting warnings about mines, and to go to Ireland, not Scotland. So we were proceeding, when one morning we got a call for assistance. We again changed our route, and rushed to give assistance. It was from the battleship "Audacious," of the B. class, an immense dreadnought. She and five others had been out having a gun-firing practice, when this one struck a mine. The other four flew, as they have orders now not to stand by, since the loss of those last battleships. When we arrived, she was all awash astern, and the hundreds of men were huddled amidships and forward.

I thought our crew would never get our boats out in time, before she would go down. It was something awful. Then when we did get our boats down, the sea was so awful they had to come back for oil, to pour on the surf. Ever so many boats capsized, and dozens and dozens of men struggled for ages in the water. We all threw life-buoys to them. We seven women of the first cabin were asked to collect them from the first cabin, as we hadn't enough at hand. Every man who went in the rescue boats had his tied on, and piles of them in the bottom when the boats would reach alongside of the dreadnought.

Splendid Discipline.

The struggle to get the men to safety was too harrowing. I must say, I never saw such discipline in my life, and that was their salvation. We finally got them all landed and only one fatality, one poor chap a "petty officer" got crushed between the ship and the life-boat, and was killed outright. They brought his body on board, and he was buried that same night. Several were badly bruised, and nearly all, with the exception of the senior officers, were half naked. Between the steward and men passengers, they got enough to cover them. Next day they were taken by several torpedo destroyers 800 in all.

We stood by the ship, working as hard as men could work from half past nine in the morning till six p.m. The Liverpool, a huge cruiser several torpedo destroyers, minesweepers and colliers were also standing by, but could give no assistance. At six the Admiralty ordered us on as they expected an explosion any moment. So we left. We hadn't gone more than seventeen miles when we had a great shock. The steamer shivered and rolled, and everyone flew to the upper deck. We had escaped a mine by one hundred feet but the wash from us exploded it. I shall never forget the sensation; we looked at one another. Not a word was spoken, but everyone thought their time had come. It was awful but, thank God, the agony was short lived. Full steam was put on, and we flew for a few minutes; then stopped to see if we were really damaged, but nothing could be seen.

Followed Mine Sweeper.

The next thing was a warning not to proceed further until ordered; so we waited several hours, and a mine sweeper came along, and ordered us to follow—just creeping along, and finaly we got inside Lock Swilley where I cabled you, fearing you might hear bad news, which wasn't true. One thing, we had to abandon our boats, as the surf was running so high. So about thirty boats marked "Olympic" are drifting about the Atlantic somewhere.

A Hard Meal to Digest

Is Quickly Digested by the Taking of A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After It Is Over.

Corn on the cob is hard to digest for some folk, but with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet it readily is disposed of by the stomach and digestive apparatus.

Don't drug your stomach. Give it just what it needs at the very moment it needs it. Here is the way a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet acts:

He—"I can eat corn now and feel O.K. A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet will quickly digest it."

One takes a tablet just after the meal is completed. It is taken into the mouth like food; is mixed with the saliva; swallowed moist and partially dissolved. It goes into the stomach and is there mixed with the stomach juices which are composed of acids and alkalies.

A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet re-inforces these juices. It quickly digests the elements which such weakened juices cannot digest.

After a while the stomach passes the meal partially digested to the intestines, where it goes through another stage of digestion. Here, as in the stomach, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets strengthen the juices of digestion and complete the work of giving the body the benefit of the meal.

There is nothing harmful in these tableth. Only natural ingredients which the body lacks are supplied. In a short time the blood and digestive juices are given the power they lack. Man can digest any food without injury and the entire health of the body is increased. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold wherever drugs are sold, price 50 cents a box. Anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

Peculiarities of Flight.

If a man falls out of a rising aeroplane or balloon he will not go towards the earth, but will continue rising into the air for an appreciable time. If the air-machine were stopped in its ascent at the time it could catch the man as be came down. If the airship were ascending at the rate of 32 feet a second the man would rise 16 feet before beginning to fall towards the earth. Thus, by reducing the speed of its ascent, the vessel might keep by the side of the man and rescue him.

The reason why the man rises is the same as the reason for a bullet's rising when shot from a gun into the air—both the man and the bullet are given a velocity upwards, and it takes some time for gravity to negative that velocity.—Glasgow News.

GERMANS MAKING LAST DESPERATE ATTACK TO TAKE TOWN OF YPRES

Attacks Supported by Heaviest Guns Yet Used Have Been Going on For Forty-Eight Hours, But Every Onslaught Has Been Repulsed.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Intense anxiety is again apparent in Belgium and Northern France and the Kaiser's legions reinforced and heavily armed with big guns are making another desperate plunge to break through to the coast.

The London Standard prints the following from its correspondent in Northern France:—

"The combined French and British armies have been attacked by the Germans in force from Ypres to La Bassee, and a battle on the scale of the battles on the Marne, of the Yser, and of the first and second battles of Ypres, has commenced.

"In this terrific struggle, into which the Germans enter with large reinforcements and fresh guns, the French and British armies are acting directly in concert. Already the fight has been in progress forty-eight hours. The mightiest guns in the world's military history have been brought into action, carrying death and destruction for fifteen to eighteen miles from their emplacements. Under cover of those infantry attacks are being developed.

"The German objective is the town of Ypres, to capture which they have sacrificed thousands of lives under fire of the British during the last month. Their guns are battering the town once more. Everywhere along the line I hear that the allies have succeeded in checking all the enemy's assaults, which were allowed to exhaust themselves, so that a fresh and significant phase of the battle has opened a phase in which the whole line of the German trenches are threatened by British and French infantry."

Advices from Paris state that the determined efforts of Germany to turn the left wing of the allied armies, or to penetrate it at Ypres to clear a roadway to Dunkirk, have resulted in failure. In a summary of the operations of the last six weeks, The Bulletin Des Armes estimates the Kaiser's forces in Belgium at 15 army corps, or 750,000 men; declares that the German troops were ordered to capture Ypres by Nov. 1, so that the annexation of Belgium might be proclaimed on that date. The Bulletin further tells of orders issued by the Crown Prince of Bavaria and Duke Albrecht of Wurtemburg, exhorting the soldiers to win success for their emperor, who would be at the battle front to "animate" them.

French troops on Monday defeated the Germans in the Argonne district and captured ground of strategical value, hitherto held by the invaders.

The following official communication was issued last night:—

"To-day has been relatively quiet.

"There has been intermittent cannonading on the front, and a few attacks in the Argonne, all of which have been repulsed.

"Speaking generally, it may be said that the situation during Nov. 23 showed no important changes. Along the greater part of the front the enemy manifested its activity particularly by intermittent cannonade, which was, however, less spirited than on the preceding day. Neverthe less, there were here and there some infantry attacks, all of which were repulsed. As we have come to expect, these attacks were particularly violent in the Argonne, where we gained some territory, and in the region of Four de Paris.

"There is nothing to report between the Argonne and the Vosges, and, furthermore, a heavy fog has interfered with operations. The sanitary conditions of the troops are favorable."

The British Admiralty last night announced that on Monday all points of military significance in Zeebrugge were subjected to a severe bombardment by two British battleships. The German opposition was feeble. The extent of the damage done is unknown. The British ships returned safely.

Advices from Amsterdam say that before sunset the electric works were fiercely burning and also the Palace Hotel and other buildings. The church steeple at Heiht was damaged, and it is reported that the sluices at Zeebrugge were destroyed. The German firing suddenly stopped, and the German submarines left the port. After some manoeuvring the British fleet disappeared in the fog. Part of Zeebrugge was burning, and the population had fled in all directions."

FOE ADMITS REVERSE IN BATTLE WITH RUSSIANS

Germans Said to Have Fallen Back Twenty-Five Miles in Some Places.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A severe German defeat in Poland is reported from Petrograd. Gen. von Hindenburg, after having pushed back the Russians almost on Warsaw, is said to have suffered a serious reverse when the enemy, which had been strongly reinforced, made a brilliant stand between the Warte and the Vistula rivers.

Von Hindenburg's army of 400,000 men is said to have been badly cut up and thousands of prisoners are reported to have been taken by the Russians who are now in pursuit.

German reinforcements, however, are arriving, and another great battle is likely to develop on a line nearer the frontier, westnorthwest of Lodz.

Official German statements admit the defeat, but say there has been no final result in the fighting west of Warsaw. Additional information given to the press in Berlin, says the Austrians have abandoned several passes in the Carpathians to superior hostile forces.

The latest reports of Germans reverses come from Russian Poland along the River Bzura. Desperation, wherein strategy was thrown to the wind, appears to have characterised the German campaign in this district, the army commanders acting under the Kaiser's orders that for its moral effect on the campaign, in Belgium, a victory must be achieved at any cost. In spite of their frightful sacrifices of men at the Bzura, the Germans were unable to break through the Russian line and they are now in full retreat from their advance positions between Strykow, Zogierz and Wola Wizinki retiring toward the River Warte.

The Russian army of Grand Duke Nicholas, now undoubtedly holds the advantage in Poland. For the moment the German forces of Gen. von Hindenburg which struck boldly at Warsaw, for a second time are put on the defensive.

In some places the Germans are said to have fallen back 25 miles.

Last week Berlin declared the greatest hope of the eastern campaign was placed on the outcome of the battle about Lodz. The German forces there, however, failed to push forward on a line with those which had advanced to the Russian defences between Lowica and Skierniewice. This necessitated the lengthening of the entire line extending to the southwest to protect the German flank and line communication.

The Russians have gained a decisive victory on the front from Plock to Ilezyca, and the Germans, after heavy losses, are fleeing to the Prussian frontier, says a special from Petrograd to The Matin.

GENERAL VON HINDENBURG.

An official report issued in Petrograd last night says there have been continued Russian successes on the Czenstochowa-Cracow front, where on Nov. 22 the Russians took 6,000 prisoners.

The following official statement was given out from Berlin by wireless last night:—

"While an eventual victory for the Teutonic allies in the eastern theatre of the war is expected as confidently as ever, official reports from the German and Austrian military headquarters make it appear that a decision will not be reached as soon as had been expected. The final result has been delayed by the advance of new Russian forces from Warsaw.

"The Austrians announce that they have abandoned to superior hostile forces several passes in the Carpathians. The Russian troops which are investing Przemysl have been driven back by a sortie, and are not within range of the cannon of the forts."

Canada's Finest.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25. — The Northwest Mounted Police, who have been refused permission to go to the front, because their services are required to keep order among the 175,000 aliens in the northwest, have responded with a decision to give one day's pay per month until the war is over. The pay of the ordinary constables is only $1 per day. This splendid contribution means about $1,500 per month.

GAVE ADDRESS ON MODERN GERMANY

School Inspector Mowat Speaks to C.L.A. Society

The lecture hall of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church was well filled last night to hear Inspector A. Mowat address the literary department of the C.L.A. Society on the subject "Modern Germany."

Mr. Mowat gave an introductory survey of the history of Germany, pointing out the main features of its development before Bismarck welded the different jealous German states into one strong nation or Empire. To understand modern Germany it was necessary to know something of its past. Germans overthrew the Roman Empire and a German, Charlemagne, built up a second Roman or world empire. Frederick the Great fought France and Marie Theresa of Austria and succeeded in acquiring Silesia. Bismarck fought Austria and France and succeeded in uniting the people and adding Alsace and Lorraine to Germany. Then manufactures and trade have wonderfully increased as well as population. German life is flowing onward and world power is her ideal.

For modern Germany Mr. Mowat gave an explanation of Price Collier's book "Germany and the Germans." The author, a highly educated American writes with the American point of view and is very suggestive and interesting in his criticism. He holds that Germany is not the place to look for the solution of the social and economic problems of the age. He holds that Germany's growth has not been a healthy growth but a forced growth. He describes the life of Bismarck, German politics, German cities and municipal government, German women, the German army. He points out that Berlin is the most immoral city in the world and that the Germans are spiritually and morally in a decadent state. The school children are taught that England is Germany's enemy. Mr. Mowat read several passages in conclusion which formed a fitting close to his instructive and interesting address.

PATRIOTIC ASS'N IN OTONABEE

To the Members,

Otonabee Patriotic Association:

I am instructed by Mr. H. Prudhomme, 59 St. Peter street, Montreal, to thank all who contributed and helped with the splendid donations which were sent from Indian River, Keene and Peterborough for Belgian relief.

It is not advisable to ship any more foodstuffs of a perishable nature at this season of the year, but all donations of money, imperishable foods, or clothing are very acceptable.

The central committee for Otonabee will be at the town hall, Keene, every Wednesday to receive all gifts of clothing. Men's, women's and children's new or old underclothing, shoes and blankets will be very acceptable, since lack of these is felt more than other garments. All clothing will go forward as soon as received.

Considerable money is now required to carry on the work that is now under way, and all contributions, large or small, will be very acceptable. Mr. John Moore, Keene, is the treasurer for the township organization.

The German Bands In Great Britain

At this time, when so much attention has been drawn to the German system of espionage, many of your readers will remember the remarkable influx of German bands all over Britain, generally consisting of from four to six pieces, and although in some cases these men collected money enough to pay expenses, even when the reverse was the case they appeared well supplied with means. From 1880 to 1890, when the German rulers started in really to make their navy exceed the two-power standard, the spy system was at last taken serious notice of, and the obviously clumsy and patent to all the world "methods" gave way to the later almost occult and far-seeing organization, which spreads all over the British Empire, specially, to prepare for "The Day." About the time of Britain's awakening to the fact of the German menace Germans became the butt of music hall songs and quips generally. The following song was produced in the '80's by George Grossmith:

"The German Fatherland."

The Germans are a noble race,
And of that race I'll sing,
They love their pa's and adore their ma's,
And they idolize their king.
And these frugal folk are a happy folk,
And their life is one long song,
Praising the Fatherland, the happy
Fatherland,
Which they do the whole day long.

From day to day and year to year
They manufacture wine;
You see the growing vineyards
As you journey up the Rhine.
I've tasted every country's wine,
But of all the wines I've tried,
That of the Fatherland, the happy
Fatherland,
Gives the greatest pain inside.

Their music, ah! their music,
Of the future it will be,
They like it good, they like it loud,
And minus melody.
They won't permit loud, vulgar tune,
For nothing could be "wus,"
That's why the Fatherland, the happy
Fatherland,
Send their German bands to us.

They all adore, as I said before,
Their country and their king;
In business they are very cute,
A most important thing.
So they come to us, and they succeed
so well
That they settle on our shore,
That's why the Fatherland, the happy
Fatherland,
Never sees them any more.

TO EXHUME HIS BODY

French-Canadian Will be Buried in Protestant Cemetery

MONTREAL, Nov. 25. — Justice Robideux handed out a judgment yesterday afternoon which provides for the exhumation of the body of the late Mr. Hormidas Lafond, of St. Scholastique, whose burial in a Catholic cemetery, against his own wish, created a sensation some months ago. The deceased was a French-Canadian Protestant, and was treasurer of the Belle Riviere Presbyterian Church. Although he has arranged that he should be buried in a Protestant cemetery, some relatives insisted that he be buried in the Catholic cemetery.

The judgment now determines that the body be exhumed and reburied in the Belle Riviere Church cemetery.

DEPUTATION IS MODEST

Manufacturers and Farmers Wait on the Ontario Government

BETTER HIGHWAYS

Also Government Bank Which Would Lend Postal Savings

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The demand of the western grain growers for redress of grievances was presented to the Prime Minister and a number of his colleagues yesterday afternoon by E. G. Henderson, of Windsor, Ont., president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. He explained that a committee of the C. M. A. had recently conferred with representatives of the western farmers at Winnipeg and while there were some points in dispute between them, they agreed upon a printed memorial to the Government. The memorial set forth the need of legislation dealing with the financial situation, the tariff and the transportation problem.

As to transportation he confined his remarks exclusively to the necessity for better highways, alleging that it cost the English farmer but 7 cents per ten miles to transport his products to the railway station while it cost the Canadian farmer twenty-five cents.

The tariff was touched upon with the suggestion that, if in any respect it was unjust to the farmer, such injustice should be rectified. As to the financial question, the speaker said that the farmer should not be charged a higher rate of interest than any other producer.

Roderick MacKenzie, secretary of the Manitoba Grain Growers Association, insisted that the Government should also enquire into the transportation charges by rail and water including ocean freight rates. He favored a Government bank which would loan the postal savings and other Government funds to the farmer at six per cent. and quoted from the legislation of West Australia. It was unfair, he said, for the Government to receive deposits from the farmers at the postoffice and at the Government savings banks and then hand them over to the chartered banks to be loaned for commercial purposes.

Sir Robert Borden said the two associations had set a good example to all Canadians. He was glad to say that his Government was devoting a great deal of time and money to demonstration and educational work among the farmers, and still further expenditures would be authorized in the near future. It was not the fault of the present Government that nothing had been done to improve the highways of the country. They had been thwarted in their earnest efforts along those lines by the Dominion Senate.

The memorial, he said, asked for the appointment of a commission to enquire into vast and intricate problems and for legislation to be founded upon their report at the coming session. It was a large order and he could not at the moment give any definite answer.

As to the financial question, the Prime Minister said that he regretted the absence of the Finance Minister. It struck him, however, that the subject of agricultural credits was one to be dealt with by the various provinces instead of by the Dominion Government.

Roderick MacKenzie: If the provinces establish banks to extend agricultural credits, will your Government deposit with those banks the postal savings and other Government funds?

Sir Robert Borden: I cannot answer that question offhand.

EARL KITCHENER TAKES OVER HIDES

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, yesterday issued a decree reserving all the hides of full grown cattle for military purposes. A special company having charge of the leather business of the country is organized. All the tanneries will be operated in connection with this company, receiving their quotas of hides, which they are to tan for the army from it.

Convicts Sentenced.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Nov. 25.—Four escaped convicts from the Central Prison, M. J. Mulhall, E. Schiever, J. Edwards and J. Spence, who were arrested some time ago in Gravenhurst for housebreaking and theft, were yesterday sentenced by Judge Mahaffy to three years in Kingston Penitentiary. The prisoners will complete their terms in the Central before being sent to Kingston.

AIRMEN HEARD OF DIRIGIBLE

Made Raid to Destroy Germany's Latest Zeppelin

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 25.—Commander Briggs, the British aviator, wounded and captured by the Germans after the daring raid by the allies' aircraft on the Zeppelin plant on Lake Constance Saturday afternoon, was wounded in the temple and hand, it has been learned. The only damage officially admitted at Friedrichshafen as a result of the raid, is a smashed window. It is believed that the raid was made by the French and British aviators as a result of information received that the huge new dirigible which has been under construction there, under the personal supervision of Count Zeppelin, had been filled with gas preparatory to a trial trip.

Rigid precautions against spies have been initiated by the Germans to prevent knowledge of the modus operandi of the new Zeppelin becoming known among the allies, or to prevent damage to the machine.

ENVOY TO VATICAN

Britain Appoints Sir Henry Howard, Ambassador

ROME, Nov. 25. — The appointment of Sir Henry Howard as envoy from Britain to the Holy See was announced here yesterday. Great pleasure at this appointment was expressed at the Vatican, where it was said that it always had been regretted that Great Britain and the United States were not represented among the diplomatists accredited to the Pope.

A report from Paris some days ago said: In speculations regarding the reasons for Great Britain's present step it is pointed out that, while the enemies of Britain are represented at the Vatican by three envoys, those of Austria-Hungary and the kingdoms of Prussia and Bavaria, the allied countries are represented by only two, those of Belgium and Russia. France has not had an envoy at the Holy See since the separation act was passed in 1905.

Another point which is brought up as a possible explanation of the move is the political unrest in Ireland due to religious differences.

Bulgarians Prepare For War.

LONDON, Nov. 25—During the sitting of the Bulgarian Parliament yesterday, says a despatch to the Central News Agency from Sofia, the leaders of the Agrarian, National and Liberal parties delivered speeches in which they called for the formation of a genuine national ministry.

The deputies also urged the occupation by Bulgaria of Macedonia, which, it was argued, could be carried out in agreement with the triple entente powers. Austrian troops, said the speakers, were approaching the Bulgarian frontier, which it was feared they would cross with a view to co-operating with the Turks.

MOUNTED CORPS TO BE RAISED

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—It is expected that orders will be issued immediately for the recruiting of two regiments of mounted rifles in Alberta. These will be in addition to the new infantry regiments which are being recruited.

One of these regiments of mounted rifles will be from Calgary and the district north of it, the other will be from Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Fort Macleod districts. It is probable that Col. MacDonald of Calgary will command the Calgary Regiment, and that Col. Sissons will command the other.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—It is definitely ascertained that William H. K. Redmond, a member of Parliament and a brother of John Redmond, the leader of the Irish Nationalist party, has joined the army. He received a commission as captain last week.

In the days of the Irish land war, William Redmond was prominent in the protests against British rule, and served a number of short sentences in jail.

CHILEANS LOOK FOR NAVAL BASE

Germans Believed to Have Occupied Island off Chile

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 25.—The Chilean training ship Gen. Baquedano has been sent by the Government to the Juan Fernandes Islands to make an investigation into the charges that the Germans have established a base of operations on the Island of Mas a Fuera, one of this group.

The French consul here has lodged a protest with the Chilean Government that the French bark Valentine was sunk by the Germans within the territorial waters of this island.

There is considerable public feeling here on the assumption that the Germans have repeatedly violated the neutrality of Chile, and the Government has decided that it will take energetic measures to preserve its neutrality.

PORTUGUESE ARE FOR WAR

Agreement With Britain Meets With Approval

LISBON, Nov. 25. — At an extraordinary sitting of the Congress yesterday to discuss Portugal's attitude in the war Senor Machado, the Premier, said he had entered into an agreement with the British Government to render, besides other services, military aid. The Ministerial motion presented was unanimously carried. It authorized the executive to intervene by military measures in the international conflict at a time and in a manner good judgment found necessary "for our high interests and our duties as a free nation and Great Britain's ally," also to take any extraordinary steps the circumstances may demand.

CARDINAL CAVALLARI DEAD.

Patriarch of Venice Was Born at Chiogga, Italy, In 1849.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Venice says that Cardinal Aristides Cavallari, patriarch of Venice, died yesterday.

Cardinal Cavallari was born at Chiogga in 1849, and was raised to the cardinalate in 1907. He was noted for his simple piety. On various occasions he expressed himself volubly against the immodest dress of women and once is said to have stopped a church service in order to make a woman worshipper cover her open work shirtwaist.

In January of this year he issued an episcopal letter strongly condemning the tango dance, declaring that only "those persons who have lost all moral sense can endure it." He ordered all the ecclesiastics to deny absolution to those who having danced the tango, did not promise to discontinue the practice.

A South African Heroine.

One of the most interesting of women workers in the cause of the war is Lady Sarah Wilson, who has been appealing for funds in Britain, to organize a base hospital on the Continent for British, French, and Belgian soldiers. No one understands the hardships and horrors of war better than Lady Sarah Wilson. She had ample experience of it in the Transvaal, being shut up in Mafeking during the siege. She was actually captured by the Boers as a spy, being exchanged some time after for Gen. Viljoen.

Liquid Measure.

Jim Snedecor had been elected justice of the peace, and he judged that his office required a silk hat. The only one in town was the parson's, and before he went up to the city Jim borrowed it one afternoon to get a notion of his size. It fitted him. In the city store he told the clerk that he aimed to get a silk hat.

"What size, sir?" asked the clerk.

"Well," said Jim, "you'd better gimme the three quart size, young man."

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Assertions that the inadequacy of the number of vessels available for exports had become so apparent that steps were being taken to obtain government aid in the acquisition of vessels, had a bearish influence today on wheat. After an early advance, the market closed weak at ⅝c to ¼c under last night. Corn suffered a net loss of ⅜c to ⅞c, and oats of ⅛c. In provisions the outcome varied from 32½c decline to a rise of 2½c.

FRED WELSH WINS AGAIN

Lightweight Champion Added Another to Long List

Boston, Nov. 25.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion, defeated Fred Yelle of Taunton last night in a 12-round bout. The Taunton boy had a slight lead of the champion in the second round, and in the sixth also was generally accorded a little advantage. But after the seventh session the result was not in doubt.

Twice in the eighth round Yelle was floored by stiff rights to the jaw, and each time he took a count of eight. Although Yelle continued to exchange blows during the later rounds he never recovered effectiveness, while Welsh was strong to the finish.

ASSIGNED BY RUMOR.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Announcement of the signing of several players from the ranks of organised baseball is expected when the Federal League meets here Saturday. The following have been assigned by rumor to the Federal League for next season: Lee Magee, of the St. Louis Cardinals; Ed. Konetchy, of the Pirates; Eddie Plank, of the Athletics; Wm. Fisher, of the Brooklyn Dodgers; Hans Lobert, of the Phillies; Tillie Shafer, formerly of the Giants; and Babe Borton, of the Venice, Cal., Coast Leaguers.

HAMILTON ROWING CLUB CHAMPIONS OF ONTARIO RUGBY FOOTBALL UNION

Owing to Non-appearance of Bush, The Game Between T.R. and A.A. and St. Pats Was Thrown Out— Investigation Laid Over

Toronto, Nov. 25.—Hamilton Rowing Club are champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union. Such was the decision of the O.R.F.U. Executive at their third session last night. The motion, which declared Hamilton R. C. champions, and which was carried, read: That, owing to the non-appearance of Bush of the Ottawa St. Patrick's to prove his innocence if he could, the game between Toronto R. and A. A. and St. Patrick's in Ottawa on November 14, be thrown out, and the investigation of the Bush charges be left over till a later date, preferably the annual meeting, and that the championship be awarded to Hamilton R.C. This motion was moved by W. J. Ryan and seconded by J. Little.

At last night's meeting Hiam was called before the Executive to answer the charges, which he did. He said that his real name is Hiam, that he played on the Toronto R. and A. A. team under the name of "Vivian" for family reasons. He denied that he had ever played for Salford and that he had ever signed a professional contract.

In regard to the rough play in the Hamilton R.C.-Toronto R. and A. A. game at Hamilton, the Union censured Hayes and McKelvey of the Hamilton team for their actions. Hamilton R.C. had already taken action against Hayes, but the Executive felt that something must be done to put a stop to rough play, and that, even though the club had taken action, the Union should not overlook the matter.

For the final game for the junior title, which will take place on Saturday, the question of grounds was left in the hands of the competing teams. A request from Dundas was presented to the meeting by a member of the Executive that if Dundas and Western University are the teams in the final, the game be played at Hamilton A. A. A. ground, the expenses, if gate-receipts did not cover them, to be borne by Dundas. The Executive decided to leave it to the teams.

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, will be the scene of a great battle next Saturday. Army and Navy meets on the gridiron and on the season's showing army should win.

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE ACTION of the O.R.F.U. in throwing out the T.R. and A.A. protest deserves commendation. The union has foiled what one writer calls a "barefaced attempt to deprive a champion team in the committee room of an honor won on the field," and it is through such rulings that the union can re-establish itself as the fostering influence of rugby throughout Ontario. Should the organization keep clear of policies such as near wrecked it a year ago it will undoubtedly again meet with favor in the public eye.

$50,000 IS THE tidy sum champion Freddie Welsh will have earned after his bout with Young Shugrue at New York on December 2nd. Strange to note he will have earned it all inside of five weeks. This is a remarkable feat for a champion and never was equalled by a title-holder. Welsh has met all comers such as Matty Baldwin, Ad. Wolgast, Charley White and Jimmy Duffy. Last night at Boston he disposed of Fred Yelle and tomorrow night hooks up with Young Brown at Syracuse.

PACKEY McFARLAND is again in good standing in th boxing world and has announced that he is willing to go back to the old vocation. It will be remembered that the Packey was suspended a year ago for alleged "laying down" in a bout at Milwaukee. If Freddie Welsh and McFarland are matched the greatest lightweight fight in history will be staged.

BROCKVILLE will be represented by James George and Paddy Sullivan in Cobalt this winter. Must be a nice inducement in the northern clime.

ERNIE RUSSELL, the former Wanderer forward has been elected vice-president of the Wanderer Club to succeed Art Ross. "Dicky" Boon will manage the Montrealers again.

TORONTO FANS are expecting the Argos to win over the Tigers on Saturday. Although playing on foreign territory to Hamilton teams look good.

"HOBEY" BAKER, considered the best hockey player south of the 49th line will play for the St. Nicholas' seven of New York this winter.

IT APPEARS as though the northern League is making a raid on the O.H.A. as the Feds did on organized ball.

GUY NICHOLLS, coach of the Yale University crews has left for England to enlist.

THE SARNIA Intermediates are practicing on the ice on Sarnia Bay.

YALE MATERIAL APLENTY.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 25. — Sixty men yesterday answered Capt. Sweeney's call for candidates for the Yale hockey team. The squad is an exceptionally large one. Coach Field, who will have charge of the work, will take up his regular duties Monday. Capt. Sweeney will be unable to play in the first games from present indications because of a sprained ankle.

DETROIT ON ICE.

Detroit, Nov. 25. — Detroit will have an independent hockey team again this season, playing exhibition games with Cleveland and Canadian teams. Most of the players who formerly wore the Detroit colors are now either out of the game or have left the city. "Chief" Jones, formerly goalkeeper of the Portage Lake team, champions of the old International League, will coach the Detroit seven.

INTERMEDIATE GAMES.

The draw for the Dominion intermediate championship brings the Quebec winners to the Interprovincial winners' grounds, and the semi-final will be between Ottawa and Tiger seconds at Hamilton on Saturday.

The winners of Saturday's game will play St. Michael's College in Toronto the following week.

I ramble along in the journey of life.
My eyes sweep the landscape with pleasure immense;
I shy at a place where there's worry or strife.
In this, I am sure you'll admit, I have sense.

I stroll where a warble breaks out on the air;
I amble around where I see a faint smile;
I circle about when the weather is fair,
Because I am looking for what is worth while.

To get what is coming is all that I ask,
And nothing is coming that's horrid or bad.
I rather rejoice in a leisurely task,
But hate like the deuce to be morbid or sad.

The years may advance as they always have done
Since Time with his scythe his first cycle began.
I know that ere long my short race will be run,
But want to remember in sunshine I ran.

I want to remember dull care passed me by
Because I, more wary, got sight of her first;
To know that when thirsty I drank with a sigh
And sighed once again and was glad of the thirst.

By strategy distancing trouble a mile.
Disturbance and worry and sickness I flout
And sidestep them all for a thing that's worth while.

Miss Dorothy Hall gave a bridge on Tuesday afternoon in honour of Miss Lundy, who leaves Peterborough next week, to spend the winter months in a warmer climate.

Mrs. Harry Thompson entertained informally on Saturday evening in honor of her visitor, Mrs. Kennedy of Buffalo.

Mrs. Thompson also received for the first time in her new home on Belmont Street on Tuesday afternoon. Her mother, Mrs. McBain, poured coffee, assisted by Miss Jennie Hall, Miss Neill, Miss Crossett and Miss Robiha Cummings.

A meeting of the Executive of the Women's Art Association was held on Monday evening in the studio, to make final arrangement for Professor Squair's lecture, to be held on Friday evening, December 4th, in the Collegiate Assembly hall.

This lecture which will deal with the cathedrals and works of art on the continent, recently destroyed in the war, will be of great interest and should command a large audience.

A meeting of all the business girls in Peterborough is called for this evening at 8 o'clock at the Peterborough Typewriter Agency and it is hoped that as many girls as possible will be present. The meeting has been called to discuss the feasibility of providing some little Christmas cheer for those children, whose parents will be unable to do much for them, owing to lack of work this year. We feel sure that all the business girls in town will be only too eager to help along this cause.

Miss Cora Thompson's mother, of Bobcaygeon, who is at present visiting Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Charlotte street, is in receipt of a letter from her daughter, who is likely by now on the battlefields of France doing Red Cross work.

In part it says: We are just now out ten hours from New York, and we were stopped by a British cruiser, but only for a few minutes. No lights are visible at night, and portholes are all covered. The nurse in charge comes from Hamilton, and was through the Spanish-American and Boer wars.

Amongst the nurses there are four who graduated from St. Luke's, New York, which is the same hospital at which the writer and her friend graduated. She spoke very highly of the time she was having, and expected to dock at Liverpool, and go from there to France.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary of the Y.W.C.A. was held on Monday afternoon. This meeting was called for the purpose of handing in the money recently collected by the members of the Auxiliary who have been aiming to collect a mile of pennies. The total amount raised was over $150, but whether this, if divided into coppers, would reach a mile, we will leave to some of our more mathematical friends to decide. In any case the result must be most gratifying to the Girls' Auxiliary. Amongst those present at this meeting were Miss Jennie Hall, President; Miss Florence Scott, Secretary; Miss Ruby Cunningham, Treasurer; Miss Wilson, Miss Madelaine Morrison, Miss Dela Fosse, Miss Phyllis Denne, Miss Ruby Clegg, and a number of others. After the business was concluded, Miss Peacock kindly entertained all those present with afternoon tea.

The arrangements for the bridge on Friday afternoon are progressing very satisfactorily. This bridge is to be held in the Oddfellows' Hall over Madill's drug store and not in the armouries as last year. Those who wish to attend are asked to look for the large flag which will be hung over the entrance on George Street, which might be taken to apply to an "auction" bridge as well as other kind of auctions. It is expected that there will be between sixty and seventy tables. In addition to the tickets for those who wish to play in the afternoon, the committee are selling tickets for the tea afterwards and any who wish for these tickets may obtain them from any member of the committee. It is hoped that a large sum will be raised by this affair, as the intention is to provide a box of Christmas gifts and letter comforts to every man in camp at Kingston from Peterborough. These boxes are to be addressed to each man and to be delivered on Christmas morning.

With its spacious rooms gaily decorated with flags, red carnations, ferns, red candles and cheery grate fires, the beautiful home of Mrs. T. J. Grady, 583 Water street, was thrown open Monday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the Canadian Kitchener League. Mrs. Grady received dressed in black silk, wearing a corsage bouquet of red roses, and so charmingly hospitable was she that many of the ladies attending in the afternoon returned in the evening, accompanied by their husbands. Patriotic music, beautifully rendered from pianos in either drawing-room, delighted the guests. The tea room presented a charming picture with its bevy of prettily dressed, sweet-faced college girls, who daintily served the dainty refreshments. The proceeds of the tea, which go to the Canadian Kitchener Club, who are sending so much warm clothing to our soldier boys, amounted to over $30. The tea and coffee, which was donated by Mr. John, was pronounced excellent. The thanks of the ladies are due to all who in any way assisted in making it such a success.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS DANCE.

The Knights of Columbus' At Home held last evening in their spacious quarters on Simcoe St. was one of the most prominent informal functions held this season. An exceedingly large number was present, including many visitors from other councils. The cards were enjoyed downstairs while the dancing was held on the glass tile floor in the assembly hall. Miss Marguerite McDonald again won favor by her rendition of dance music, her medley of patriotic airs was encored several times. Dainty refreshments were served.

The main committee was composed of Dr. F. P. McNulty, chairman and W. A. Haslam, secretary. The patronesses were Mrs. B. Morrow, Mrs. J. V. Gallivan, Mrs. F. F. Garden, Mrs. F. McGrath, Mrs. R. Sheehy, Mrs. D. O'Connell, Mrs. F. A. Shannon, and Mrs. W. A. Haslam.

The clergy in attendance were His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Very Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. C. J. Phelan, Rev. J. V. McAuley and Rev. Father Cote.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY'S WORK

Sheriff Hall Elected President of Local Branch

Another large audience heard Rev. W. E. Hassard speak last night in St. Paul's Church, on the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Nearly all members of the Peterborough branch of the society were present. Rev. Mr. Hassard directed their attention to the valuable work the society is accomplishing in educating foreigners to love and revere the Bible.

Among the first things an immigrant receives on landing in Canada is a Testament written in English with foreign translations opposite it.

Rev. Mr. Hassard went thoroughly into the work of the society, giving his audience considerable statistical matter.

Rev. Mr. Pogue occupied the chair. Officers of the Peterborough branch of the Bible Society elected were: Sheriff Hall, president; Judge Huycke, vice-president; E. E. Logan, secretary, and John Crane, treasurer.

THEATRICAL

The presentation of the "American Girl" last evening at the Grand by the Ernie Marks Co., was heartily received, the first performance being greeted by a fairly good house.

Miss Kittie Marks who played the part of the American girl was as popular as ever. The specialties could be made a little more refined.

First Aid Classes

In the writings of Florence Nightingale occurs this paragraph: "We are only on the threshold of nursing. In the future, which I shall not see, for I am old, may a better way be opened; may the methods by which every infant, every human being, will have the best chance of health, the methods by which every sick person will have the best chance of recovery, be learned and practised! Hospitals are only an intermediate stage of civilization. Never intended at all events, to take in the whole sick population. May we hope that the day will come when every mother will become a health nurse, when every poor sick person will have the opportunity of a share in a district sick nurse at home."

First Aid Classes.

The class taking up the lectures on first aid to the injured will, after the practice work in bandaging on Wednesday night, be ready for first examination.

The second course will include lectures on home nursing, the sick room, infection and disinfection. Details of nursing, application of local remedies, etc. These lectures are given under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance Association. Examinations and diplomas awarded.

Those wishing to rigister for these lectures are asked to do so at an early date at the Y. W. C. A.

DEVICES FOR TESTING EGGS

It is not particularly pleasing to break an egg and find it bad. To overcome liability of this happening Sanitary Inspector Spence has just received 400 egg testing devices from the department of agriculture with which it is possible to distinguish the good from the bad, the stale from the fresh. It's a simple invention. An egg is passed before a cardboard candling box which is used with an ordinary kerosene lamp or an electric light. As the egg is passed across the light the interior of it becomes apparent. If the shell becomes darkened at the top slightly, the egg is not strictly fresh. If a dark opaque appearance is detected embracing most of the egg it is unfit for use, spot not having set in a process of incubation having started. Mr. Spence says as many as 200 eggs a minute can be tested by an expert with the device. He has 400 of them and will distribute them free to any one. Some will be given out to farmers on Saturday.

TAKES HOSPITAL TO WAR ZONE

Misses Cora Thompson and W. M. Keller on the Staff

The many friends here of Miss Cora Thompson and Miss W. M. Keller, who formerly conducted a private hospital here, will be interested to learn of their present undertaking, they having accompanied Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and a party of surgeons and nurses, who left New York for France to establish a field hospital.

The following is from a New York paper of Nov. 4:

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, accompanied by four American surgeons, fifteen trained nurses and half a dozen hospital internes, will sail for Europe on the Lusitania this mroning to establish a field hospital for the care of the wounded behind the battle line in Northern France. The project is being financed solely by Mrs. Whitney as her contribution towards the relief of the suffering in the war zone. It was said yesterday that Mrs. Whitney, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, was ready to put a large share of her fortune into this work and to establish other hospitals if conditions at the front permitted. Her mother, Mrs. Vanderbilt, arrived in New York from Newport last night to bid her goodbye.

Although the object of her mission was not made known until the eve of her departure, Mrs. Whitney has been quietly planning the expedition for several weeks. She was encouraged by the example of her sister, Countess Szechenyi, formerly Miss Gladys Moore Vanderbilt, who has gone to the aid of the wounded in Austria. Some idea of the scale of the undertaking may be gained from the fact that ten motor ambulances and enough clothing for 3,000 men women and children were shipped to France last Saturday on the steamship Chicago as a part of the hospital equipment.

The four surgeons who have gone volunteered their services and will stay at the front three or four months when their places will be taken by others. The first field hospital will be started as near as possible to the firing line. It will be constructed in co-operation with the American Ambulance Hospital near Paris. The wounded of both armies will be treated in the institution, and a special effort will be made to take care of the serious cases, which at present cannot be treated in the military field hospitals. The surgeons were not willing to discuss their plans last night, but one of those associated with the work explained that relief is contemplated for a certain class of sufferers for which at present there is practically no provision.

According to those associated with Mrs. Whitney, no other field hospital just like this has been estabuished in the war zone. The nearest thing to it is the field hospital maintained in France by Herman Harjes, the banker, which on a smaller scale aims to give relief in cases of serious injury. One of the New York surgeons in the Harjes hospital is Dr. Archibald C. Strong.

"There is a great need for skilled surgery at the front," said one of the surgeons associated with Mrs. Whitney. "At present it is impossible for the military authorities to handle any but the less serious wounds. The result is that hundreds of soldiers who are injured most severely have to wait until they can be sent to Paris. This means that there is a delay of twenty-four hours or more before they are treated. By that time they are beyond hope. Hundreds of lives might be saved if the surgeons were able to reach them in time.

"By establishing an up-to-date and fully equipped hospital close to the lines we hope to render a most important service in this respect. With our ambulances constantly in service, soldiers wounded in battle may be rushed to us within a comparatively few hours, and the dangers arising from delay may be avoided. It is speed that counts in thousands of serious cases, and that is what Mrs. Whitney's hospital will provide."

STATUES FOR POETS.

Scotland's Great Monument to Sir Walter Scott.

London has not many outdoor statues to poets. Shakespeare appears twice—in Leicester Square and Hamilton Place. Within a stone's throw of the latter site Byron, with his famous dog, Boatswain, by his side. Facing the crowded street behind the railings of St. Giles', Cripplegate, stands a beautiful statue of Milton, who was buried in the church, and on the Thames Embankment, pen in hand and gazing across old Father Thames, sits the "immortal peasant," Bobbie Burns.

At Rochdale, the Lancashire cotton town, may be seen the statue of Edwin Waugh, who has been called the "Lancashire Burns," and at Colchester there is a beautiful statue erected to William Barnes, who, although a man of great culture and learning, wrote exclusively in the Dorset dialect—a dialect which, next to the Scottish, has probably had most literary exponents.

An admirable statue of Tennyson adorns the town of Louth, where the Poet Laureate was a schoolboy, and where he and his brother had their earlest poems printed, and, as far as the present writer is aware, these are the only statues to poets in the provinces. Probably readers will supply others.

One of the finest memorials in the world commemorates a poet, the author of "The Lady of the Lake" and "Marmion." This is the Scott monument, the chief ornament of Princes street, Edinburgh. The poet is seated under a magnificent canopy, and by his side is his favorite collie, Maida. This remarkable memorial also shows the correct likeness of sixteen other Scottish poets and statuettes of sixty-four of Scott's "characters."

Scotland has another beautiful statue to a poet, but very few people see this in comparison with the crowds who view the Scott monument, for it stands—or rather, alts—beside St. Mary's Loch in Ettrick Forest. It commemorates James Hogg, who was called "The Ettrick Shepherd," and, as in Scott's case, his dog, too, enjoys a twin immortality—the faithful sheep-dog Lutham, which was the poet's constant companion for many years.

Mining Output Declines.

The Ontario Bureau of Mines reports a decrease in general output for the half year ending June 30. Gold, silver, iron ore and pig iron fell off considerably, and the period now under way promises little better, because of the serious depression in all the metal markets of the world at the present time. There was a slight increase in the mining of copper, nickel, cobalt and their oxides, and there is a likelihood of the gold production rising in the near future. It is the experience of the bureau officials that trade depression does not affect the market for this metal.

Not Worth a Rush.

The expression "Not worth a rush" is as a popular saying the predecessor of the now more common simile "Not worth a straw." In precarpet days it was the custom to straw the floors of dwelling houses. When guests of rank were entertained fresh rushes were spread for them, but folk of lower degree had to be content with rushes that had already been used, while still humbler persons had none, as not even being "worth a rush."—London Standard.

Lecture is Given by Returned Missionary

The lecture given by Mr. James Cuthbertson, returned missionary from Japan, on Tuesday evening was fairly well attended. Those that were there were delighted with the beautifully coloured lantern slides, depicting life in Japan, and with the excellent address given by Mr. Cuthbertson. The slides and lecture were quite the best that have been given here for a long time. At the conclusion of the address a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Cuthbertson. During the evening the audience had the pleasure of hearing an excellent solo rendered by Miss Ruby Young. The meeting was under the auspices of the Junior Epworth League of George Street Church.

BERLIN VERSION.

BERLIN, Nov. 26. — An official statement today claims that German troops at Lodz and Lowicz inflicted heavy losses on the Russians, who suffered many casualties. The Germans took forty thousand prisoners, seventy cannon and many machine guns and wagons. The final result of the battle is still in doubt.

Ask Executive to Appoint Official

After the general meeting of the Patriotic Fund Association last evening an executive committee meeting was held. H. Rush and A. H. Stratton of the distribution committee reported that the matter of appointing a successor to F. W. Miller as the distribution officer had been referred to their committee but that body has learned that any action taken by them would not meet with general favor, hence they desired the executive committee to deal with it. George Cochrane was asked about the possibility of him performing the duties and stated that he was willing to accept the position for $26 per month. J. S. Knapman has offered to do the work gratis if it could be performed by two hours work daily.

Considerable discussion was given the matter but it was decided that there was no haste and it would be better to leave it over till a subsequent meeting and the members would thus have an opportunity to think it over.

COMPLETE FAILURE FOR FOE IN ATTACK ON MISSY

Paris Statement Also Reports the Bombardment of Arras---Some Progress West of Souain

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 26. — The official announcement this afternoon says:

"No important development marked the day of November 25. In the north, cannonading diminished and no infantry attack was directed against our lines, which made slight advances at certain points.

"In the region of Arras there was a continuation of the bombardment on the town and its environs.

"On the Aisne the enemy endeavored to deliver an attack on the village of Missy. This movement resulted in complete failure with considerable losses to the Germans.

"We have made some progress in the region to the west of Souain.

"In the Argonne, in the Woevre district, in Lorraine and in the Vosges there is almost complete calm along the entire front.

"There has been a heavy fall of snow, particularly in the higher portions of the Vosges mountains."

EXPECT RESULTS.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The situation at present does not demand legislation for the suppression of football, said Premier Asquith in the Commons today, replying to the question as to whether such a move was under way. The Premier added that negotiations with the football magnates were progressing from which satisfactory results were expected.

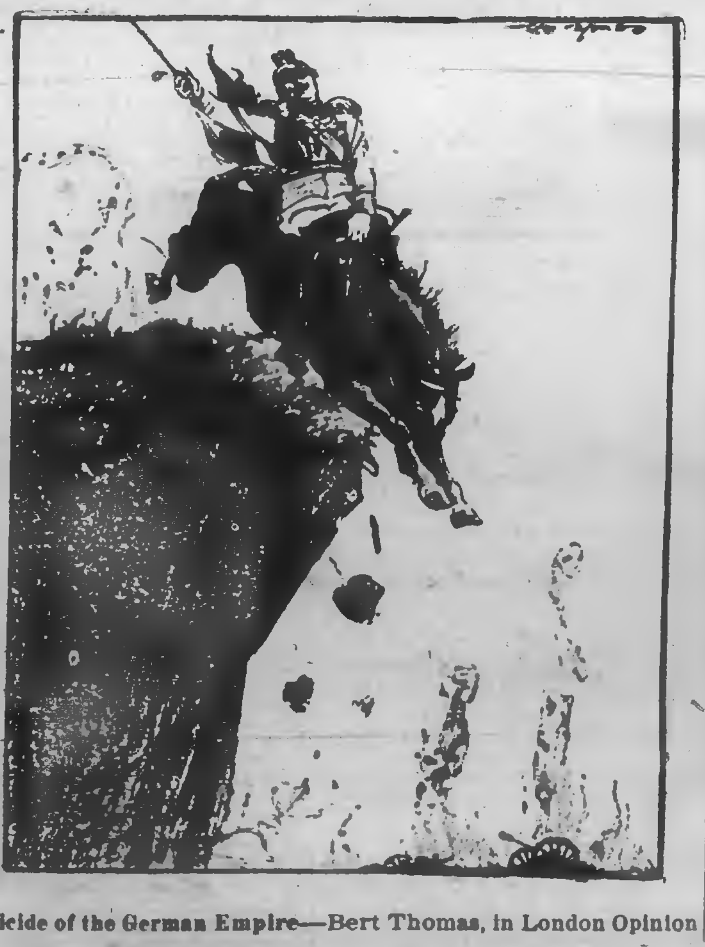
INDIAN SUBALTERN DECORATED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A Times Boulogne despatch says among eight Victoria Crosses recently bestowed is one to Ganna Sing, an Indian subaltern. With fifteen men of his regiment he was attacked in a trench just before dawn by a large body of Germans. He is the sole survivor of his party, and just before being disabled by five bullet wounds, he shot a German officer, and seizing his sword killed ten more of the attackers.

"Had I not been disabled by a bullet wound in the foot," he says, "I would have killed more."

He is on the hospital ship at Boulogne, a mere bundle of splints and bandages, but cheerful and full of fight.



Suicide of the German Empire—Bert Thomas, in London Opinion

BROTHER DID NOT LIKE HIS SISTER'S BEAU

When the Latter Called He Got a Warm Reception

CUPID IN COURT

Magistrate Dumble was called upon this morning to settle the differences between a local barber and his intended brother-in-law.

The barber, who hails from the backwoods, took objection to the other, a commercial traveller, calling on his sister, so on Monday night last he beat him up to such an extent that the victim still carries the marks. On this night the brother entered the room where the young man and his sister were sitting together, and, with the remark, "Don't you think you had better stay all night?" he grabbed the traveller by the throat and beat him up, besides using a lot of abusive language. It appears the two young people were engaged, but none of the fomaily knew anything about it.

The brother, in his defence, stated that his mother, who is a widow, complained about the young man staying so late, so, from all appearances, her son took it upon himself to break the courtship.

The Magistrate did his best to smoothe over the trouble by trying to have the two young men shake hands, but the brother wouldn't consent to this, so the Magistrate imposed a fine of ten dollars, and he was bound over to keep the peace on a surety of $500.

ENNISMORE RESPONDS

Concert Realizes $110 for the Patriotic Fund

MORE IF NEEDED

Last Sunday after mass at St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick spoke on the war, the magnitude of the task which the Allies are trying to accomplish, and the necessity for every British subject, irrespective of creed or nationality, uniting against the comon enemy of human liberty. Father Fitzpatrick quoted passage after passage from Count Von Bernhardi's work, "Germany in the Next War," to show the false principles underlying the military spirit of Germany, her anticipation of just such alliances as this war has brought about, and her thorough and systematic preparation for the accomplishment of her ambitious aim, namely, World Power. Father Fitzpatrick then appealed to his people to stand firm by that flag which has brought liberty, prosperity and independence to British subjects in every quarter of the world, which has ever respected the rights and possessions of other nations, and which for us Canadians is the emblem of true peace, concord and solidarity.

A concert was then announced for Tuesday evening, Nov. 24, and the large enthusiastic gathering in the township hall clearly evidenced the good spirit, loyalty and devotion of the people of Ennismore to the worthy cause for which Britain and her allies are sacrificing the lives of so many of their young men.

The receipts of the concert reached the handsome sum of $110, which was handed over to the committee of the Patriotic Fund, Peterboro.

This was the first patriotic concert held in the township, but if necessity demands, others of a similar nature will be held for the same laudable purpose.

A six-mile tunnel which will be bored through mountains near Denver will shorten a railroad 23 miles and reduce its elevation from 11,660 feet to 2,500 feet.

ENEMY WERE LEAD INTO AN INEXTRICABLE TRAP

Advance by Russian Wings Closed Gap Through Which German Centre Had Passed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Nov. 26.—Semi-official advices received from Poland, show that the German defeat at Lodz, culminating in the capture of a German army corps was the result of a Russian manoeuvre by which Germans were led into an inextricable trap. The Russian left wing resting on the river Warta and Russian right wing on the Vistula, both lying along the Warsaw-Kalisz railroad, moved forward in unison in the last two days.

Simultaneously the Russian centre gave ground and the Germans followed, apparently relying upon a German column from Wielun to repulse the Russian left wing and to form a juncture with the main German forces.

The German plan failed as a result of the battle on November 25 when the German force from Wielun was repulsed. Thereafter the Russian wings advanced and closed the gap through which the German center had passed.

In the meantime, Russian reserves had come up and they surrounded Germans thousands of whom surrendered. Others fought their way north in an effort to join the German left in the vicinity of Lowicz.

HE REFUSED JOB ON FARM PAYING $26 PER MONTH AND APPLIED FOR RELIEF

There are professional beggars and loafers in the city according to Mr. W. Langley, proprietor of a Water Street employment agency. To be exact he says there are thirteen that are known through him having applied for work, and which when offered them they refused. He has placed these men in the "pillory" list as he terms it. All of them were offered fairly good positions. One was a farm job paying $26 a month, but the applicant sniffed at the offer, turned on his heel and straightway applied to relief officer Miller for charity. Needless to say he did not get it. The relief officer had been previously tipped off concerning the lazy shiftliness of this individual.

Since he opened his agency Mr. Langley has placed 55 persons in positions. Forty were laborers, whom hard times have hit harder than any other class. A good many were boys and girls whose earnings will naturally help to eke out the family income. The agency is conducted entirely without local remuneration. No fees are charged applicants for employment, Mr. Langley being paid a straight salary by the Industrial Association of Canada who are conducting employment agencies, endeavoring to cope with the unemployment situation. This association has as its motto "Work, not charity, productive work; no idle land in 1915."

Battleship is Blown up

ONLY TWELVE OF CREW SAVED WHEN BRITISH BATTLESHIP IS LOST

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 26. — It was officially announced here today that the British battleship Bulwark had been blown up off Sheerness. Only twelve men of her large crew were saved.

The Bulwark was a pre-dreadnought of relatively small size and power.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — The disaster to the Bulwark was announced in the Commons this afternoon by the First Lord. The explosion is supposed to have originated in her own magazine.

The explosion which destroyed the Bulwark occurred at 7.53 this morning. A vice-admiral and a rear-admiral who were at Sheerness reported that they were convinced that the disaster was caused by a magazine explosion. There was no upheaval of water, and when the smoke had cleared away the ship had entirely disappeared.

An inquiry will be held tomorrow, and the Admiralty believes it may throw some light upon the occurrence.

Mr. Churchill, speaking in the House concerning the disaster, said: "The loss of the ship does not sensibly affect our military position, but I regret the loss of life, which was very heavy, only twelve men being saved. All officers, and the rest of the crew which I suppose amounted to between seven and eight hundred, perished."

GERMANS MADE FATAL MISTAKE

PARIS, Nov. 26. — A despatch from Petrograd says that all newspapers agree that the Germans suffered a teribile catastrophe in attempting an offensive with five army corps between the rivers Vistula and Warthe.

Local Labor at Barrie Building

No Grounds for Report That Outsiders Get Employment

With the exception of the superintendent and two foremen, there are no men engaged in the construction of Thomas Barrie's building, George street south, who were not hired in Peterboro and are residents of the city. In conversation with Superintendent Richard J. Garwood of the National Construction Co., who have the contract, a Review reporter ascertained that the company rere requested by Mr. Barrie to employ local labor and buy material in Peterboro, as far as possible. Both Mr. T. J. Lannen, superintending engineer, and Mr. Garwood informed the reporter that they had compliedw ith Mr. Barrie's wishes and had never brought in an outsider with the exception of two skilled foremen employed by the National Construction Co. All their material had been secured from local firms, the bricks from Curtis Bros., the lumber from the Peterboro Planing Mill, and so on. The company required a quantity of hollow brick, which was not obtainable here and had to be shipped in.

Last week 31 men were engaged on the building, all hired in Peterboro. They are English-speaking to a man.

Splendid progress is being made on the new building which when finished will materially supplement Peterboro's fine collection of stores and larger buildings. Mr. Lannen stated he hoped to have the building completed by May, but a great deal hinged upon the brand of weather they were favored with. Approximately 25,000 feet of floor space will be represented in the structure. It is a four-storey building, the basement to hold stores, the first and second floors to be devoted to office space, and the fourth floor for manufacturing.

BERNARD LASTER NOT ARRESTED

Bernard Laster, who for some years conducted a clothing and dry goods store on Simcoe Street, and is now in business in Toronto, is in the city and this morning called at The Review office to complain of an article which he feels did him an injustice. It was reported that Mr. Laster had been interned at Fort Henry, Kingston, but this was not true. Mr. Laster explained that he had been pursuing his business at Toronto. His son, he says, was accepted for active service.

PLAN FOR ENLISTMENT

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—In the further enlistment of troops in Canada, to bring to 50,000 the total under mobilization, the five regiments to be raised in Ontario and in fact those to be enlisted elsewhere, will be raised not at divisional centres exclusively, but at the various towns and villages, each of which will be asked to contribute its quota of a company or part of a company of infantry or squadron of cavalry.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1914

THE PATRIOTIC CAMPAIGN AND THE REVIEW.

THE MEETING last night of the citizens of Peterborough, while at no time bubbling over with enthusiasm, seemed to have a spirit of determination that assures a successful issue, although manifesting itself quietly. The meeting was distinctly representative, and what we liked about it was a tendency to ignore details that should be left with a committee, and deal with the main subject, namely, a decision whether there was to be a campaign for a Patriotic Fund. Apparently, it was a foregone conclusion that the campaign was to be waged, and we trust the amount will be large enough to make the effort worth while. Fifty thousand dollars would not be too high a mark, but this is a matter that must be decided by the committee. Peterborough ought to be able to do as well as Kingston and Lindsay.

So far as the Review is concerned, it will not be necessary to commission one of its advertisers to get this paper to support a campaign for this purpose. The Review will do what it can for any public movement that is in the interests of the Empire, and more particularly of all the people of Peterborough. We presume, however, that the committee will use discretion in appointing a representative to wait on those who are expected to assist in any important degree in this campaign. If the main details are handled judiciously and diplomatically, success should attend the campaign.

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

A MOST INTERESTING and instructive book relating to the European war is that entitled "A Scrap of Paper," by Dr. E. J. Dillon. Dr. Dillon was one of those who, with the late Lord Roberts, saw clearly the real peril to European safety that Germany had become. He is a man that has a deep, personal knowledge of real Germany, of Germany's foreign policy, the purpose of her government, and the main thought in her literature and journalism, particularly of recent years. In spite of all his data and warnings, many refused to believe evil of Germany, almost up to the very day when she declared war on Britain. Now, the disillusionment serves to give added emphasis to the published statements of a prophet who has lived to see his warnings only too vividly realized.

Dr. Dillon writes well of what the world owes to Germany in science and music. But, in spite of this, Germans have concluded that their culture and civilizing influence requires expansion or otherwise it must decay. Germans look on the great Slav race as so much ethnic manure, Britain is weak and decadent, while France is well into a decline. A modern Roman Empire, dominating the world by brute force, hostile to democracy and opposed to Christian principles and morality, is the real object of Germany in engaging in a world war.

Dr. Dillon points out how thoroughly and scientifically the Germans laid their plans for achieving world empire. Antwerp was practically Germanized. The elections in that great Belgian city were run by wealthy German residents there. The lace factories of Belgium were wholly in German hands, as well as the trade in furs. "A few years more of peaceful interpenetration would have seen Holland and Belgium linked by a postal and, perhaps, a customs union with the German Empire." This statement is no doubt true. Germany saw her people prospering in other countries, and at the same time losing their connection with their Fatherland. She felt she must take these places by force, or in time lose the benefit of the success of Germans in other countries.

The characteristic traits of the old Prussians were brutal arrogance towards those under them, and cringing servility towards their superiors. These qualities, coupled with a submissiveness of the masses, easily allowed the leaders of the people the scope to train and drill the nation into one vast fighting machine.

Dr. Dillon says:

> ". . . they have a warped ethical sense—what the schoolmen were wont to term 'a false conscience.' And the greater the scrupulosity with which they act in accordance with its promptings, the more cheerfully and abominably do they sin against the conscience of the human race."

He further says:

> "That the officers and the rank and file are obedient to their commanders will not be gainsaid. To their Kaiser they are, if possible, still more slavishly submissive. Well, the Kaiser, when his punitive expedition was setting out for China, addressed them thus: 'When you encounter the enemy you will defeat him. NO QUARTER SHALL BE GIVEN; NO PRISONERS SHALL BE TAKEN. Let all who fall into your hands be at your mercy. Just as the Huns a thousand years ago, under the leadership of Etzel (Atilla), gained a reputation in virtue of which they still live in historical tradition, so may the name of Germany become known in such a manner in China that no Chinaman will ever again even dare to look askance at a German.'"

Dr. Dillon states he can describe state documents that were transmitted to the German government. The Germans had, it is evident, a vast amount of information concerning all countries in any way related to their policy. On this information they brought about the war, confident that Britain would be obliged to remain neutral, that the British Empire was divided, that Russia was weak and unready, that France was dead, in short, that "the Day" had arrived. Events have shown that the Germans were amazingly wrong in their calculations. The German Government suffered from a plethora of information. It was too well informed as to what was going on in other countries, and too little qualified to judge correctly the things revealed. They were unable to arrive at a correct judgement because they were blinded by their own ideals, which prevented them from knowing British, French, and Russian character, since they conceived it to be similar to their own.

That Germany would have defeated Russia and France seems probable. Britain held thus the balance, and her neutrality was a necessary factor to the first great step to German world empire. If Britain fought Germany, defeat would likely come to her. Hence the German Chancellor's words about a scrap of paper are of potent historic significance:

> "'Just for a word—neutrality—just for a "scrap of paper," declared the German Imperial Chancellor, angrily, 'Great Britain is going to make war on a kindred nation.'"

One paragraph more from Dr. Dillon's book will suffice for a closing reference:

> "The press deliberately concocts news, spreads it throughout the world, systematically poisoning the wells of truth, and then villifies the base hypocrisy of the British who contradict it. That is part of the work of furthering the good cause of civilization. Tampering with State documents and forging State papers are recognized expedients which are wholly justified by the German 'necessity which knows no law.' We have had enlightening examples of them since the war broke out. Prince Bismarck availed himself of this cultured privilege when he altered the Kaiser's despatch in order to precipitate a collision with France. And the verdict of the nation was, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant, who has made such good use of the maxim that the end, when it was Germany's cause, justified the means and hallows the act.' Since his day the practice has been reduced to a system."

A PATHETIC CASE.

A PATHETIC CASE happened in Montreal, when a fifteen-year-old girl secured a revolver, and, pointing it at her mother in play, pulled the trigger. The mother was almost instantly killed, and leaves seven children, the yougest being four years old. The girl had played with the weapon before, which belonged to a boarder. The boarder had loaded his revolver and hid it in his bed, but the girl found it, and fatal results followed. The whole story, with all its distressing circumstances, is another warning against leaving anything dangerous insufficiently protected from thoughtless persons. Ignorant or thoughtless persons who play with fire will get burnt, and that is all there is to it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE GUELPH MERCURY contains the following item:

> "A Toronto negro slipped and fell, and in so doing a revolver in his hip pocket exploded, and tore the seat out of his trousers. In these war times the event would be referred to as firing in the rear."

We may add, by way of a passing observation, that the negro was doubtless "fired" because his rent was all behind.

THE ALLIES are winning, says the Toronto Globe. Good. The news is quite satisfactory.

Why Soldiers' Families Suffer.

(Robert Blatchford, in the Clarion.)

And the only reason why these wives of our bravest and best men are not properly treated is the reason I have given above: the meanness of wealthy and titled slackers.

A Soldier and a Gentleman.

(New York Sun.)

A general, an international respect, touched in the case of his own country and the troops he once commanded by an affectionate regard, is the best of many praises that belong to the staunch, skilful, old soldier whose span of honour reached from the Indian Mutiny to the critical days of the fate of Europe. That he was forgiven for having been wiser than the mass of his fellow citizens is another proof of the weight of his simple and sincere character. "Great captains, with their trumps and drums, disturb the silence for a while." Lord Roberts, the well beloved, was something more. He was a good man. He was a gentleman. Amid the passionate billingsgate of so many heroes of the pen and the purulent angers of a world of professors, what a grave dignity graces the words of this dead gentleman, spoken a month and a half ago to the over-heated or over-credulous, eager to believe the worst of their foes.

'Twas a Long, Long Way.

(Portland Oregonian.)

Most prominent among the reservists who have gone from Nome, Alaska, is Lord William Percy, son of the Duke of Northumberland. He was in research work in the arctic region when word of the war reached him. He immediately made his way to Nome, and there offered the owners of small boats $6000 to take him to Seattle. They refused because of the risk, and Lord Percy was forced to wait until the regular boat arrived. To join the Grenadier Guards, of which regiment he is an officer, this nobleman made a journey of more than 12,000 miles.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—The Review deserves credit for the large space in its columns devoted to the publication of the names of the contributors to the Patriotic Fund, and the amounts subscribed by each. By this means we may know wherein lies the fault for the total sum having fallen short of our expectations.

No self-respecting citizen can afford to lag in the race for so worthy a cause. Just think, if the Germans were to swoop down on us, as they did on the poor Belgians, and exact tribute, which is possible, and leave our rich men without a cent to bless themselves with, if, indeed, their lives would be spared! The necessities of the case demand a whole-souled response.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said:
This is my own, my native land?"

* * *

If such there breathes, go mark him well;
For him no minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim;
Despite those titles, power and pelf,
The wretch, concentrated all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down,
To the vile dust from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonored and unsung.

Yours, etc.,

MIXED FARMING MORE THAN FAD

Mixed farming, according to advices received by the Canadian Pacific Railway, is now more than a fad—it is really spelling more dollars, greater success and certainty in the future and fixing the people into the soil in a way that the single crop will never do. The farmers are now alive to the importance of mixed farming, alike for profit and the benefit of the country generally. Men who came to the country and merely wanted to stay for a year or two, cared only for the abundance of wheat they could grow. They impoverished the land, but made money. Then they cleared off, many of them. Meantime the railway company went up and down the land preaching the gospel of mixed farming. At first it was not listened to; today mixed farming is becoming a common practice, with capital results to everybody, according to the advices indicated. This extension of mixed farming is having its economic showing in the west in the variety of production for the home market. This market is steadily extending by the introduction of manufactures. These are nascent, for the most part, but hopeful. They provide employment on the other hand, while on the other the mixed farming gives to the industrial population the supplies which otherwise would have to be found elsewhere. There is thus an equipoise set up between the two which is mutually beneficial. Most of the cities and towns in the west have their own manufactures, while outside these towns and cities one can find the mixed farm raising stock and vegetables for the industrial workers.

THE OVERLAND TRAIL

By M. QUAD

In the old days of the Overland trail, the pony express and the lumbering stagecoach stage stations had been erected at a distance of fifteen miles apart throughout the length of the whole trail. After the first thirty miles from the Missouri river no coach was safe from attack until it reached San Francisco. The Indians could not use fire as a weapon, nor could they carry a station by assault, but they captured many of them by trickery or siege. In no case was the life of a company employee ever spared.

Never were greater hardihood and bravery exhibited than by the men selected to drive the coaches.

As the stage toiled through the heavy sand of some strips of desert or met several miles of stony and uphill trail a band of a hundred yelling warriors would suddenly appear. The driver must fight as well as guide his excited team. It was when the Overland company finally appealed to the government to clear its route through Kansas that General Custer was sent out with a brigade of troopers. Custer couldn't hope to strike a telling blow against the hordes in the field, but he laid his plans to open the route and drive the Indians back from it.

As we followed the trail to the west we picked up station after station, showing grewsome sights.

Custer's whole command witnessed the arrival of the last stage from the west—the last for several weeks. From a hilltop three miles from the trail, with impassable gullies between, we saw the coach come up the trail with 100 Indians pursuing it. It was a running fight, which aroused every man to the highest pitch of excitement, but we were helpless to extend aid. Through the clear air of a summer afternoon we saw the stage horses shot down and the coach overtaken. The passengers made a brave fight to the last, but none of them escaped. It was night before we had made our detour and reached the station, and the Indians had departed long before. They had captured the station two hours before they attacked the stage.

If this station had failed to hold out how would it be with Pawnee Flat, the next station to the west, and with White Horse, the next after that? The first was a four man station and the next a relay of eight. As we rode away through the night not a man had the slightest hope of Pawnee, though we knew it would have been defended as long as one of the four could lift a gun. We reached it at about 11 o'clock. It was as we had feared. Over 200 Indians had swarmed down out of the hills at daybreak the morning before, and, though they had lost a score of men, the dugout had been carried by assault and its defenders butchered. We waited here half an hour to give the poor corpses burial and then pushed on toward White Horse. It was not until we got within two miles of the station that our fears were relieved. Then we heard the reports of rifles and knew that the place was still holding out.

The station was situated about midway of a long, bare hill. To the west of it was a coulee, or dry ravine, with banks twenty feet high. We had with us a couple of scouts, who knew every rod of the Overland trail, and when within a mile of the station these men were sent forward to spy out the station. They returned after awhile to report that Spotted Horse and about 150 of his "dog soldiers," as the Cheyennes were called, were laying siege to the station and had evidently occupied the ground for two or three days. The ground around the dugout was so open that the Indians dared not "rush" the place, nor was there any show to use a keg of powder without reckless exposure. With their allies holding the trail to the east, the Cheyennes had entered upon a siege in hopes to starve the defenders out. Their war ponies and most of the band were lying up in the dry ravine for the night. This ravine had no opening to the south and was therefore a cul de sac.

The first signs of dawn were in the sky when we saddled up, mounted, and the whole of us pushed forward, led by the scouts, for the mouth of the ravine. We had the Spencer carbines, each with a full magazine, and as we got the order to charge each man began shooting. When a carbine was empty it was thrown away and a revolver used in its place. When the revolver was empty it was cast aside for the saber. Extended from bank to bank, we swept up the ravine, and we had nothing to do but kill. Taken by surprise, the Cheyennes thought only of getting away. The fight did not last above thirty minutes, and our loss was only three men wounded.

Down in the ravine we harvested seventy-eight dead Indians, and on the banks above the stage men counted up twenty-two more. We got upward of 100 rifles, about 50 pistols, 130 ponies and a wagon load of miscellaneous stuff. Every Indian lying there was a dead one. Custer had said, "Shoot to kill!" and there was no wounded or prisoners. Among the killed were Spotted Horse, Big Moon and White Bird, and that fight broke the backbone of the Cheyennes. Their part in the war was to capture all the stations west of Burning Hill, but they had taken only Pawnee Flat. They never rode to war again. Within a week they were suing for peace, and they were the first to be gathered on a reservation.

Bettina's Salads.

Lovely girl is my Bettina,
Most exemplary her habits,
Save that I can never wean her
From concocting tough Welsh rabbits;
Also fudge she's always cooking—
Such things leave me weak and pallid—
And forever she is looking
For somewhat to make a salad.

Salads are her ruling passion.
She will make them at all hours.
She adopts each salad fashion,
Makes 'em out of fruit or flowers.
Once when we had friends to dinner—
Nothing else then had my lady—
She with dressing made a winner
Out of just my old straw cady!

In the year we've been housekeeping
Naught but foolish food I've eaten,
And for salads I am weeping,
Though the salads can't be beaten!
Life seems vapid, silly, petty,
And I told her so, doggone it!
What do you suppose said Betty?
"Put some salad dressing on it!"

Neglecting the Nails Spoils the Hands

Healthy and well kept nails make a world of difference to the appearance of the hands, and it is a great pity that these should be neglected even by those who give constant attention to their hands in other respects. The care of the nails is often looked upon as too elaborate and time-taking for the average busy housewife, but this should not be so, for the process is really quite simple, and with a little regular practice takes very little time at all.

If the nails have been badly neglected they will, of course, need some perseverance before they are restored to their normal condition, but when once this is attained they can be kept in excellent order by a few minutes of care every day and a little attention to cutting, etc., about once a week.

Before setting to work on the cleansing, filing and polishing of the nails, be careful to remedy any apparent defects. For instance, if the edge is split, this must be cut as low as it is necessary to prevent further decay.

Cheap Soaps Injure Nails

Often, too, the nails become very brittle as a consequence of some constitutional weakness, and this cannot be remedied except by taking some suitable tonic; but there are other things which cause this troublesome defect. Housework, and in particular rough work which entails frequent contact with hard water and strong or inferior soap, is bound to cause trouble with the nails. More often than not they become brittle and torn, and the skin around chapped and broken. There is only one remedy for this—regular attention.

No elaborate manicuring is necessary, and what treatment is required can be done easily at home with some practice and care.

If the nails have been soaked for any length of time in hot water or hot soda-and-water, apply lemon juice and glycerine to them, and avoid putting much strain upon them until they have become normally hard again.

A healthy nail should be shell pink in color and free from any spots or blemishes.

White Spots Grow Out

There is no special treatment for the white spots which are very often to be found on the nails. If they are due to the presence of air under the nails, they will gradually disappear as the nail grows; if they are due to the health being run down, they will vanish when the constitution is built up. The cure of these must, therefore, be left to Nature.

Great care should be taken to keep the edges of the nails free from dust and dirt, also to prevent any injury to the surrounding skin, for this is not only painful but also very susceptible to contagion, and diseases of the nails are difficult to treat.

The instruments required for manicuring the nails are a sharp pair of scissors, an ivory cuticle knife, a few orange sticks, emery boards or a fine file, and a little polishing powder.

Before beginning the treatment, soak the tips of the fingers in warm soapy water in order to soften the cuticle. Cut the nails if necessary, and be careful to preserve their natural roundness, so that the edges of the nails and those of the finger tips are on a level. Long, pointed nails are very ugly, and should never be allowed. As a general rule the nails will only require trimming once a week, and at other times they may be kept under control by filing them gently on an emery board.

Use of the Orange Stick

Having attended to the cutting, next pass the tip of an orange stick under the skin at the base in order to loosen it thoroughly without injuring it in any way. Press this back with the ivory knife until a white half-moon is visible at the base of the nail. In some cases these half-moons are always visible, even when the nails have been neglected, while in others it is some time before they can be seen. As a rule, however, they will make their appearance after one or two treatments.

Never press the skin back roughly; gentle pressure will be much more effective. If any small pieces of skin happen to cling to the nail they can best be removed by rubbing with an orange stick dipped in lemon juice.

Any stains which may have settled on the nails during household duties can easily be removed by rubbing lightly with a piece of lemon.

Lastly, the nails will require polishing, and a little of the powder should be smeared over them before rubbing with a chamois leather. The inside of an old white kid glove makes a good cover for the pad when the chamois leather is worn out.

Care in Cake-baking

Baking cake requires the most careful judgment. The very best ingredients are essential. Great care must be exercised in measuring.

Pans properly prepared; oven must be properly heated; oven doors handled carefully during the process of baking. Use pastry flour; sift before measuring—then sift again with baking powder; eggs must be perfectly fresh; butter sweet and sugar fine.

When baked do not place cakes in a cold place nor in a draught of cold air. The steam will condense and make the cake heavy.

Cleaning Fine Fabrics

A mixture that will remove grease from the finest fabrics is made of one quart of rainwater, two ounces of ammonia, one teaspoonful of saltpetre and one ounce of shaving soap cut up very fine.

When frying steak, do not cook one side first, then turn over and fry the other. Just harden for a second or two one side, and then turn over and start frying the other, and you will find what a juicy steak you will have.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

THE WHITE FARM.

It Deserved Its Name, and It Cheaply Advertised Itself.

During a vacation spent in the north we were driven through a most prosperous country, lined with beautiful farmhouses.

Among others we passed a white farm. The house was white, the barns were white, the fences were white. Milk white cows were grazing in the fields, and snow white chickens were running upon the lawn. A huge white dog lay upon the grass, and a white horse, with a white harness and white carriage, was hitched to a white post by a white strap. The white graveled drive was bordered with white rocks. A white fountain threw up a white spray, while white ducks floated upon the water beneath.

Just as we drove by a lady dressed in pure white, with white shoes, stepped out of the door and seated herself in a white hammock.

The whole effect was most striking and was an excellent example of advertisement without expense. The cost would have been the same if no attention had been paid to one color. There was no need of giving a name to that farm. It is known as the White farm for miles around and is one of the show places of the district.

The same idea, of course, could be carried out with other shades.—Progressive Farmer.

Hear, Hear!

"Hear, hear!" is the house of commons cheer, the member of parliament being forbidden the use of any other form of applause. But "Hear, hear!" in the house of commons may be made to express a number of conflicting emotions. Some of the varieties of parliamentary cheering have been noted by the late William White in his "Inner Life of the House of Commons." "There is," he writes, "the defiant cheer, more like a yell than a cheer. This is most commonly heard from the conservative side of the house. * * * Then there is the cheer derisive, which is very expressive, and, again, the cheer confirmatory. * * * There is also the obstructive cheer, * * * and, lastly, there is the genuine English, manly, approving cheer." And "Hear, hear!" denotes them all.

A Short Lived Club.

One of the most short lived clubs ever formed was the Club des Laideuses—club for ugly women—organized by the Princess Pauline Metternich, who was an elegant woman, but so ugly that she used to call herself "a white monkey." Perhaps she felt lonesome. Anyhow, she tried to gather some of the other women she knew who were not blessed with good looks into a club. But the club proved unpopular and died a natural death. The princess got back at her women acquaintances by remarking that if there were any candor in them her club would be overcrowded.

An Ornament to Paris.

The Place de la Concorde in Paris is one of the most beautiful places of its kind in the world. It was not until 1763 that the grounds were first adorned by the erection of an equestrian statue of Louis XV. and Gabriel, the architect, constructed the balustrades and pavilions that are seen to-day. The present design, however, was made by Hittorff in 1854. In 1792 the statue of the king was removed by the populace, and the square became known as the Place de la Revolution. During the bloody period the guillotine was placed here, and Louis XVI. was executed on Jan. 21, 1793, and in the following October the unfortunate Marie Antoinette shared a like fate.

Nearer to Her Soldier.

Almost one of the first to receive relief from the Patriotic Fund in North Toronto, was Mrs. Frank Sutton, whose husband, a reservist, in the Army Service Corps, went to the war. The fund paid her fare and her child's to England, where she has rejoined her people.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson IX.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 29, 1914

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xv, 22-37. Memory Verses, 25-27—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have seen our blessed Lord in the hands of the band who arrested Him; in the hands of the religious hypocrites called chief priests and scribes and elders; in the hands of the Roman governor, who chose to please the people rather than do what he knew to be right, and now He is in the hands of the soldiers whose orders are to kill Him. They crucified the Lord of Glory (I Cor. ii, 8). They had no pity, and He could truly say, "I looked for some to take pity, but there was none, and for comforters, but I found none" (Ps. lxix, 20, 21).

Let us consider Him in the hands of the soldiers, and through it all let our hearts keep saying, "For me, all for me, that I, redeemed by His great sacrifice, might learn how to bear something for His sake and be content to be killed all the day long." See the whole band gathered about Him, clothing Him with purple, crowning Him with thorns, putting a reed in His right hand, mockingly saluting Him as king of the Jews, smiting Him and spitting upon Him.

Then they took off the purple and put His own clothing on Him and led Him out to crucify Him, and He, bearing His cross, went forth (verse 20; John xix, 17). Imagine, if you can, what it meant to have clothing roughly put on and removed from a scourged back and to have a heavy cross laid upon it. Did you ever take a piece of cloth from a wound unhealed? Then think of Him.

The story of Simon the Cyrenian compelled to bear the cross—His cross—seems to indicate that Jesus either stumbled because of weakness or fainted under His heavy load and sufferings. Simon was coming out of the country into the city, but had to turn back and bear a little for Christ's sake. When we are turned about in our plans or compelled by adverse people or circumstances to do differently from what we had intended it will help us to remember Simon and say, "Amen, O Lord."

It is recorded in Luke xxiii, 27-32, that a great company of people and of women followed Him, bewailing and lamenting Him, and that He said to the women, "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children," and He told them of the terrible days ahead of them, which days and things in due time came upon their city. Even more terrible things such as never have been or ever will be again are awaiting this world, but few believe it (Matt. xxiv, 21; Zeph. i, 14-18; iii, 8; Isa. xiii, 9-13).

Luke also tells us in the same passage that there were two malefactors led with Him to be put to death. Thus He was numbered with transgressors (Isa. liii, 12), and we must be contented to be so numbered for His sake.

If we will let Him live His life in us we must be content to suffer with Him and to be miscalled, misjudged, misunderstood, falsely accused and in every way ill treated for all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution (II Tim. iii, 12).

They came to the place of crucifixion, the place of a skull, called in Matthew, Mark and John "Golgotha" and in Luke "Calvary," and there they crucified Him, on either side one of the malefactors and Jesus in the midst. Never did so few words have such awful significance. The Son of God, the Holy One of Israel, treated as the vilest criminal; but it was for us He suffered, let each one say "for me," and consider, if you can, the cost of your redemption.

It was all foretold, the pierced hands and feet, the parted garments, the casting of lots and all else (Ps. xxii, Isa. liii and elsewhere). Though God foresaw it all, that did not mitigate the guilt of cruel hands (Acts ii, 23; iv, 27, 28). He was crucified at the third hour, or 9 a. m. (verse 25). The passersby railed on Him, the chief priests and scribes mocked Him, the soldiers also mocked Him and offered Him vinegar, and they that were crucified with Him reviled Him (verses 25-32; Luke xxiii, 36-38). One of the two thieves repented and went to Paradise with Him that day (Luke xxiii, 40-43).

With hands and feet nailed to the cross, without baptism or any good works, he believed, confessed Christ, and went to glory. There was darkness from the sixth hour to the ninth hour, and at that hour He died.

Then was the veil of the temple rent in twain from the top to the bottom, the earth did quake, and the rocks were rent, graves were opened, and after His resurrection many bodies of the saints arose and appeared to many in the holy city (verses 37, 38; Matt. xxvii, 51-53). These probably went with Him to glory.

Fail not to notice with much prayer His seven sayings from the cross recorded in Matt. xxvii, 46; Mark xv, 34; Luke xxiii, 34, 43, 46; John xix, 28-30. These texts do not give them in the order of utterance. The first is forgiveness, the second is glory, and the third covers all that we need while here on earth. Each of the other sayings has its message for our hearts.

CANADIAN WOOLLENS

Discrimination Against the Home Made Cloths a Misguided Policy

A few weeks ago the "Journal of Commerce" of Montreal, of which the Hon. W. S. Fielding the late Minister of Finance, is editor, spoke as follows in support of domestic woollen fabrics:

"A common complaint among textile manufacturers and agents in this country is the very apparent prejudice in favor of foreign fabrics, or the prevailing idea that foreign fabrics are necessarily superior to those produced by domestic manufacturers. This idea has been taught by a few in the trade who are interested in selling foreign goods, but no one who is at all conversant with the fabrics manufactured by many of our mills places any credence on such tales. Still, the prejudice continues and our mills are compelled to recognize it in considering the competition of foreign textile manufacturers.

"The fallacy was fostered years ago under the old tariff law with the United Kingdom, when practically all the woollens and worsteds imported were of a distinctly higher than average type, owing to the fact that the medium and low grade fabrics now coming into the country could not be imported profitably at that time. To assist in securing an unwarranted profit, some jobbers or merchant tailors placed foreign tickets on much of the better grade of their purchases from domestic sources, thereby creating in the minds of the ultimate consumers the false impression that all of the finer, high grade fabrics were of foreign origin.

"Comparison of fabrics from the standpoint of intrinsic worth, perfection of manufacture, style, color and finish, will convince the unprejudiced investigator that the domestic manufacturer has made wonderful progress in the development of the industry—that Canadian woollen and worsted mills are as well equipped as those in any other country and are now producing fabrics which are fully equal to those manufactured abroad. Much of the domestic product is probably still sold as of foreign manufacture. The custom still exists to mark Canadian goods as foreign, but merchants feel indignant when their attention is called to the fact that much of the goods on their shelves is domestic make. These same merchants are the ones who should lead the movement to break down this prejudice. It is working against their interests as in most cases they are innocent of any attempt to hoodwink the consumer. They buy in good faith and as they believe that nothing good can be made in Canada in the way of woollen or worsted goods they make little effort to ascertain the true origin of the fabrics they buy. It is surely a question that deserves serious attention from both merchants and manufacturers, and should be dealt with accordingly."

While written before the war, the above statement is of special interest at the present time. Most of the foreign sources of supply of woollen goods are close to Canada to-day. Canadians will, therefore, be forced to purchase the product of the domestic factories during the next few months at any rate. Their purchase of the Canadian article will be a striking object lesson and will convince the most skeptical that what is made in Canada is equal, value for value, to anything that can be produced abroad.

GERMANS IN POLAND LEAVE ARTILLERY IN THE FIELD

Recoil of Von Hindenburg's Army After Russian Victory Resembles a Rout and Reports Say the Teutons Have Lost an Army Corps ---Trains Sent Out to Get Prisoners---Przemysl Forts Taken.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26. — On the entire front of the Vistula and Warte rivers the Germans have begun a retreat, according to meagre reports received here from the front. At some points, it is said, the backward route resembles a rout, artillery and machine guns and ammunition and commissary stores being left on the field.

Reports reaching here concerning the magnitude of the defeat of the Germans to the west of Lodz, Russian Poland, which in some instances place the German losses as high as an entire army corps, are confirmed by telegraphic despatches from Warsaw. Forty-eight trains have been despatched from Warsaw to bring in the prisoners and wounded. This number of trains, made up of the maximum number of cars of the Russian wide gauge, would carry between 65,000 and 60,000 men.

Military men here express the opinion that the reported defeat was partially due to the failure of the column of Germans from Wielun to defeat the Russians sent against it. Bad roads delayed this German column, it is reported, enabling the Russians to concentrate a sufficient force to repulse it and turn the flanks of the main German column.

There is great jubilation in army circles here, officers expressing the conviction that the enemy has received a crushing blow which is likely to prove decisive in the campaign in Poland.

One detachment of Germans in the recent fighting before Lodz, which the reports arriving here assert was cut to pieces by the Russians, is said to have been on the point of executing a coup disguised as Rusisans. It is alleged that they wore the round, fur-peaked caps which form part of the Caucasian regiments' uniform. They were detected as they were about to turn the Russian flank, by Russian officers, who noted, through their field glasses, slight differences in the uniform and equipment of the Germans.

A significant piece of news regarding the Russian operations comes from Budapest, where it is admitted that the Russian troops again have invaded Hungary and have reached the county of Ung, which is about thirty-five miles south of the Carpathians, and the county of Zemplin, 60 miles to the south of these mountains. The troops which invaded Ung, according to this report, have been driven back to the frontier while action is being taken against those in Zemplin.

The Giornale d'Italia says that the Russians have occupied the outer forts of Przemysl. The Austrians mined the surrounding territory before abandoning these positions for the purpose of destroying the Russians when they should advance, but the latter became suspicious and drove large herds of cattle ahead of their column. When the cattle came within the mined area the explosives detonated with great fury, killing the herd. The Russians then advanced and occupied the forts without incident.

A Warsaw paper in describing the retreat of the King of Saxony from Poland, as seen by eye-witnesses at Czernowich, Rawa and other towns, says that the German Emperor and his staff were so sure of conquering Poland that a triumphal entry had been arranged for the Saxon king into Warsaw when that city should have been taken. He was to be immediately proclaimed King of Poland.

Great receptions were on the program and with this end in view the king was accompanied, not only by court dignitaries, but by a large number of court ladies, young and old. Events turned out differently from what had been expected and the inhabitants of the towns mentioned saw a procession of court personages rushing homeward in motor cars after the Germans met a crushing defeat at the hands of the Russians.

SWEDEN CALLS ON RESERVES

Pro-German Faction May Plunge Her Into War

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—It is learned here that a call has gone forth to Swedish reservists in Canada and the United States to return to their country and prepare to join their regiments. There are many such men in Canada occupied in various walks of life, and if all obey the order many good citizens of the Dominion will leave.

Considerable speculation has been rife recently as to the probable attitude of Sweden in the war. So far she has carefully preserved her neutrality, though it is stated that certain influences have been at work within her borders urging participation. German agents, encouraged by an aristocratic clique in Sweden which is said to be strongly pro-German, have been at work, while it is stated that there has been considerable bitterness over the closing of the North Sea. Fear of Russia is also said to be a strong factor. On the other hand, the Socialistic wing of the Government, which is of considerable strength, is strongly for peace and sympathetic to the allies.

It is not considered here that the call for reservists is a direct and unmistakable indication that the nation has decided to take part in the war, but it has been decided to mobilize against emergency. Sweden's military system is based on conscription, and she is said to be in a position to place 250,000 men in the field within a month.

A VESPER HYMN

The following vesper hymn is being extensively used in England after the Benediction at evening services:

"Be with all the dear ones

In the hours of danger
Keep them calm and bright.

From the battle plain,
From the mine-sown ocean,
Bring them back again."

SINN FEIN PAPERS SEIZED

British Government Acts Promptly With Irish Malcontents.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A determined effort to end the seditious campaign against recruiting in Ireland has been begun by the Government. It was announced yesterday that on Monday detectives, acting on warrants, searched the residence of one of the leaders of the Sinn Fein party in Dublin. Documents and papers belonging to the Sinn Fein volunteers were seized.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Hunt, M.P., asked the Solicitor-General whether his attention had been called to a letter in The Mayo News in Ireland, signed by John McBride, urging Irishmen to prevent recruits from joining the British army, calling the British Empire a "blood-sucking vampire," and asserting that the Nationalist representatives in Parliament wanted Irishmen to "leave their bones in foreign countries, so that none would be left to defend Ireland."

Mr. Hunt further asked whether the censor would allow such letters to be published in the future. Chief Censor Buckmaster replied emphatically, "I will not allow the publication of such letters."

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, replying to questions regarding statements injurious to recruiting, which had been published in "certain Irish papers," stated:—

"I am well aware of the contents of the publication referred to, which seems to have had a large free circulation, particularly in England. The Government is considering what immediate steps shall be taken to secure the suppression of documents and statements of this character. I do not consider them dangerous, but I am sure they insult the sentiment of the vast majority of the Irish people."

Mending Celluloid Articles.

The great variety of articles made of celluloid for domestic and personal use give value to a simple recipe for mending such articles when broken. This consists in dissolving fragments of celluloid in acetone, applying the resulting solution to the broken edges like glue, and then pressing them together. The solution is made in a few minutes and "dries" or hardens within a quarter of an hour. If neatly done it is almost impossible to detect the location of the break. The same method may be used for making small objects, such as boxes, trays, picture frames, etc., from sheets of celluloid. The solution may easily be twisted to any desired shape.

Keep Suez Canal Open

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(By wireless) —The Turkish Government has announced that the Suez Canal will be kept open for traffic, according to a semi-official despatch from Rome.

This is probably a reply to a reported protest from Italy that Turkey would be held fully responsible if operations against Egypt caused the closing of the canal. It is hard to see how Turkey is able to give the assurance above.

Natives Desert Turkey.

ROME, Nov. 26. — A despatch to The Messagero from Athens states that Chief Senussi has asserted that 10,000 troops on the Egyptian frontier have now returned suddenly to Cyrenaica, renouncing all hostility towards the British.

Turkey has been accused of fostering the revolt in Cyrenaica against the British and invade Egypt from the west.

No Politics in The Censorship

LONDON, Nov. 26. — A discussion arose in the House of Commons last night relative to the censorship, and Sir Stanley Buckmaster, director of the official press bureau of the war office, said that the censorship should have no concern with politics and should not in any circumstances be used for coloring opinion in favor of the Government. If that were done, he said, the Government would abuse the confidence of the nation and be guilty of a very base action.

Sir Stanley declared that he had no sympathy with the view that bad news should be prohibited. It was possible, however, in which a full disclosure of events might not be desirable and might even prove disastrous.

ENEMIES UNDER SALARY ?

Parliamentarian Asks Regarding the Prince of Schleswig-Holstein.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The question whether the payment of big annuities was being made to certain relations of the reigning royal family when members of their families were fighting for Germany against Great Britain, was raised in the House of Commons yesterday by Wm. Young, member of Parliament for Perthshire.

Mr. Young asked Premier Asquith whether he was aware that Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, son of Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, a daughter of the late Queen Victoria and aunt of King George, was engaged as a combatant with the Germany army; whether the prince was in this country at the outbreak of the war and whether any effort had been made to detain him.

Mr. Asquith replied curtly that he had been informed that Prince Albert "was serving in a military capacity in Germany," but that he had no knowledge when he left England.

To the inquiry regarding the status of the prince's family, who received $30,000 a year from Britain, Mr. Asquith made no reply.

XMAS DINNER FOR FIREMEN

Santa Claus Forthcoming From City Council

The Fire Department are to hold their annual Christmas dinner this year the same as other years. For a while their chances looked very hopeless and it was about decided to discontinue the entertainment this Christmas owing to the constant purse drain on the firemen from so many sources. When the fact became known it was the cause of great disappointment, but one prominent gentleman in the city council, who would not permit his name to be used, came to the aid of the firemen, and through his generosity made it possible for them to entertain their wives and children this year.

The City Council and their wives are to be the guests of the fire-fighters at Christmas also, and the firemen will act as hosts, carving the turkeys and serving. There is a large room at the hall capable of seating 120 or more people, and the Fire Chief is sure there will be fully that number present at their festivity this year. There will be a big Christmas tree as usual, loaded with gifts for the firemen and their families.

For household use there has been invented a dumb-waiter that may be suspended under a kitchen floor and raised within reach by pressing a button.

METHODS USED BY GERMAN AUTHORITIES IN ATTEMPT TO SUBSTANTIATE CHARGES

The resident correspondent in Berne, Switzerland, of a leading London daily in a communication to his paper, published on October 30th, throws some interesting light on the methods adopted by the German authorities to try and substantiate their oft-denied charges that the British and French armies in Europe have been using dum-dum or explosive bullets. This gentleman writes:—

The Germans continue to hammer away at the dum-dum bullet question. As I telegraphed the other day the German Legation in Berne, and probably all German Legations and Consulates in every neutral country, are inviting all and sundry to go and see the dum-dum bullets in their possession, which have, it is said, been taken from French and English soldiers. The other day the German Legation here invited representatives of the various local papers to see these famous bullets. One of those who complied with the invitation, in this case the editor of the principal paper, who, like every Swiss, knows something about bullets, informs me that after he had examined the bullets supposed to have been taken from the French, he asked where were the English bullets, but was told that they had not yet arrived. "As soon as we receive them, we will let you know," was said, but this is now about ten days ago, and he has as yet heard no word of the arrival of the English dum-dum bullets. Many Swiss daily newspapers, and, as far as I know, all their illustrated supplements, have been induced to publish pictures (from blocks supplied free by Germany) of these celebrated bullets.

The Morning Post correspondent continues:—

The Journal de Geneve, as I also telegraphed, sent Herr Mayor von Stadalhofen, the well-known Swiss rifle champion—a world champion—who carefully scrutinized the alleged dum-dum bullets at the German Legation in Borne. I am now giving his report in full. On arrival at the German Legation, Harr Mayor von Stadalhofen was presented with a note emanating from the office of the secretary for Foreign Affairs in Berlin, to the effect that in the pockets of French prisoners, especially in the region of Schirmeck, Montmedy and Longwy, a quantity of steel covered bullets had been found, the noses of which had evidently been scooped out by mechanical means; and that at Longwy a machine had been discovered which obviously served for the conversion of ordinary bullets into dum-dum ammunition.

Detection by Swiss Expert.

Five bullets were then shown to Harr Meyer von Stadelhofen, who says:—

"I noticed first that the transformation had been effected with the help of rudimentary tools, such as a file, a saw, or puncheon; secondly, that of those five bullets no two were cut in the same place, the mark on the instrument having been made nearer and sometimes farther from the nose of the bullet; thirdly, that the scooping-out was not done in the middle of the bullet; fourthly, that the metal had ben recently worked, for the lead was still VERY bright (the caps are not mine). His conclusions, therefore, are that obviously these bullets were not altered by mechanical means, and that they were not altered at the time or under the conditions referred to in the German note handed to him. To put it plainly, the statements of this note are not borne out by the examination of the bullets with which it was accompanied, while, to put it still more plainly, the famous dum-dum bullets were made in Germany, or at any rate turned into dum-dum bullets there. Herr Moyer von Stadelhofen then asked whether the secretary of the Berlin foreign office had sent the German legation in Berne any medical evidence testifying to the use of dum-dum ammunition, to which the answer was "No," an explanation being added about which an army surgeon's opinion would be highly interesting, that "German doctors consider that it is virtually almost impossible to know whether a wound is or is not due to a dum-dum bullet, owing to the fact that modern bullets have such a rotary movement that they often cause wounds similar to those produced by dum-dum bullets, especially when they do not strike quite direct, as is frequently the case."

Medical Admissions.

It is now generally felt in Switzerland that the whole charge of the use of dum-dum bullets by French and British troops is of a piece with Mr. John Burns' famous speech and Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt's almost equally celebrated interview, so vehemently repudiated by him. It is very curious that on the same day as the Swiss rifle shooting champion report was made two entirely independent statements should have also been published, both indirectly controverting the use of dum-dum bullets by the Allies. One of those statements appeared in a highly pro-Prussian Swiss newspaper. The first and most valuable of them is by a well-known Swiss medical man, Dr. Haborlin, a member of the Zurich medical association, who has just returned from various German military hospitals in Arlen (Grand Duchy of Baden) and Ludwigsburg, where he acted as a volunteer surgeon. Dr. Haberlin states that the most numerous and also the least complex wounds are bullet wounds, most of which can be treated in field ambulances, and are quite cured in from ten to fifteen days on an average. Much more serious are the injuries caused by grenades or shrapnel, men hit by either being hardly able to bear being transported behind the firing line. Dr. Haberlin particularly remarks remarks that he never heard anything of a dum-dum bullet wound.

The other testimony which appeared on the same day as Dr. Haberlin's, against the German assertion of the use of dum-dum bullets by the Allies is that several Bernese ladies who were allowed to visit the German military hospitals in Freiburg-in-Brisgau. After giving a very interesting account of these hospitals, which can accommodate about 5,000 wounded at one time, these witnesses say: "Verwundete durch Dum-dum-gesenosse kennt man in Freiburg nicht" ("wounds caused by dum-dum bullets are unknown in Frieburg."

This account of the Frieburg-in-Brisgau military hospitals bear out all others which have come to my knowledge. No Swiss, whether a medical man or not, who has visited or worked in a German hospital, knows anything of wounds caused by dum-dum bullets.

NEW EFFORT FOR FUND

Publicity Committee and Captains of Teams Are Appointed

A number of the principal business men met today at a luncheon in honor of Mr. Geo. A. Warburton, and at which plans were formed for proceeding with a campaign to raise a substantial Patriotic Fund. Mr. D. O'Connell acted as chairman and introduced Mr. Warburton, who explained for those who had not previously heard him, much of what was said at last night's meeting. He appealed to the patriotism of those present to do something of this nature, because it would be a genuine expression of human feeling. It would make the people more unselfish and be a blessing to the community. The present time was a test of the essential qualities of manhood.

The fund, it was brought out in the discussion, would bridge the period between now and the time of pensions or other government assistance. A family of four or five was to receive approximately $45 a month. The charge that soldiers wives were being well cared for now was not true, as Mayor Buller pointed out. The soldier's pay that was assigned to his family did not arrive until over a month after he went away, and in the meantime they were suffering. Besides, with new contingents forming, this state would continue. Then some soldiers had not assigned as much of their pay as others, for various reasons. In some places, such as villages, there was no local fund, and dependents there had to rely on the Central Patriotic Fund of Ottawa, so that the wealthier places like cities should assist them in providing for soldiers' dependents all over the country. No one, it was thought, could object to $45 for a family of four or five, and the amount varied with the needs and numbers of the families. The national fund was for the whole country. The money should be kept in local banks as long as possible. Mr. Ames of Toronto, gave his services entirely free to the Toronto association.

The publicity committee appointed consists of Messrs. Dobbin, Glover, Cowan and Stocker.

The gentlemen who will act as captains of teams to secure subscriptions are Messrs. Peck, Stocker, Adj. McElhiney, Dr. McNulty, Gillespie, Ball, Duffus, Denham, Picard and Mayor Buller. These gentlemen will meet next Monday to announce their teams and make final arrangements for their campaign.

As to speakers for a public meeting the names of Rev. Canon Cody, Premier Hearst, Leader Rowell and Rev. Father Minehan were mentioned. This matter was left in the hands of the committee. It was decided to use the Opera House for this meeting. The proposed three days for the campaign were Dec. 8, 9, 10. While it was thought a much larger sum than $20,000 could be raised the amount was not definitely decided upon today.

When addressing the largely attended meeting which was held last night Mr. Warburton remarked that it was one of the greatest joys for him to go from place to place and help the people to do that which they would like to do and are willing to do but cannot, through inexperience. He referred to the success of the Patriotic Fund in Toronto, how it was started previously to the organization of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association, and the committee in charge aspired to reaching $500,000. If the collectors have a good cause, have the sympathy of the people and a good organization, they can get the money provided the constituency has the money.

Create Interest.

The initial step is to get everyone interested. No one should be left out of the circle. To get every one interested it is necessary to form a good publicity committee who will create the interest. If money is to be secured there must be enthusiasm. It is possible for a small number to get together and get money from big givers but the idea is to get something from everyone and to do this the publicity committee must get every one enthusiastic. In Toronto one of the principal advertisers of the city was chairman of the publicity committee. In the centre of the city an office was fitted up as the headquarters and suitably decorated. All through the city and on autos banners bearing the words "Patriotic War Relief Fund. Give! - Give! Give!" were hung.

At the close of the first day in Toronto $90,000 was turned in at the luncheon. The luncheon is held daily during the campaign and at it the captains of the various teams give in their returns. The members of these teams and other workers must give their whole time to the campaign, must give up business and pleasure, even attention to their families for three or four days as the case may be. At the close of the second day in Toronto the total of $130,000 was turned in and immediately the slogan of $500,000 for the Patriotic Fund was changed to $750,000 for the Patriotic Fund. At the close of the fourth and last day the total subscribed was $883,000 and it has been steadily increasing ever since. Mr. Warburton urged his listeners not to think that because Toronto is a large city that the task was easy. It was hard work but the result was not only felt in Toronto but it stirred the whole Dominion and when Montreal went about the work in the same manner that city far surpassed Toronto.

Mr. Warburton had been manager of the organization in Toronto and the Young Men's Christian Association made arrangements with the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association by which he would go to other cities and assist in the work. His expenses are paid by the Patriotic Fund Association and his salary is from the Y. M. C. A.

The speaker went on and told of the success in other centres such as Hamilton, London, Berlin, Ottawa and Kingston and in each city the same plan was put into force. A good organization was inaugurated and social, religious and racial differences were covered up. Mr. Warburton's experiences in the Capital were rather humorous. The Ottawa campaign was a big success and the one point he made clear from the beginning was that the committee and officials were to do as he asked for in the middle of the campaign he had not time to explain every step.

"Cut out the Hurrahs."

Mr. Warburton remarked that if the committee commences the work with a "two-by-four" proposition ahead of it the men interested will be "two-by-four." The harder the task is the better. In Peterboro where every one is speaking of raising $20,000 it will be just as easy to raise $50,000, that is if the city has the money. Of course it is up to the committee to determine that. He warned against starting off with a great hurrah and then not acting. He remarked that it is an excellent idea to have speeches and orations but while these speeches are being made it is a good plan to have a small body of workers meeting in some other place and getting ready to start out the next morning.

A campaign, in the speaker's opinion, is a good thing for the city for it deepens the spirit of the citizens. There's not a man, woman or child who doesn't think it a sacred obligation to look after the dependents of the soldiers who are fighting our battles at the front. It is very necessary that the spirit is found in everyone. When a poor man gives what he can it is just as welcome as a large subscription from one of the wealthy for it bespeaks the fact that patriotism, which is necessitated throughout the Empire, is imbued in every one.

Mr. Warburton further remarked that the idea of having the patriotic fund is not only to look after the poor of the large centres but even in small villages and country districts where there is no local fund. It is not Canadian like for large municipalities not to assist the dependents of soldiers in smaller places.

In reference to the organization Mr. Warburton emphasized having a good man at the head of it and also good captains for the various teams. He suggested that the captains be allowed to select their own assistants. It is very necessary that the organization be a good one. Enthusiasm is a good feature but enthusiasm and intelligence is what counts. Mr. Warburton's final advice was to have business men interested if the businmenn are not interested the idea might as well be forgotten. What ever amount is aspired to it will be exceeded and for those who take hold of it, "they will," concluded the speaker, "thank God all their lives."

Work for Unemployed.

Mr. Warburton was asked if he thought it wise to divide the fund with the Canadian Association but he desired not to answer the question as it should be decided by the local committee. One thing he did say however was that some sort of a campaign should be staged in aid of giving employment to the unemployed. Factories should be visited and urged to take on a few more men.

The committee, composed of D' O'Connell, F. D. Kerr, John Crane, A. W. Cressman and J. A. Aylmer, was selected, which met Mr. Warburton immediately afterwards and at luncheon today. Before the meeting adjourned Bishop O'Brien spoke a few words of commendation of the manner in which Mr. Warburton instilled patriotism into his listeners and expressed himself as being positive that the campaign would be a success.

NO ATTEMPT ON MINISTER'S LIFE

Report Was Pipe Dream Pure and Simple

LONDON, ONT., Nov. 26. — Chief of Police Williams emphatically denied a report in circulation during the day that letters found in the possession of three Turks arrested here indicated that an attempt was to be made upon the life of Major-General Hughes upon the occasion of the minister of militia's visit here.

According to the police, the men were arrested merely in compliance with a general order sent out from Ottawa following Turkey's entry into the war, calling for the arrest of all Turks in all Canadian towns and cities. Nothing to show that the men arrested here were planning any hostile acts was discovered, according to the local authorities.

"The report that an attempt was to be made upon the life of General Hughes here is a pipe dream pure and simple," declared Chief Williams. "Deny the story most emphatically."

ZEEBRUGGE IS WIPED OUT

"Pistol Pointed at the Heart of England" is no More.

Chance of Immediate Raid on Great Britain is Destroyed by Bombardment of Coast Town Where Torpedo Boats Were Being Made.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—British warships, probably assisted by French men-of-war, have practically destroyed the town of Zeebrugge, West Flanders, the most important port of Belgium held by the Germans, in so far as naval operations against this country are concerned.

It is reported here that a flotilla of heavy battleship threw a torrent of shells into the town for three hours, destroying work which has required many weeks to complete, reducing six new German torpedo boats in process of completion and scattering to the four winds of heaven great quantities of war munitions. The exact time of this action cannot be placed from available reports.

Soon after Antwerp fell Zeebrugge was occupied by the invaders, who lost no time turning it into a base for the projected aerial and sea raid on Britain. Train after train of ammunition and supplies was poured into the town for several weeks, the Solvay Military Works, on the Bruges Ship Canal, one of the best equipped arsenals in Belgium, was eagerly seized upon and turned into German uses. Extensive plans had been under way for building Zeppelins at Zeebrugge and the delicate apparatus for generating the hydrogen necessary to the operation of these big crafts was already installed, while sheds were building in which they were to be housed.

In addition, a comprehensive system of earthworks was rapidly encircling the town and heavy artillery had been posted advantageously. In short, Zeebrugge was in an admirable state of defence and the wheels of its plants were busy turning out military necessities.

All this has been wiped out in a short three hours and the new "pistol pointed at the heart of the English" is no more. Meagre details of the bombardment say that the German guns replied vigorously to the fire of the warships for a time, but that this fire was ineffectual, as the battleships stood out of range.

This last fact is significant, indicating that the biggest vessels of the British fleet, and presumably of the French fleet also took part in the attack. When the Germans saw that their guns were impotent, they attempted to save the valuable stores brought to Zeebrugge, but this effort is also reported as unavailing.

The following official communication was issued last night:—

"This was a quiet day. There was no alteration of any part of the entire front."

A succinct review of operations along the allied front in France is furnished by the French communique of the afternoon, which says:

"From the North Sea to Ypres there have been no infantry attacks. Between Langwarck and Zonnebeke we have gained territory. In the vicinity of La Bassee the Indian troops recaptured from the enemy certain trenches which had been taken from them the evening before. From La Bassee to Soissons there has been complete calm.

"We have made some slight progress near Berry-au-Bac, and in the Argonne.

"At Bethincourt, northwest of Verdun, a German attack has been repulsed. A suspension of hostilities, requested by the enemy, has been refused.

"In the region of Pont-a-Mousson our artillery found it possible to bombard Arneville. Nothing has happened in the Vosges."

GERMAN EFFRONTERY

If the Germans who reside and do business in London, England, are as egregiously and offensively impertinent as those Germans in Western Canada who recently petitioned the Dominion authorities at Ottawa to have the Canadian newspapers refrain from criticizing Germany and the Kaiser's conduct of the war, it is easy to understand and sympathize with the outbreak of feeling which led London mobs to sack the shops and houses of some of the expatriated sons of the Kaiser. Every day brings to light new evidence of German treachery—of her misuse and abuse of the hospitality extended by England and other countries to her people and of their sneaking, lying despicable conduct in [illegible] a fawning friendship in order to gain a secret advantage over their unsuspecting hosts. Whatever the outcome of the war, it will take many years to restore the Germans to anything like the esteem in which they were held by other nations before the war. Suspicion will always be the reward of treachery.

There are many stories afloat in Montreal as to the underhand work that is even to-day being carried on by German and Austrian residents and their sympathizers in this city and throughout Canada, and it should surprise none if an angered mob, coming in contact with this work, should at any time undertake to wreak vengeance upon these alien people, who have long been treated with too great tolerance. The instance of the Western Germans in petitioning for the suppression of the Canadian press is typical of their blind ineptitude and their singular want of ordinary understanding. I wonder what would happen to a body of Britishers resident in Germany who would send a petition to the Kaiser asking him to suppress unfavorable expressions towards the British people in the newspapers of Germany?—From Beck's Weekly, Montreal.

GERMAN RELIEF MEASURES

Sum of $1,250,000,000 Provided to Relieve Distress in Country.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(Via London.) —The Reichstag has received a draft of the second supplementary imperial budget for the year 1914.

This empowers the Imperial Chancellor for the purpose of meeting extraordinary expenses again to raise 5,000,000,000 marks ($1,250,000,000) in the form of credit. Furthermore, the Chancellor is empowered to issue treasury notes up to 40,000,000 marks ($100,000,000) above the amount prescribed by the budget, for the temporary strenthening of the ordinary working capital of the Imperial Treasury. Of this amount, one-half is destined for the support of individuals affected by the war, while the other half is to be spent in the support of communities and for the succor of individual cases of distress.

THE PRISONERS OF WAR HAVE AN EASY TIME

Britain Feeds them the Same As Her Soldiers and Permits Them to Purchase Extras

A round of visits to several of the camps in England in which prisoners of war, combatant and non-combatant, are in custody reveals that causes of complaints have now been practically all removed or will soon be, says a writer in the London Daily Chronicle. The camp at Frimley was the one chiefly concerned.

At the outset the complaint was made that the German and Austrian prisoners were being treated in a more generous fashion than Britain's own troops and recruits, and there is little doubt that this was the case for a considerable period. Now the rule is army rations and whatever the prisoners like to buy in addition.

There are some 20 of these camps all over the country, and although it was impossible to instal at once in the open spaces sanitary conveniences with up-to-date flushing arrangements, everything was done short of this to conform with hygienic requirements in this respect. The chief inspector of these camps, Sir Henry Thornhill, makes it his business to look after this and kindred matters, being assisted in his work by two senior medical officers who are continually making a circuit of the camps.

Follows Hague Agreements

The absence of soft beds for non-combatants of good position can be remedied by those with money to buy them. The prisoners are allowed to receive money from their relatives on the continent. They can write home twice a week, though all letters have to pass the censor, together with all other letters which leave the country.

Britain is adhering to the terms of The Hague Convention No. 4 of the Conference of 1907 regarding the treatment of prisoners of war. All their personal belongings of a non-militarity character remain their own. They are freely using the privilege of sending and receiving letters and parcels post free, and presents are admitted duty free. Ample arrangements have been made for the prisoners to worship and attend religious services according to creed.

Article XVII, of Convention 4 says that officers taken prisoners shall receive the same rate of pay as officers of corresponding rank in the country where they are detained, the amount to be ultimately refunded by their own Government. Accordingly, as soon as the British Government learns that officer captives in Germany are receiving full pay, the German officers in England will be given the same. Pending a communication on this point, through a neutral intermediary, the officers in England are receiving half-pay.

Luxuries Can be Bought

The daily rations are: Meat, ½ pound; white bread, 1½ pounds; vegetables (potatoes, carrots and so on), 8 ounces; butter, 1 ounce; tea, ¼ ounce; and the usual condiments. They can supplement this from the canteen with fruit, biscuits, jam, and groceries. Tobacco and cigarettes can also be bought, and the commandant sees that the price is a fair one.

The men, just like recruits, have to provide their own cooks for each mess, which is given the proper utensils, while each man is provided with knife and fork, spoon, and mug. Payment of $1.25 to $1.75 a week is made to those selected to do the cooking or the other work of the camp.

Two army blankets per man is the rule, but owing to the national shortage in these articles there has been a delay in some cases in providing a second blanket; this will be remedied before long.

For those actually in need of new clothes the Government have supplied a suit of serviceable cloth and a full rig out of warm underclothing, together with a brush and comb and towels. In the camps under cover there are shower-baths and hot water, and every man must have a bath once a week at least.

Maintaining Discipline

There is a dispensary, at which the prisoners can buy simple remedies. Each camp has a hospital in charge of army doctors, and an isolation ward for infectious cases. German and Austrian books are available for those who desire them.

As for discipline, the camps are ruled under the authority of the War Office—practically martial law. The commandant can inflict such light penalties as stopping letters or books for trivial offences, while a court-martial of three officers meet to investigate any serious charges.

Steps are being taken to give those who can afford to pay separate quarters and servants to do their domestic work.

The great problem is the difficulty of finding thousands of men useful occupation without competing with British labor. Several utilitarian suggestions have been made which are impracticable owing to the necessity of keeping the prisoners under guard.

EARLIER PEACE IS EXPECTED

Italy's Probable Participation Might Shorten War

LONDON, Nov. 26—That Italy will find a casus belli against Austria soon and pour half a million troops into the balance on the allies' side is the general belief there to-day, as a result of the latest developments in Rome.

Concurrent with this is a belief that the war will end much sooner than has been generally predicted. Prior to the opening of Parliament few believed that the war would last less than twelve months, and the greatest hope was for peace in the fall of 1915. But in the debate at the opening of Parliament the Prime Minister remarked, apparently quite casually, that the war might be over earlier than many supposed. He is supposed to have had in his mind a belief that before long Italy will take sides with the allies.

That would certainly shorten the war, as, from now on, either side that can suddenly throw half a million fresh troops into the fighting line, either east or west, will win.

German Diplomats Fired.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The German Emperor, according to a despatch from The Hague to the Exchange Telegraph Co., has ordered Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, to notify all the German diplomatic agents who hitherto have been employed in the countries now at war with Germany that they can consider themselves free to choose another career.

There is also talk of an arrangement between Roumania and Bulgaria, in fact, of a reorganization of the Balkan League which would bring all the Balkan states over to the side of the allies.

BIG STATION IS WORKING

Colombia Permitted Germans to Operate Wireless Plant.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Charles Roberts, Under Secretary of the Colonial Department, speaking on behalf of the Foreign Office, made a statement in the House of Commons to the effect that information in the possession of the Government indicated that the Governments of Colombia and Ecuador had failed in certain respects to observe an attitude of strict neutrality.

The particular cause of complaint against Colombia has reference to a high power wireless station.

The British charge d'affaires endeavored repeatedly, said Mr. Roberts, to induce the Government to remove the staff of Germans at the wireless station and institute strict control in order to prevent the transmission of messages to belligerent merchant ships lying in Colombia ports. Failing in this the charge sought to have the station closed. The report received from the charge leaves it in doubt whether steps taken by the Colombia Government are of an effective nature.

German warships, he said, had converted certain islands belonging to Ecuador into naval bases. Great Britain was not yet aware what result had attended the protest made to the United States.

ZAPATA IN CAPITAL.

Carranza's Commander-in-Chief Evacuates Mexico City.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26. — The forces of Gen. Zapata occupied Mexico City Tuesday night and are maintaining order, according to official telegrams from Mexico City, dated yesterday, and received here late last night.

Mr. Stilliman, U. S. consul, reported that the Zapata forces, after sharp fighting in the outskirts of the Mexican capital Tuesday afternoon, in which sixty soldiers were reported killed, entered just as the forces of Gen. Blanco evacuated the city. There was some disorder and looting in the brief interval between the evacuation by Blanco and the arrival of the Zapata troops, but the city was quiet immediately afterwards. The convention forces, under Gen. Villa, according to Mr. Stilliman, were expected late yesterday.

The Brazilian Minister said he had received full assurances from the Zapatistas that they would maintain order. The Villa forces are expected to arrive at any moment.

Quebec Legislature Will be Asked to Amend Statutes

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—A delegation representing the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Women and Children will wait on Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, some time during the next session of the Legislature and ask for amendments to the statutes compelling municipalities to keep their poor, to pay prisoners for the work for the benefit of their wives, and to impose sentences of flogging on wife-beaters.

His Experience.

The man who had made his pile in the South American trade advertised for a valet.

He looked the first applicant over.

"Have you valeted long?" he asked.

"Me?" replied the applicant. "Why, I'm a reg'lar valetudinarian!"

He got the job.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Psalms Not Barred.

The other evening Miss Y., a maiden lady of uncertain years, suspecting the cook was entertaining her beau downstairs, called Martha and inquired whether she did not hear some one talking with her.

"Oh, no, ma'am!" cried the quick witted Martha. "It was only me singing a psalm."

"Very good," returned Miss Y. significantly. "You may amuse yourself with psalms, but let's have no hims."

INVASION BY ALLIES IS FEARED

Germans Are Strengthening Old Fortresses and Making Other Preparations

LONDON, Nov. 26.—An invasion by the allies is feared by Germany, according to The Copenhagen Evening News, which reports that extensive preparations are being made to guard against such an eventuality.

The News says it has learned from eyewitnesses that the Germans are strengthening old fortresses in the former Danish territory of Schleswig-Holstein, as well as a line of entrenchments called the Dannewerk along the northern side of the Kiel Canal. It is thus hoped to protect the canal against attacks from the north, for it is on the shores of Schleswig, according to the reports, that an invasion is feared. All the German islands in the North Sea, it is said, are now closely guarded, and strongly fortified positions are being erected on the shores of Holstein and along the western side of the River Elbe.

A Central News despatch from Glasgow states that the structural engineers and bridge builders throughout the country are being requested to stand ready to rush repair work in Belgium and France. From this it is assumed as undoubted evidence that conditions are favorable to the allied troops.

It would appear from the above despatch, since the Government have notified the bridge builders of Scotland to be in readiness, that the allied forces in northern France and Belgium were meeting with success, and were preparing to drive the Germans back into their own country. If the enemy were retreating it would be necessary to have bridge repair work done quickly to facilitate the allied advance towards Germany.

SHAG WOULD NOT GIVE UP CAPITAL FOR FEDERAL BERTH

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—Frank Shaughnessy has been tendered an offer to manage a Federal League club for the season of 1915. The Senatorial leader, however, is strong on organized ball and anyhow expects to be in Ottawa again next summer. Incidentally the Denver Club of the Western League has renewed its offer to Shaughnessy to manage that team next year, so that in case the Canadian holds up operations for a season, the big pilot will still be in action.

Trade Pending.

Negotiations are now on foot between the Ottawas and another Canadian League club for a big trade in which a crack battery may come to the Capital in exchange for two of the well-known performers on the Canadian League champions for the past two seasons. As the deal has not gone through, no names were given out by the clubs concerned.

WORLD SERIES MAY INCLUDE NINE GAMES INSTEAD OF SEVEN

Ban Johnson Makes Announcement — Admission Prices to be Lowered

Chicago, Nov. 26.—The baseball series for the championship will include nine games, instead of seven, next year, and prices will be lower, according to B. B. Johnson, President of the American League, when he made public yesterday a letter he had received from Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission.

The question of cutting prices for the world series was considered at a recent meeting of the American League here, and after a tentative agreement was reached Johnson submitted the proposal to the National League club owners.

Herrmann's letter said the National owners had agreed to the change, and that a plan would be worked out and adopted at the annual meeting in January. Some of the club owners, he said, had objected to cutting the prices on the grounds that it would decrease the amount given to the players. According to proposed changes, the players will share in the first five, instead of four, games, so their total will not be decreased.

Herrmann Denies It.

Cincinnati, Nov. 26. — Chairman August Herrmann of the National Commission denied emphatically here last night that he had ever written to President Ban Johnson of the American League advocating that the number of games in the world's series be changed from seven to eleven and the prices reduced. "I certainly wrote no such letter," said Herrmann. "So far as I know, the matter has not even been considered by the National League club owners. Newspaper talk on the subject is the only information I have, and even that is meagre."

Montreal, Nov. 26. — Mr. S. E. Mr. Lichtenhein is for war all the time until either the Feds or organized ball is licked. Mr. Lichtenhein has several propositions to urge at the meeting for the readjustment of the International League constitution.

ANOTHER ONE SIGNED.

CLEAR THE AIR AND GET BUSY

Some Hockey Matters Require Attention at Once

The meeting of the executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club, which was called for last evening, did not materialize, as several of the members were desirous of being present at the entertainment given the Belmont Club at the Conservatory last evening by Asa Huycke's Minstrels. It is to be regretted that it was necessary to postpone the metting until Monday evening, as the opening of the season is about a month away and preliminary arrangements are far from being completed. For instance, there isn't a man on the executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club who can state positively whether this city is to have a junior O. H. A. team this season or not. Matters such as this should have been cleared away a month or two ago, instead of being allowed to hang fire till the last minute.

Only too often fans sit back and remark that everything will turn out all right. But the question is: "Will everything turn out all right?" It goes without saying that the juniors should be training since the first of November at the latest, and as long as dissention is present the team can not be gotten out to train. If training does not soon commence, the juniors might as well not go on the ice, for if the boys are not in condition they cannot stand the pace. There is plenty of good material in the city this year for a junior team. The Bear Cats went to the semi finals two years ago, but comparing them with the material on hand this year, it would seem that the material for the 1915 team is far superior. Where is there a defence in the junior O. H. A. circles that can compare with Long and Morrow, both men tipping the scales around 180? On the forward line there are Knapman, Jackson, Lornie Rose, Graham, O'Connell, and many others. If these boys hit the ice in shape they'll go to the top.

Just where the trouble lies is hard to point to with any degree of certainty. The Peterboro Hockey Club claim that they are willing to run the junior O. H. A. team if the Peterboro Athletic Club officially acquaints their executive with the information as to whether the club intends entering a junior team or not. Several officials of the P. A. C. informed us several weeks ago that their organization intends to pass up hockey this wintetr but why don't they inform the Hockey Club and give the latter-mentioned body a chance to get busy? There may be fault, and we think there is fault on both sides, but the only logical way for the difficulty to be overcome is for representatives of both clubs to meet on Monday evening and clear matters up. It isn't a matter of permitting another man to "put one over"; it is a matter of utmost importance, the result of which will have great bearing on future hockey in this city.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26. — Harvard's cross-country coach, Alfred Shrubb, concluded his duties at Cambridge yesterday and left for his home in Toronto. There he will put his business affairs in shape preparatory to leaving for England, where he will rejoin his old regiment for service in the European war.

Shrubb is an ardent Britisher, and would have been in the war along with his countrymen before now had he been able to get away from Harvard. He has coached the Crimson for five years, and has always had his team at or near the front. Harvard finished second to Cornell in the intercollegiate race this season.

Russian Official Report Shows Long List of Victories.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The following official communication from the Russian General Staff was given out here last night:—

"The fighting near Lodz still continues. The large German forces which on Nov. 20 broke into the region of Strykow, Brzeziny, Kulazki, Ragow and Tuszyn—(all these places are in the vicinity of Lodz) — are pressed on every side by our troops, and are now attempting by a supreme effort to cut through toward the north.

"To the south of Koluszki station some scattered units are roaming about. We captured prisoners, some heavy ordnance and field guns.

"The outcome of the battle of Nov 24 was to our advantage.

"In the fighting near Czenstochowa and Cracow, our troops manifestly have the upper hand.

"Beyond the Carpathian passes we are surrounding large bodies of Austrian troops in the vicinity of Mezolaborcz. In this region we captured a general, forty officers, more than 3,500 soldiers, and convoys and machine guns. Near the pass giving access to the Hungarian plain we occupy the city of Homonna."

That the Turkish forces are still retreating before the Russians in the region around Erzerum is recorded in the following statement from the General Staff of the Russian army in the Caucasus, made public here last night:—

"In the direction of Erzerum our troops continue to chase before them the bulk of the Turkish forces they have defeated. We are capturing many prisoners and much ammunition and stores.

"The roads along which the Turkish troops are retreating are strewn with frozen bodies of their dead.

"The prisoners taken are unanimous in declaring that the defeated army is making haste with a view of seeking shelter behind the forts at Erzerum and Deve Boyun.

"The situation elsewhere remains unchanged."

One Way to View It.

Queen Victoria made a visit to the Trossachs in 1859. On the road between Callender and Kilmanog the Laird of Leny displayed a number of banners bearing words of welcome. But on the return to Callender the mottoes were indecipherable through the backs of the banners. Some one suggested that with a little extra expenditure "Welcome, Victoria," might have been inscribed on both sides. "There's nae need o' that," said old James Buchan of Kilmanog. "The queen will just think that the English letters as seen through the bunting are Gaelic."—London Express.

Welsh National Costume.

When the French made a half hearted attempt to invade Great Britain in 1797 a landing was made at Fishguard, Wales, but the soldiers of Napoleon were frightened off by the sight of a great number of Welsh girls and women, whom they mistook at a distance for soldiers on account of their red dresses and tall black hats. That is still the national costume of the Welsh women.

Canada's Real Fighting Force

There has been a good deal of talk regarding the power of various nations to put unlimited supplies of men into the field. So far as Canada is concerned, there is an enormous reservoir of men of fighting age still undrawn upon. The census of 1911 showed that the Dominion had 385,858 men between 20 and 24 years of age inclusive, 370.494 from 25 to 29, 310,339 from 30 to 34, and 287,875 from 35 to 39. Of this aggregate of 1,324,563 men the 48,000 mobilised are less than 4 per cent. If the hundred thousand men, that many regard as Canada's minimum contribution if she is to do her share, were raised they would represent less than 8 per cent of Canada's males between 20 and 39.

Silent Gun Used.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — The British "eye-witness" gives through the war bureau a statement in part as follows:

"In our centre the enemy employed a silent gun, which may be pneumatic or worked by some mechanical contrivance. There is no report of the discharge, the projectile travels through the air without any warning made by an ordinary shell, and the first notice to be received of its arrival is the detonation. So far the weapon has done no damage."

The meeting of St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society on Friday evening of this week in St. Alphonsus Lyceum will be of special importance as it will be the last meeting at which Dean McColl will be present as honorary president. Papers will be read on France and Russia by Mrs. Law and Mrs. McElderry, respectively. A good musical program will also be rendered.

BUSINESS GIRLS ENTHUSIASTIC

A very enthusiastic meeting of the business girls of Peterboro was held on Wednesday evening at the rooms of the Peterboro Typewriter Agency.

This meeting was called for the purpose of organizing a club among the girls in the various offices in town, and, judging from the number of those present, there will be no difficulty in carrying out this scheme.

The immediate work on hand is to provide small Christmas presents for the families of those who are at present out of work.

By kind permission of Mr. Travers, the next meeting is to be held in the Bank of Montreal chambers, Wednesday evening at half-past seven, and it is hoped that all the business girls will endeavor to be present.

Instruction in First Aid And Ambulance Work

Very much interest is being displayed in the organization of the Red Cross and Ambulance Brigades to be formed at the Salvation Army on Friday night at eight o'clock. Dr. Sutton, who has had a great deal of experience in army ambulance work and has just finished a course of lectures at the Y. M. C. A., has very kindly volunteered his services to the class and will deliver lectures on first aid and ambulance work.

Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney as well as the whole corps feel deeply grateful for this voluntary service, and intend to make every effort to respond to Dr. Sutton's teaching and to make themselves generally useful in the community even if there is no war.

A Mile of Pennies

The object of the attempt to secure a "mile of pennies" for the public department of the Y. W. C. A. was not only to secure financial support, but to make the Association better known throughout the city, to invite all the girls in Peterboro to know and enjoy the privileges of the Association building. It is realized that the generosity of the public is taxed to the uttermost these days, and many thanks are due those who contributed toward the "mile of pennies," the amount being $194.51. Many questions have been asked as to what part of the work this money is to be expended in. The Association in Peterboro has two departments — the residential, or boarding department, which is self-supporting, and for which no subscriptions are solicited, and the public department, which is supported by its membership fees and public subscriptions. The object and work of the public department will be explained fully later for the benefit of those interested.

A portable motion-picture projector which weighs but 25 pounds and can be carried in a case twice the size of an ordinary suit case, has been invented.

The seating capacity of St. Alban's Mission, North Monaghan, was taxed to its utmost last night when Mr. Spence, the missionary in charge, promoted the first of a series of social evenings to be held at intervals during the winter months. Mr. Jubb, church warden presided, and a very pleasing musical program was rendered, entirely by local talent, those taking part eing Messrs. Jubb, sen. and jun., Walworth, Hawke, Cutts, Mrs. Simmons, Miss Jubb and Master Cutts. Mr. Spence acted as accompanist. During the interval refreshments were served by the ladies.

C. Chewett and Co., 17-19 King St. E., Toronto, were the printers.

There is also another bill, advertising Napoleon and his troupe at the old town hall. The town hall was used before the old Opera House was built as an Opera House.

SUPPLIES FOR SOLDIER BOYS

An Appeal Made on Behalf of Men at Salisbury Plain

The letter which appears below was received by the president of the Women's Art Association and the executive felt that as there had been so many societies formed for the purpose of looking after the needs of the soldiers, it would be better to cooperate with the Woman's War Fund executive and concentrate the work as much as possible into one channel.

Every one knows of the splendid work of Miss Plummer and Miss Arnoldi at Valcartier and at Salisbury Plain, in the interests of the soldier's welfare and comfort. But the task is great and helpers are needed. Anyone who is willing to assist in any way, can report to the convener of the War Fund committee, at the armouries, Wednesday afternoons.

The letter, written by Miss Plummer, is as follows:—

The Ladies' Empire Club,
69 Grosvenor Street,
London, W.
(personal address)
October 27th, 1914.

Dear Madam,

We are addressing this appeal to you in the hope that you will interest your Association in our work and also make it known as widely as possible among those women in your locality who are working for our soldiers.

When the Canadian Expeditionary Force left Canada Miss Arnoldi and I were appointed by the Minister of Militia to accompany them and continue the work we had begun at Valcartier, namely the distribution of Field Comforts. This work has been approved by the British War Office. It was realized in Canada as it is here that it is very necessary and important. The women of Canada are working so hard and so enthusiastically that we feel that they will appreciate to the full a direct chanel for their supplies and also the personal touch which it gives. Very careful enquiries will be made and detailed lists obtained from each regiment as to their exact requirements.

The Canadian War Contingent Association which has been formed here to further the interests of our force in every way has among its objects the collection and distribution of Field Supplies. The Hon. Geo. Perley, M.P., is the President. It may be interesting to note that each colony has a War Contingent Association. The Canadian Association has elected us to their Executive and has appointed us their distributing agents. In this way overlapping or wasted effort will be prevented.

We shall need vast quantities of comforts and also money for an Emergency Fund. The men already here still require things in large numbers. Whole regiments have no cholera belts and many others are only partly supplied with these and other warm necessities.

The English papers are full of appeals for comforts for the British tommies and it behoves us Canadian women to look after our own men. When once they are at the front there will be much replenishing to do and it is proposed to have a distributing depot at the base wherever that may be. We shall be at Salisbury Plain for the present and supplies will be received and acknowledged from there. Free transport is promised and arrangements are being made for a receiving and forwarding depot at Montreal as the November sailings are all from there. Notice as to this will appear shortly in the Canadian press.

To give you some idea of how necessary they consider comforts over here I may say that the Queen has appealed for 300,000 belts and 300,000 socks and Field Marshal Sir John French has made a special and urgent appeal for the immediate dispatch of belts. The demand is so great that it is very hard to get these supplies here, and we feel also that Canadian industries should benefit by the supplies for Canadians. We beg therefore that you will all come to our aid and make this work the big and complete thing it should be.

We shall be pleased to give any further information desired.

All packages should be clearly addressed to Miss Plummer, care of Montreal Depot, and very plainly marked "FIELD COMFORTS."

All money should be sent to Miss Arnoldi, "FIELD COMFORTS' FUND," 69 Grosvenor Street, London, W.

The following is a list of the requirements:— Money for Emergency Fund. We should have 50,000 cholera belts. Asked for in thousands. Woven recommended. Socks. We cannot have enough. The more hand-knit the better. These are the first and most important needs; others are:

Handkerchiefs. Coloured. Khaki preferred.
Sleeping Caps.
Mufflers.
Wristlets.
Flannel Shirts.
Underwear.

All outside articles of clothing should be khaki or grey in colour.

If sending large quantities it is strongly recommended that they be put in cotton bags of 50 or 100 and packed in small packing cases. A complete list of contents with name and address of sender should be securely fastened inside the box.

We hope very much to have your support in this work, and we shall anxiously await your answer as to how you can help us.

Yours sincerely,
MARY PLUMMER.

P.S. — Pipes, cigarettes and other Christmas presents will be very welcome.

A LUCKY FIND FOR THE C.P.R.

A discovery which may mean much to the Province of Ontario has been made at Caledonia Springs, namely, that the waters of one of the four springs is strongly radio-active. A recent visitor who had hitherto gone for his cure to the Austrian resort at Badgastein was prevented this year by the war and tried the Canadian spring. He was struck with the similarity of the waters which on test was found to be due to the presence of radium. The last official analysis was made in 1903 before the ramifications of radium were fully recognized, but Professor Ruttan of McGill has been commissioned to make a new complete analysis. The value of a genuine radium spring in Europe is calculated to average from two to three million dollars, owing to the number of invalids who are attracted to such a spring.

REVISED LIST ALARM BOXES

Revised lists of fire alarm box locations have just been issued by Fire Chief Howard, and copies should be secured and tacked up ready for quick reference. People should know said the chief where their nearest fire alarm box is situated and should learn how to send in an alarm of fire from an alarm box. Break the glass, open the large door, pull down the hook once and let go. Remain at the box and direct the firemen to the fire. "Most people run back after sending in an alarm," remarked the chief, "or else call up on the telephone and excitedly shout 'send up the brigade, there's a fire here,' and slam down the receiver."

Singing Before Royalty

The Part Mary Garden Found to Be the Very Hardest.

Mary Garden, the famous opera singer, says that it bores her to sing before kings. Her highly personal comments on some of the royalty of Europe reproduced below are taken from an article in the American Magazine in which she gives an intimate and extended account of her experiences on the stage:

"Singing before royalty is perhaps more of a professional than a social distinction. I have done it many times, but it bores me to distraction. It is such a nuisance. I never sang for the czar. But I did sing before the English court, the old court of Edward and Alexandra. The king slept through it all, as heavy a sleep as I have ever seen. But the queen would always pat his hand at the time to applaud and he would wake up.

"The king of Greece, a brother of Alexandra, was a special friend of mine. He used often to come to where I was singing. He told his sister of his admiration for me, and she had me come to Windsor to sing. While there I would sing and courtesy and walk off again.

"I am afraid I'm an anarchist in my heart. I don't love to courtesy. There are some who are not kings—such as Marconi, who has done big things—to whom I would go down on my knees because of their achievements, but I just had to get my courage in my two hands to courtesy to the king of England. It went against me."

C.G.E. Men Are Grateful to Ladies

The Review is in receipt of the following letter expressing the thanks of the eight Peterborough Engineers in Halifax to those of this city who assisted in making the caps, wristlets and housewives for them.

The letter reads as follows:

M.C.E. Camp, McNab's Island, Halifax, N.S., Nov. 23rd, 1914.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly extend, through your columns, our hearty thanks and appreciation, to those in Peterborough, who have contributed to a "box" containing caps, wristlets, and housewives, sent to the eight C.G.E. men stationed here. Special thanks, I believe, are due Mrs. Hazen Ritchie and Miss Layfield.

The gifts are certainly a credit to the donors. They surpass in design and neatness anything of their kind here. "Made in Peterborough" has now a special significance in camp.

Although we are in a rather exposed position here, we now feel we are better able to brave the elements for the winter, and also hope to be able before the war is ended to exhibit something "Made in Germany."

Very truly yours,
H. S. McKEAN,

On behalf of the C.G.E. Squad.

A letter has also been received from the C. G. E. men stationed at Quebec. They have received the gifts of the ladies, and are loud in their appreciation.

GERMAN GENERALS PUT HEADS IN NOOSE, AND RUSSIANS PULL THE ROPE

One Army Corps Surrenders and Another is Put to Rout --- Kaiser's Telegrams and Commands Did it

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 27. — The Petrograd correspondent of the Paris Matin says one German army corps surrounded by Russians surrendered in a body, and another cut off has now been completely put to rout. Russians are attacking along the Cracow-Czenstochowa line with redoubled intensity.

The Daily Mail correspondent wires that the great news has not been made public in the Russian capital, but the embassies have it, and everybody is on the tiptoe of expectation.

The Kaiser's hysterical telegrams imploring and commanding his generals to hurl back the Russian armies and save Germany from invasion caused them to put their heads into a noose which the Russians are waiting to pull tight.

The haul of prisoners, already enormous, must within a few days be greater still.

KNOWS OF NO GRAFT ON THE TRENT CANAL

Mr. William Henry has written to the Federal member that he knows "no graft on the canal or anywhere else." He very sensibly remarks that he may have said in the heat of controversy that he had heard that there was graft but he "absolutely knows nothing about it." This is entirely satisfactory. He also says that he knows "full well as I do there is no truth in the statement." If Mr. Henry had taken the trouble to reply to the private letters both of the minister and the member the matter would not have got into the newspapers. It will be readily understood that charges of that description coming even as mere rumors from responsible men are apt to do a grievous injustice to all the faithful employes of the government and indirectly tend to undermine the faith of the people in everybody. The member has no wish to restrain the fullest discussion and criticism in the least. But it is plain that he might as well acknowledge himself to be a common grafter and thief at once which all those who connive at and knowingly permit and encourage such things unquestionably are, as to pretend to be indifferent to what the people have a right to have made right.

TAKES BRIDE BEFORE GOING TO THE WAR

G. L. Martin Leaves To-morrow to Report for Service

He had participated in the relief of Ladysmith, had passed through the South African war, unscathed, marched under Kitchener to Khartoum, yet was felled by a shaft from Cupid's bow in Peterborough. Such was the experience of George Lewis Martin who on Wednesday afternoon was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Maud Emily Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Cole, of this city.

The Rev. Jas. Price officiated at the wedding, which took place at St. George's Church.

Mr. Martin sails on Saturday for England to join his regiment, he being a reservist. Mrs. Cole will reside with her parents here.

Peterboro Birds at Guelph Show

The Peterboro Poultry Association will be represented at the Guelph Fair next month, when fifty or more birds will be entered in the various classes. Harry Lush will likely be in charge of the local entries.

The directors of the Peterboro Association are hard at work in the interests of their show in January. The prize list is being revised and will be more attractive than ever.

EVIDENCE NOT SUFFICIENT TO CONVICT TOBIN

Magistrate Dumble gave his decision in the case of Joseph Tobin this morning.

In discharging the prisoner, the magistrate said he was sorry he could not find sufficient evidence to convict the prisoner. He said the prisoner was not aiming to procure the girl for the other two men, that the meeting of the two men arose accidentally out of the circumstances, and it was not a deliberate conspiracy. He advised Tobin to leave town and he hoped he would never see his face again.

DR. H. S. BELAND HIT BY SHELL

Canadian M. P. Wounded at Defence of Antwerp

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland, M.P. for Beauce, and member of the Laurier Cabinet previous to 1911, who has been serving British arms in Belgium since the outbreak of the war, was seriously wounded in three places by a German shell in the defence of Antwerp.

Letters to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. E. M. Macdonald, M.P. for Pictou, Nova Scotia, just received from officers of the British marines who escaped to Holland, tell the story of the former French-Canadian Minister's bravery and devotion. These letters are dated Nov. 2, and pay glowing tribute to the service and sacrifice of the gallant Canadian.

Hon. Dr. Beland was, according to the letter received by Mr. Macdonald, who was in Toronto yesterday, ministering as a medical man to four British marines who had been wounded in the German bombardment of Antwerp. Despite the British officer's caution, he went forward to the field to dress their wounds making the comment, "I am here to serve." The bombardment at the time was, the writer says, "very severe," and a shell bursting within a few feet of where he was dressing a bluejacket's leg, struck him in three places, inflicting ugly, but it is hoped not fatal, wounds. Dr. Beland was carried back, and the marines were anxious that he should accompany them to Holland. He absolutely refused, however, telling the subaltern who was sent for him that he wanted to stay at his post. He was, when the British forces left Antwerp, at the St. Elizabeth Hospital, Antwerp.

"Tell my friends at home not to worry," was the message sent by Dr. Beland from his bed. "Tell them I am all right."

BOMB FACTORY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. — Chance may have placed in the hands of the police information which the most careful search had failed to reveal. As the result of an explosion which took place in a dingy six-storey tenement house at No. 133 Cherry street Wednesday night, it seems likely that a bomb factory has been brought to light, where missiles which have imperilled the lives of many people may have been made. Not only are the police hopeful of finding the materials from which these bombs were made, but the men who manufactured and planted them, as well.

OUTRAGES IN GALICIA

Hungarians Said to Have Committed Cruelties

LEMBERG, Galicia, Nov. 27.—(Via Petrograd and London.) — A committee appointed to investigate conditions in Galicia reports that there have been wholesale murders, executions and excesses of every description in war-swept Galicia. Thousands of starving and homeless families give evidence of these conditions.

The Russian population, the committee says, suffered most severely, less from natural consequences of war than from the cruelty of Austrian officials, who always suspected the loyalty of the Galician population.

The committee reports it established the fact that in seven counties 258 men have been shot or hanged, including two priests. Throughout Galicia it is estimated 10,000 arrests have been made and 1,000 executions have taken place.

Most of these outrages are said by the committee to have been committed by Hungarians. It is stated that Cossacks, who were pursuing a detachment of Hungarians, found the body of one Russian girl who had been crucified.

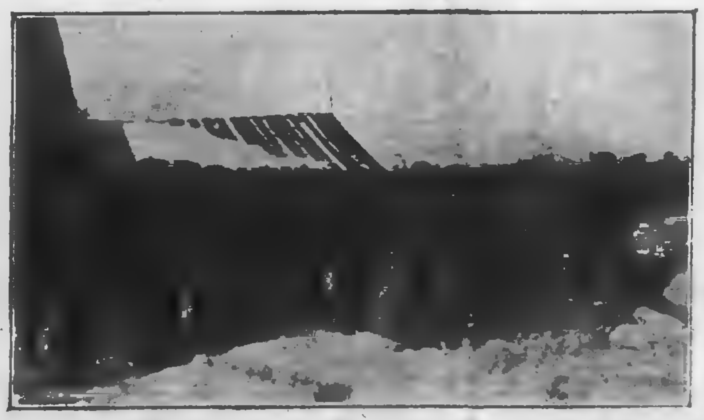
DETECTIVES ARE ACCUSED

Yeggman Says Crooks Were Promised Protection

SASKATOON, Nov. 27. — Chief of Detectives Fred. R. Springers and Detective Fred. W. Reeves were formally suspended from police force and placed under surveillance at a special meeting of the police commission held yesterday. This action was taken as the result of the confession of Frank Heaton, a yeggman, arrested some time ago in Edmonton, who said that the two detectives in question, who constitute the whole detective force of this town, had permitted these men to remain in Saskatoon, although they knew them to be crooks, and had promised them protection, provided they did not operate in the city.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Brantford, Nov. 27.—James Morrison, a farm hand, was arrested last night, charged with attempting to murder his employer, M. M. Hunter, of the village of Onondaga. Morrison, it is alleged, threatened to kill Hunter with an axe following a dispute over money matters.



The above is a photograph of the members which composed the Shawanaga Hunt Club this year. This club was formerly the Gold Lake Hunt Club, but for about the last eleven years they have been hunting in the vicinity of Shawanaga, Parry Sound, from which place is derived the name of their club. The members from left to right are: M. McFadden, A. Laing, B. A. Lillie, A. Curtis, A. Carpenter, Sam Ray, C. Curtis, J. M. Brooks, Capt. C. Gladman, H. Evans and L. Steal.

GERMAN ATTEMPT TO UNDO ALLIES' WORK

Foe Made an Attack on Heads of Bridges But Were Driven off.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 27. — "Slackening of artillery fire of the enemy was noted all along the line during November 26th," says this afternoon's official announcement. "Two infantry attacks directed against the heads of the bridges which we had thrown down on the right bank of the Yser to the south of Dixmude were easily repulsed. There was no other engagement on the rest of the front in Belgium, and as far as the Oise, nor was there any action on the Aisne or in Champagne.

"Nevertheless, Rheims was rather violently bombarded during the time that a number of journalists from neutral countries were making a visit to the city.

"In the Argonne, some infantry attacks resulted in the loss and recapture of certain trenches.

"Along the heights of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

Twelve Well Filled Companies Turn out for Instruction and Marchout — Head of Canadian General Electric Company Offers Silver Cup for Competition in Musketry

If they keep coming, the Armouries will have to be enlarged. The Home Guard last night took up nearly all the space available, and the twelve companies made a very fine showing. There were between five hundred and six hundred men on hand. Some, to be sure, are a little raw, but all are willing. If he makes a wrong turn, the recruit smiles, the others smile, and the instructor has to have a laugh. The instruction is repeated, and all goes well till another miscue is made. They try it again, and the order is executed in a manner that could not be excelled by the star company of the 57th. And some of them are parsons, at that. The march-out attracted considerable attention With Instructor Chas. Peters as marshal and the Temple Band on the job, the Guard paraded down George street to Charlotte, out Charlotte to Aylmer, north on Aylmer to Simcoe, east on Simcoe to George, and north on George to the Armouries. The band did not play "It's a long way to Tipperary," but the bandsmen had a chorus of their own with the same music, and the Guards used the original words. It was the first public apearance of Bandmaster Beer.

On the return to the Armouries, quite a large number of the recruits were sworn in, and the instruction proceeded.

Silver Cup Offered.

An additional incentive to rifle proficiency has been received, in the shape of the promise of a handsome silver cup, donated by Lieut.-Colonel Frederick Nicholls on behalf of the Canadian General Electric Company. Lieut. Colonel Goodwill received the following letter in today's mail:—

J. E. L. Goodwill, Esq.,
Officer Commanding,
Peterborough Home Guard,
City.

Dear Sir,—Our President, Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Nicholls, on behalf of the Canadian General Electric Company advises us that he will be very pleased to donate a silver cup for competition amongst the members of the Peterborough Home Guard for rifle shooting. You can arrange the details with your Executive.

Yours truly,
Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd.,
(Sgd.) E. G. Patterson,
General Superintendent.

Colonel Goodwill figured that well over 500 civilians, members of the home guard, were at the armouries last night. Ample evidence of enthusiasm was displayed. Although 500 is no small number only 50 per cent. of the strength of some companies was represented. "If that percentage maintain their interest in the project by regularly turning out, the officers and myself shall be quite satisfied," said Colonel Goodwill to a Review reporter this morning.

The commanding officer is enthusiastic over increasing the shooting ability of his regiment. Every shot fired by the rifle association is recorded, and the record sent in to the government. Every good shot boosts not only the individual average, but the average of the whole company, while every careless or poor shot lowers the individual and collective record of the corps to like extent. It is Col. Goodwill's earnest hope that the members of his command will not forget this when they pick up a rifle. The guard will be competing against rifle associations all over Canada and every good shot means that much better average for the local corps and the chance of occupying top place on the list. Colonel Goodwill dreams of seeing the Peterborough home guard occupy this place.

"I want to see it the most proficient association in Canada," he said.

By next week he hoped to have the rifle ranges completed in the old Murray Street Church and ready for use. Fifty men a night can then be given musketry instruction.

The home guard through their commander wish to publicly thank Colonel T. W. H. Young for the use of his orderly rooms in the armouries.

After Rifles.

Lieut.-Col. Miller and Major R. E. Layfield are in Kingston today endeavoring to convince Colonel Hemming, D.O.C., that Peterborough's home guard should be supplied with rifles and ammunition. Both men were entrusted with this highly important task in view of their well known powers of persuasion. They took along the service rolls, to convince the D.O.C. of the good shooting already done.

Musketry instructor Moore and Captain Bartlett have issued a musketry syllabus for the use of the guard.

LARRY STEAL AND HIS DOG.

"Larry" Steal, the veteran member of the Shawanaga Hunt Club, is one of the oldest hunters in the Dominion of Canada, and is enjoying good health in his 82nd year. He was born and raised near the village of Lakefield, and has lived retired for the past 27 years, enjoying the fruits of his labor. In his early days with his father, he learned the art of deer hunting along the river, when they used to kill deer crossing the river at Sawyer's rapids, below Lakefield, and the best part of his life was spent in hunting deer, around Burleigh Falls and Lovesick. He's a great lover of outdoor sport and being a great man in a canoe, he generally takes the water-watches at the hunt.

He has hunted with the Shawanaga party for about eighteen years. He is very active for his years, and is a man of wonderful vitality. Larry resides in the village of Lakefield.

HAVE A CARE.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT occurred the other day at Clifford, Ontario, in which two men lost their lives, and the wife of one may die, the accident being the result of inhaling gas from a coal stove, the door of which was found open when the house was broken into by neighbours. Now that a winter is approaching that promises to be a severe one, coal stoves and furnaces are being commissioned, and safety and common sense should cause every one using these to have them thoroughly cleaned, and repaired where necessary. Chimneys should also be cleaned, and neglect to do these things has been the cause of many fatal accidents. It is also a manifestly improvident and dangerous practice to leave coal stove or furnace doors open as a check to save fuel, when that will allow coal gas to fill a house. Better burn an extra shovelful of coal than pay heavy funeral expenses.

A QUEER VEIN OF SELFISHNESS.

IN SPITE OF THE FACT that there is now a real British Empire citizenship, there is a queer vein of selfishness running through the English that distinguishes them from the rest of the Empire. The following paragraph from the Montreal News illustrates this fact:

> "English newspapers explain that the reason why trenches were not allowed to be dug around the tents on Salisbury Plain was because 'it might spoil the hunting!' How delightfully English! But when it was found that the troops were suffering, the trenches were dug, notwithstanding the fear of displeasing the hunters. Again, how characteristically English!"

GEN. HUGHES IN MONTREAL.

HERE is a little extract from Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes' speech in Montreal the other day, which Toronto jingos ought to read. While it does not pamper their vanity, it explains the Minister's attitude:

> "As long as I am Minister of Militia and my friend Col. Wilson is in command here there will be no mobilization of the troops in Montreal, unless for a very good cause," declared Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes on his arrival at Montreal last night, when he was met by Col. E. W. Wilson, O. C.
>
> "This whole talk of German invasion through the United States is sheer insanity," said General Hughes. "It has put people from the Niagara frontier to the Eastern Townships into a panic, which seems to have emanated from Toronto, and it is time some one put a stop to it." "And," he added grimly, "I think I have done something to stop it and steady the people. There has been talk of mobilizing troops at various points along the frontier. There will be no such mobilization if I know it. There is no need for it, and any experimental mobilization, unless the public are warned of it, in such times as these, would simply cause a panic, just as it did in Toronto a few days ago. There is no precedent for secret mobilization of troops unless for actual cause, and we want no more of it."

WHERE DO THEY GET THEIR COAL?

A GOOD MANY PEOPLE have been wondering where the German cruisers on the high seas have been getting the supplies, especially of coal, that have enabled them to maintain themselves for as long a time as they have. The surmise that some countries are supplying them and breaking their neutrality has some good reasons for being true. Of the German warships that were abroad when hostilities began, nearly all are still at large, and still preying on the commerce of the Allies, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. Few believed that they would be able to continue their depredations for so long a time. Large though the harvest of their raiding operations has been, it alone would not suffice to maintain their activity. The steamers they have captured, plundered and sunk might yield a sufficient suply of foodstuffs, but not enough coal to keep the roving warships constantly under steam. If the laws of neutrality were in all cases strictly enforced, those warships would have no rest, but would always be pursuing or pursued, and would be consuming fuel at a very rapid rate. They are utterly cut off from their home waters by the grand fleet Britain keeps in the North Sea. They dare not seek the ports of German colonies, for these have fallen into the hands of the Allies. The German squadron that defeated Admiral Craddock's squadron off the coast of Chile was a fugitive from Tsing Tau, which was taken by the Japanese. All the wandering German warships would have been sunk, captured or interned long before this had all neutral nations held as scrupulously to the letter and spirit of international scraps of paper as Belgium did. Had there been no winking at the unlawful use of neutral ports by German warships, or contraband traffic by merchant vessels serving those warships, the career of the latter would soon have been cut short.

Upon having its attention drawn to the matter by the British Government, the United States Government hastened to inquire of certain South American governments as to the abuse of their neutrality for the benefit of the stray German warships. The Government of Chile has shown a desire to prevent a recurrence of any improper use of its harbours and means of communication. It seems that a trading vessel transferred from German to United States registry and ownership under the law recently enacted by Congress has been conveying to German warships coal that was cleared at the United States port of San Francisco for the Chilean port of Valparaiso. It was turned over to the warships at the Chilean island of Juan Fernandez. The captain of the trading vessel says his cargo was seized by the Germans. The matter calls for action by the United States Government, whose Consul at the Chilean capital has reported it, and the United States Government can be depended upon to assert its rights in the premises. If the artful German owners thought they could make use of American register merely as a sharp trick for the benefit of German warships they will soon have their eyes opened. The loquacious Bernstorff may have to transmit to his Government a message that will produce more worry at Berlin.

MAKING POPULAR SONGS.

THE STATEMENT in court of a music publishing house that it had paid $8,625 for advertising a new song and teaching cabaret performers to sing it is interesting only because it gives the exact figures, says the New York World. That new songs are put forth to the public by such means has long been known.

Songs of this kind are generally classed as "popular." They are believed to represent the taste of the public and to be an outcome of the musical and sentimental culture of the country where they obtain a vogue. In a measure they are credited with filling the place of the old-time folk songs that arose when there were no publishing houses or cabarets; when the fortune of a song depended upon the appeal it made to the ear and to the sympathies of the hearers.

How far the new fashion of song-making falls short of the old way is shown not only in the cost of making them go, but in the amount of go there is in them when started. As "good wine needs no bush," neither does a genuine popular song need such elaborate presentation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

CITIZENS of this city who buy honey should see that what they get is honey. The bulletin of the Inland Revenue Department on Strained Honey shows that throughout Canada there were numerous cases where an adulterated article is being palmed off as pure honey. There are several cases of imitation honey being sold, but not as pure honey.

JUDGING by the reports in the Toronto newspapers, the address of Miss Christabel Pankhurst was mostly a war speech with a few female suffrage remarks thrown in, like a handful of comas.

SOME SAY Catholics are not enlisting, but recently it was reported that over 300 were in training in Toronto alone.

Comment on the Naval Question.

(Orillia Packet.)

The Liberal press is very anxious that there should be a truce to the discussion of the Canadian naval question—until they think they see an opportunity of making a point in their own defence. The destruction of the Emden by the Austrian cruiser Sydney appeared to offer such an opportunity, and was eagerly seized upon. The Sydney is of the Bristol type, of which Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposed to build three. Because she caught the Emden it is therefore plain that the Liberal naval policy has been entirely vindicated! Such argument is mere pettifogging and partizan toying with a large question of vital national importance. It might, with equal force, be argued, on the other side, that the Bristol herself proved too slow to catch the Karlsruhe, when they met off the West Indies, and that the Glasgow, another ship of the same type, was forced to limp off in a more or less damaged condition from the fight off the coast of Chile. But this is not the question. A navy is composed of various sorts of vessels for various purposes. A fleet of Sydneys could not hold the mastery of the seas for a week, no matter how numerous. What the Admiralty said was most needed was capital ships, or at least fleet units. And so far the judgement of the Admiralty in the building and placing of ships has been pretty well vindicated. The British peoples could scarcely have expected to gain a more complete mastery of the seven seas. Let us hope that when the time again comes to take up the question of Canadian participation in naval defence, both parties will be ready to settle it on purely naval principles, and will have a clearer recognition of what those principles are.

The Church Against the Saloon.

(Collier's.)

The one hundred and twenty-sixth Presbyterian General Assembly urges its members to resign from social clubs that sell liquor and to rent no buildings for saloon purposes. It also endorses nation-wide prohibition. Some newspapers prophesy ruin, desperation, anger, hypocrisy, tyranny, and civil war as a few of the probable results if the booze is wiped out. It does not seem to occur to them that we must and will have a strongly constructive social policy regarding liquor. Why don't the brewers help in this? Why don't they prohibit vile drugs and poisonous stimulants in the saloons they control? Why is the whole liquor business so hostile to regulation and so mad to extend its sales at any cost to the community? The anti-saloon movement is not a fad. We are tired of paying the social bills for these booze vendors; we want better conditions in this country, and we are going to carry the thing through.

Prussian Patriotism.

(Free Poland.)

The acme, however, of German culture has been reached when the press of the world denounced in no lenient terms the scourging of Polish children for their loyal attachment to the mother tongue. All classes have suffered repressions under the German rule: the peasants have been forbidden to build their own cottages; the editors have been imprisoned for defending the lashed children; the priests have been punished for preaching in the Polish tongue, while the land-owners have been compelled to sell their estates to the German colonists.

DE WET'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF HIS MOVE TO REBEL

He Made Mistake in Thinking England Was Too Busy to Take up His Case

English newspapers have made public a dispatch from the Governor-General of South Africa giving an account of General De Wet's announcement of his rebellion. The account is as follows:—

"At four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, October 28th, General de Wet entered Vrede with about 150 mounted men, of whom half to two-thirds were armed. After passing through the town gate a chase ensued after a post office clerk, who had been posted on the outskirts of the town to form an estimate of de Wet's force as they approached. The clerk, mounted on a bicycle, managed to retain the lead from a number of horsemen, in spite of their threats to shoot him. He was, however, overtaken in front of the post-office, from where he shouted the information he had gleaned to the post master who was waiting at the instrument to despatch the news to the Transvaal. The postmaster succeeded in getting his message through before the men had time to burst the doors and prevent him. As soon as they got into the office they smashed up the instrument, knocked down the postmaster and kicked him. The rest of the troopers galloped through the town in all directions, ordering the inhabitants to assemble at the monument in front of the Dutch church, they being promised a sjamboking if they disobeyed.

"General de Wet had meantime taken up a stand on the monument and ordered that the Magistate should be brought to him. Two men were dispatched to the Magistrate's office to order the latter to attend the meeting. In entering the office one of the men (de Wet's son) extended his hand to greet the Magistrate, who told him he would not give his hand to a rebel, and when ordered in the name of General de Wet to attend the meeting he replied that he was not going to attend a meeting held by the enemy. This message was brought to de Wet, who was furious, and sent six men to bring him (the Magistrate) by force, and, if necessary, to drag him up. The men again entered the Resident Magistrate's office and laid hands on him, pulling him out of his chair. The Resident Magistrate thereupon said that if they were going to take him by force be would go, and walked with them. He faced de Wet with a defiant air.

"General de Wet, after employing some abusive language to the Magistrate, addressed the meeting as follows: "Ladies, Gentlemen and Burghers, I have asked you to come together here to explain to you my position. Then turning to the Magistrate, he said: "Magistrate, I want you to get a shorthand writer to take down every word that I am going to say, because whatever I may do in the future I can never commit a greater act of rebellion than I have already committed. I am going through to Maritz, where we will receive arms and ammunition, and from there I am going to Pretoria to pull down the British flag and proclaim a free South African Republic. All those who side with the Government must go to them. I signed the Vereeniging Treaty and swore to be faithful to the British flag, but we have been so down-trodden by the miserable and pestilential English that we can endure it no longer. His Majesty King Edward VII. promised to protect us but he has failed to do so, and allowed a Magistrate to be placed over us (he is one of the pestilential English) who is an absolute tyrant, and has made it impossible to tolerate it any longer. I was charged before him for beating a native boy. I only hit him with a small shepherd's whip, and for that I was fined 5s."

"Here the Magistrate interrupted de Wet and asked him whether he did not plead guilty. He admitted that he had pleaded guilty. He admitted that he had pleaded guilty, and ordered the Magistrate to keep quiet and he would allow him to say as much as he liked when he had finished speaking, and if he would not hold his tongue he would make him hold it.

"'But, continued de Wet, after the Magistrate had delivered judgment, instead of reprimanding the boy and ordering him in future to be obedient and do his duty, he looked at the native as if he would like to give him a kiss. The Magistrate was a brother-in-law of a man for whom he had the greatest respect, and who was very dear to him (President Steyn) and for that reason he would give him another chance, otherwise he would have taken him prisoner and gone and handed him over to the Germans. The Magistrate's father was one of the staunchest pillars of the Church, and if he were alive today he would be heart and soul with him in this movement and condemn the dastardly act of robbery which the Government were going to commit. The ungodly policy of General Botha had gone on long enough, and the South African Dutch were going to stand as one man to crush this unholy scandal. Some of his friends had advised him to wait a little longer until the English had received a bigger kick, but it was beneath him and his people to kick a dead dog.

"Proceeding, de Wet said: England has got her hands full enough. I hate the lies that are constantly being spread to the effect that thousands of Australians, Canadians and Indians can be sent to fight us. Where could the English get them from? She has not enough men to fight her own battles. I am going through the town to take the following six articles, namely, horses, saddles, bridles, halters, arms, and ammunition, and if anybody should refuse to hand my men these articles, if they should be found in their possession, I will give him a thrashing with a sjambok. I now order the storekeepers to go and open their shops, and I will select men to go round and take whatever I require apart from the above articles and they will give receipts for what they take, and if they do not open their shops willingly, I will open them in another way.

"My advice to you English is to remain quiet in your houses and not interfere with my men. If you do not, beware when I come back. I have got my eight sons and sons-in-law here with me, and the only people left on my farm are my wife and my daughter. Anybody can go and see if they like, and request the Magistrate to give them any help they may require, if they will do so."

SOME NEW LIGHT ON OLD SUBJECTS

Conditions Created by the War Have Changed the Nethods of Business

A Canadian editor, who has never put very much stock in the "Made-in-Canada" appeal, and has always inclined to low tariff views, now sees the question in a different light as witness the following paragraphs from a strong editorial on the subject a few weeks ago.

"We have never been very strong apologists for the 'Made-in-Canada' idea because we have never been great believers in mixing sentiment and business. We are inclined to believe that the Canadian manufacturer who is compelled to make his goods up to a certain standard or fail to get the business, is much more likely to be successful in the end than the man who feels that he has so strong a sentimental hold on the people of the country that he can sell what he produces even if the quality is not of the best. We have met a good many manufacturers who hold the same view, and while naturally wanting to use every influence they can, so long as it is not dishonest, to increase their sales, are not disposed to impute very much practical help to the "Made-in-Canada" propaganda which was started some ten or more years ago.

"We think, however, that the present is a time when we can look at this question through different spectacles. The times to-day are not normal; they are such as we have never seen before and we should hope never to see again; they are times such as should prompt every Canadian to lend a helping hand to every other Canadian, and in doing this help not only Canada but the Empire at large. While it is important that we should make as large a contribution as possible, of both money and men, to aid the Empire, it is also important that we should do all we can to look after our own people, and we cannot do this in any better way than by providing them with work. Until the war is over then, and we come back to old time conditions, it is the duty of every Canadian citizen to aid, in whatever way he can, the production of goods by Canadian factories. If there was ever a time for the "Made-in-Canada" slogan it is now."

Quite So!

The judge was a kindly old fellow, and the young barrister was nervous. It was his first appearance before a jury, and nervousness had him by the throat.

He rose to address the twelve good men and true on behalf of his client:

"My unfortunate client—" he began, in a quaking voice and a dry throat, then stopped.

Fumbling amongst his papers with a trembling hand, he began again.

"My unfortunate client—" Again his throat dried up, and his voice trailed off to a hoarse whisper and became silent.

Despairingly mopping his brow with a handkerchief, he made another attempt.

"My unfortunate client—" But it was no good. His tongue stuck to the roof of his mouth, his vocal cords became paralysed.

The judge, smiling down at him in a kindly way, said:

"You may proceed with your statement, Mr. Blank. The court, so far, is in entire agreement with you!"

The Test of Adversity

It takes adversity to test the mettle of a brave people. The British nation never gets fully roused till it knows there is some national calamity just across the road. In this business of keeping industrial and commercial calamity out of Canada, every Canadian is getting his war blood to boiling point. If we can't shoulder rifles at the front, we can make every dollar we spend for goods made in Canada a national bullet for keeping out the calamity of hard times.—Brockville Recorder.

CONFESSIONS OF A FOOL

By M. QUAD

As a boy, born in the town of Colville, of parents in moderate circumstances, John Williams was called dull. When he had reached his majority he was accounted "light in the head." He was a butt of ridicule for years and years, and no one could ever remember that he resented it. When he was told, as was often the case, that he was only half witted he laughed in a good natured way. If people laughed at him he laughed back, and if the joke was on him it seemed to please him as much as if some one else had been hit. There was only one thing about the town fool which was not as plain as day. From the time he was eighteen years old he kept a diary. It was often wondered what he wrote down, but no one ever had a chance to see. The diary didn't take in daily events, as was one day discovered, but in the course of twelve years an abundance of things were jotted down. At the age of thirty John Williams was fatally injured by the kick of a horse. When it was given out that he had only three or four days to live the public had no sympathy to waste. Perhaps the town fool didn't expect any. From time to time the doctors told him he was a doomed man, and he began to set his house in order—that is, he had his diaries brought to his bed and sent for a justice of the peace and a worthy witness. He had a few deathbed confessions to make. No. 1 went back twelve years. A sawmill in the town had been destroyed by fire. The day after the fire a man named Thompson had put a redhot cent on the sidewalk for the town fool to pick up. The diary recorded both events. The confession was to the effect that John Williams had seen Thompson set fire to the mill. It was written out and sworn to and witnessed, and then came confession No. 2. In that same year some one had stolen three smoked hams from the cellar of a villager. Following close upon the loss of the hams, as duly recorded in the diary, the village blacksmith had ducked the town fool in his water tub for a joke. The confession was to the effect that Williams and the blacksmith stole the hams and that the latter was the only one to profit by the theft. The two confessions implicated men who had always been considered upright, and the justice felt it his duty to say:

"John, this is serious business. You know you have only three days to live."

"Yes, I know," replied John, "but we have hardly begun yet. I've got to get a whole carload of things off my mind before I go."

No. 3 dated back eleven years. A horse had been stolen from a nearby farmer, and about the same date a village painter named Swayne had painted the town fool's boots a bright red by way of a joke. The confession solemnly confessed that the painter and Williams had stolen the horse and turned him over to a stranger to be run out of town and sold. Many little details were put down, and, as it was solemnly sworn to, the justice heaved a sigh over the deceit and wickedness of a man who had always been looked up to as full of integrity.

Confession No. 4 went back ten years. A church edifice belonging to the Methodists had been set on fire and partly destroyed. It had been pretty well settled that it was the work of tramps who had broken in, but no one had been arrested. Williams now confessed that the Widow Davidson had hired him for $3 to set the fire.

Confession No. 5 was a corker. Some seven years previous there had been a local election in which party feelings ran high. Just before the election came on one of the candidates for mayor had been badly shocked by a bolt of lightning which struck the house. Nobody had ever questioned the fact that it was a straight case of thunder and lightning, but now the dying man wanted to wash his conscience. He named four prominent men in the village who were in a conspiracy, the murder of the candidate. They hadn't let him in on the ground floor or any other floor, but he had been abroad the night of the storm and had seen one of the conspirators strike the candidate with a bludgeon and then leap out of the window. The would be murderer believed he had accomplished his purpose, and there was great rejoicing as he rejoined his fellow conspirators.

The justice hesitated, questioned and protested, but the town fool was firm. He insisted that everything should go down and be sworn to. He died declaring that he had signed nothing but what was true, and the justice felt that he had to move in the matter. The whole town was by the ears at once. Those six confessions included everybody who had ever cracked a joke at the town fool's expense, and that meant seven-eighths of the population. Although the doctors certified that Billy's mind was clear to the last, it was too big a bite for the law. After three or four warrants had been issued the whole affair was dropped—that is, was legally dismissed—but it wasn't the end of it by any means. Everybody swore to his own innocence and declared his belief in the guilt of everybody else, and in one year there were a score of damage suits. It was five years before the affair finally sank out of sight. The town had a heap of fun at the expense of the town's fool, but in dying he had more fun than squared the account.

The Waste In Storms.

Many scientists and captains of industry must sigh during a thunderstorm at the vast power running to waste in the heavens, and at sundry times attempts have been made to entrap and utilize the energy of lightning. So far, however, all these have been insignificant results. By way of experiment huge rocks have been split asunder by attracting the lightning to them, and in a few isolated cases it has been claimed that paralysis has been cured by shocks administered by lightning, but as yet man's ingenuity has not devised the harness that will turn the wild, free agent of the heavens into tractable "horsepower."—London Spectator.

AUTUMN NECKWEAR.

Organdie Collars and Cuffs Handsomely Decorated With Hemstitching.

The double organdie collars so fashionable last spring have given place to hemstitched models and, naturally, hemstitched accessories are a bit more expensive than the other sort in which two pieces of fabric were seamed together and turned over.

A very smart collar turns over in two sections from a high neckband, and each section has two rows of hemstitching all around. Inside the hemstitching are small hand embroidered dots.

Another collar, imported before the war started, is a flare model, opening rather low at the front in a V. From the V, turn back long, narrow revers which flare outward over the lapels of the coat. Collar, chemisette and revers are of white organdie, with an inch and a half hem of white handkerchief linen set on with hemstitching.

Still another imported collar of handkerchief linen is decorated with hemstitching and drawn work. This surprising collar rises close and high about the throat like the stock of several seasons ago. Two drawn work flaps turn down over the collar, and at the front is a tie of the linen plaited into narrow width and having sharply pointed ends decorated with the drawn work. This bit of neckwear is entirely new and is said to presage a return to high, stock collar effects.

BOHEMIAN OUTLINE.

Decorative Stitch For Embellishing Gowns, Blouses and Negligees.

Bohemian outlining in fancy work is nothing more or less than the use of the threaded run stitch. Two threads are used, which may either be of contrasting color or two shades of one color. The lines of the pattern are covered with a running stitch of one shade, taking a short stitch underneath and a longer one on top. The other thread is simply slipped over and under each stitch, producing a rope effect.

This stitch makes a decorative outline and is very effective on crapes, voile or crepe de chine.

AN INGENIOUS COOLIE.

How He Helped the Doctors During a Cholera Epidemic.

In a life and death battle with a cholera epidemic in Hunan province, China, in which an American medical missionary was the leading figure, one of the most serious difficulties was met successfully by one of the menial hospital coolies.

Since every patient had to have from one pint to several quarts of distilled water with salt in it, the water could not be distilled fast enough. For two days the staff struggled along with makeshifts while thinking up a plan to build a still for little money without the loss of time. This coolie solved the problem. In one day and at a cost of less than $2 he built a still which later produced twenty gallons of distilled water every twenty-four hours.

The still was simplicity itself. For cooking food the Chinese use large, flat, saucer-like pans made of iron. With one of these above and another below the coolie made a drum of galvanized iron with a hole in the side for a trough. Into the lower pan hot water for boiling was poured. Underneath, a hot fire sent up a constant steam vapor. The upper kettle was kept cool by frequent changings of cold water. The vapor from the lower kettle, condensed on the lower surface of the cool upper kettle, dripped off into the trough, and filled bottle after bottle with distilled water.—World's Work.

Both Played the Game.

The head of the firm approached his son.

"What was the idea when I looked in your room just now? You and that traveler appeared to be walking round and round the office."

"Oh! It says in this Business Manual that one should always be careful when interviewing anybody to have one's back to the light. But I think the other fellow must have been up to that dodge. When we settled down at the finish he was sitting on the window sill," was the disconsolate reply.—London Answers.

THE WORK OF STRINGING PEARLS

Only the Choicest Silk Used for the Best Jewels.

The pearl stringers themselves call it a "trade." They are not the kind of people to talk about art. If they see anything of their work beyond the prosaic fact that "stringing" is a good employment it is only an indirect and somewhat vague appreciation of the delicate attraction of the pearls they handle.

Although not professing to be expert judges, I have never met a pearl stringer yet whose eye and taste were not trained to a fine perception of the form and color of the beamy, iridescent luster of the jewel of the shellfish. It would be as impossible for them to mistake an artificial pearl for a real one as it would be for a lapidary to begin to polish a piece of glass under the impression it was a diamond.

It is often said that the little known industry of pearl stringing is dying out, but this is not the fact. No machinery is yet invented to supersede the ten clever fingers of the practiced stringer. The industry is exclusive, too, and a business has often been passed on from mother to daughter, even from grandmother to grandchild. Drilling and mounting of pearls is quite a different branch of the industry.

Good light is one of the essential needs of the pearl stringer, especially when she is employed in making or repairing seed-pearl ornaments. All the beads have to be arranged according to their size and then separately and most carefully sewed into place on their dainty framework. For instance, if the design is that of a flower or leaf the skill lies in graduating from the biggest pearl to the one that touches the extreme point. Some of these ornaments, by the way, are very old, for if they are carefully handled there is no reason why they should not be a joy, if not forever, at all events for as long as the handsome, antique pendants and pearl studded medals of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries that one still admires in the British museum.

Only the finest silk is used for stringing the finest pearls. Great beads, round and shiny, unmistakably artificial and with no more real luster than white marbles—with the exception of what are called Roman pearls, manufactured many years ago—may be allowed to hang together on catgut, but orients must be threaded, pearl kissing pearl, on silken strands worthy of their shape and "skin."

Now the art of the stringer lies in the apparently simple manner of tying the knot that attaches the clasp. Sometimes also she has to make a knot between bead and bead, a method that adds to the length of the necklace, but detracts from the beauty of the line of pearls. The knack of making this tiny knot will perhaps take a girl a year to master; the perfect hang of the beads, neither too loose nor too tight, depends on how it is made.

There is no needle fine enough for threading small seed pearls, so the stringer makes her own out of a piece of wire as thin as a hair. She arranges her pearls, if they are of different sizes, on a grooved board covered with billiard table cloth, any other material, such as green baize, being much too coarse. When she is making a tassel or loops, it is pretty to watch her hold her work at arm's length every few minutes, measuring its size and effect with her well trained eye.

It is hardly necessary to speak of the strict integrity and unfailing care required in a pearl stringer. She is intrusted with great possessions, for the value of pearls is continually on the increase. There are some ladies who never trust their treasures out of their own houses, but arrange, through a jeweler, for a pearl stringer to call so many times a year to repair ornaments or restring necklaces.

The work of the pearl stringer is so little known, so quiet and dainty, that it is doubtful if one in a thousand women who stop to admire and covet as they pass show windows ever gives a thought to the patient fingers that have threaded the beautiful beads and tied the almost invisible, cunning knots that link them to their diamond clasps.

The little band of stringers are very simple, but businesslike people in their humble workrooms—devotees of beauty, although they are unconscious of the fact, and true artists in the perfection of their work.—London Chronicle.

The Prayer He Didn't Make.

In a certain parish near Dumfries a newly-made elder was summoned to the sick bed of a parishioner. Being naturally a bashful man, he was in great anxiety as to the "prayer he wad ha'e to pit up" and wished to avoid going altogether. At length he was persuaded by his wife and started on his errand. On his return his wife greeted him with the query:

"And how did ye get on, William?"

"Oh, grand! He was deid."—Dundee Advertiser.

Father of Forty-One.

A laborer's remarkable record surprised the Baltinglass (County Wicklow, Ireland,) Rural Council when applications for cottages were being discussed. It was stated that one of the applicants, John Murphy, had been married five times and has forty-one children. Murphy proudly asserted that his eldest "child" was aged fifty and the youngest a baby, and all the family were fed on rabbits.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26.—Trading was quiet on the wheat market today, few transactions, and options and even these of small amounts. There were no cables from Liverpool until very late and with American markets closed, today being Thanksgiving Day in the United States, the news was scarce. Wheat opened unchanged to ⅜c lower, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower, flax being unquoted.

Cash demand was good for Nos. 1, 3 and 4 wheat, and exporters were the buyers. Demand for cash oats and barley was practically dead, there being no buyers, while offerings were fair.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and the few bids that did come forward were 1s to 1s 6d per quarter under what exporters offered to sell the different grades at. A fair trade continues to be in coarse grains for domestic account, there being a steady demand for carlots at unchanged prices. The demand from foreign buyers for low-grade spring wheat flour is good but as millers are closely sold up of such for some little time to come they are not in a position to accept any of the orders, but sales of 10,000 sacks of export patent were made for December-January shipment to London at 34s 6d. Demand for millfeed is brisk, and millers have turned orders for round lots for December delivery at full prices.

Butter is quiet with an easy undertone; but the feeling in cheese is very firm with a good enquiry for supplies from English importers.

Eggs active and firm. Potatoes easier at a decline of 5c per bag. Dressed hogs weak at a further decline of 50c per 100 pounds.

CHEESE MARKETS.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 26.—At today's cheese board meeting the offerings were 539 colored and 220 white. The sales were 370 colored and 200 white at 14⅝c, and 64 colored at 14 13-16c. It is the last meeting of the season.

Why Men's Hats Have a Bow.

A bow is always to be found on the left side of a man's hat. This is a survival of the old days when hats were costly articles. In order to provide against the hat being blown away in stormy weather a cord or ribbon was fastened around the crown, with ends hanging so that they could be fastened to part of the attire or could be grasped by the hand. The ends fell on the left side, of course, as the left hand is more often disengaged than the right. When not required it was usual for the ends to be tied in a bow. The bow became smaller and smaller, but it still remains and is likely to do so as long as men wear hats.

Care of Teeth.

If you were to tell the average woman that her teeth were not clean she would look at you in indignation. Does she not brush them every morning and night? This is not all that is needed to keep them in good condition, however, and it is not even enough to keep them clean.

Of course, upon arising in the morning the teeth must be brushed and the mouth washed out. However, at this early stage it is unnecessary to use a powder or paste, as it is taken for granted that the mouth has been made clean the night before upon retiring. Therefore in the morning it is only necessary to brush the teeth with water and then to rinse out the mouth with a good wash. Now the mouth is in good condition to receive food.

After the morning meal comes the real brushing. This time a reliable paste or powder should be used, the teeth scrubbed with a brush up and down as well as across the surface so as to get out every particle of food.

Also remember to scrub the inside as well as the outside of the teeth, for this is where the deadly tartar forms, and that is at the root of almost all dental troubles.

Now rinse out the mouth with water several times to free it of all paste or powder. Inspect the teeth with a looking glass held close to the mouth, and if they are not perfectly clean in the crevices take a piece of dental floss and force between the teeth. This will free them of all particles which remain in the mouth.

After each meal go through this process if you wish to keep your teeth in the best condition.

The Neck and Throat.

Now that the blouse with the open neck is the thing to wear it behooves women to take great care of the skin of the neck and throat, which, if once allowed to become red and scorched through sunburn, looks very unsightly indeed. Some people, it is true, admire the becoming brown which is characteristic of the river girl, but we do not all brown becomingly, and in any case constant tanning and browning to such an extent are bound to harm the skin in due course. If you make a practice of wearing low necked blouses out of doors don't forget your sunshade and rub a little glycerin and rosewater well into the skin of the throat and neck a few minutes before going out, wiping it off again with a soft towel. Then dust over with a little powder. This affords ample protection as a rule, unless, of course, you spend a very great part of your time on the river or at the seaside. If you can easily avoid low necked blouses for both river and seaside wear, for "prevention is better than cure."

How to Walk Correctly.

"The proper way to walk," says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion, "is with the foot almost flat so that the weight of the body at each step is distributed over the entire sole of the advanced foot. The heel should touch the ground first and foot point straight ahead. Do not attempt to stiffen the knees in military style, but let them give somewhat with each step; let the arms swing naturally at the sides and take a moderately long stride. If you do considerable walking and hold the body erect with the chest high you need not worry about the correct way, because in order to cover ground rapidly you will strike the ground with the heels first, and in a long walk any one who toes out will observe that there is an ever increasing tendency to point the foot straight ahead."

When Washing Dishes.

If the palms of your hands get scaly and dry never put them into strong soda water, such as is used in washing up dishes, without first rubbing vaseline well into them. Put your hands in the water as little as possible. Use a dish mop or cloth in washing up dishes.

After finishing the dishes cleanse your hands thoroughly in a lather of good toilet soap and hot water. Apply glycerine and rosewater and wear a pair of chamois leather gloves for a while.

Preventing Sunburn.

To entirely prevent sunburn on a tender skin is almost impossible. But it can be greatly lessened by rubbing a cold cream on the face before going out in the strong sunlight. Cover the face and neck (if the neck is to be exposed) with a cream, rub it in for a few moments; then wipe it all off, but not too thoroughly, and dust with rice powder. When you return use the cream and powder again. If your face should become chapped bathe it with very hot water.

Friction For the Skin.

Friction means a healthy skin and good complexion. Unless the pores are kept open by exercise it is necessary to resort to artificial means to keep the skin in good condition. A flesh brush, loofah or friction glove should form part of every bathing equipment. A rough towel, used vigorously after the bath, can also accomplish much.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Labor seems not such a terrible thing when it is either distant or lucrative.

Politeness and courtesy are qualities said to have been exhibited by the human species in a bygone generation.

Bravery is often merely a matter of brag and backing.

The rising generation feel that had the task been theirs they could have reared a much more desirable crop of parents.

Nobody has much sympathy for the fellow that is sorry for himself. He does such a good job of being sorry that anything else seems superfluous.

C.P.R. EMPLOYES FORM HOME GUARD

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has approved of the formation of a Canadian Pacific Railway Company of the Montreal Home Guard to consist of about 250 men, the arms and equipment to be supplied by the railway company. Half of the company will be enrolled from the offices and employes at the Angus Shops and the other half from the Windsor and Place Viger Stations. All departments of the service will be embraced in the composition of this company. At a later date miniature rifle ranges will be established at Angus and Windsor Station, where members of the company will be afforded an opportunity to practice marksmanship. From the number of applications already received the movement promises to be a complete success. The first parade of the Windsor Street Company was held on Saturday afternoon when there was a full response to the roll call. Instructions in drill were given by Sergeant Major Sharpe, who was formerly in the Imperial Army, having seen active service in Burma and South Africa, and who is therefore well qualified to give drill instructions.

COLD CONTRACTED AT FUNERAL OF WIFE CAUSES HUSBAND'S DEATH

Francis Ward of Manvers Passes at Advanced Age of 81

Pneumonia, which developed from a cold, with which he had been seized, when attending the funeral of his wife, one month ago, hastened the death of a life long resident of Manvers, in the person of Francis Ward, who passed away at the homestead yesterday, in his eighty-first year.

The late Mr. Ward was born and had lived all his life in Manvers and he was a man who won the respect of all. He was a Presbyterian in religion and a Conservative in politics.

Of a family of ten children, four sons and two daughters survive. The sons are George, of North Monaghan; Alfred of Smith and Henry and Hiram at home. Mrs. Alex. Potts of Manvers and Miss Elizabeth Ward, residing at home are the daughters. Two brothers are John of Edmonton and Thomas of British Columbia and three sisters are Mrs. Andrew Holmes of Reaboro; Mrs. Joseph Dieson of Seaforth and Mrs. James Love of Joliette, Mich.

A son and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ward also died within a month of one another, the former after a short illness and the latter was killed in an accident.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock from the homestead to Ballyduff cemetery, where the remains will be laid at rest beside those of his wife and only a short distance from where the late Mr. Ward was born.

HAD HIS SPREE ON STAR BEER

Blacklister's Tale Not Accepted in Police Court

In police court this morning a blacklister was assessed $10 for being under the influence of liquor while on the prohibited list. He stoutly denied he had any liquor on that day, but the evidence was otherwise.

He was put in the box and swore it was only Star beer he had received at the Montreal House.

Andrew Hall, a colored gentleman from Georgia, who was beating his way on the C.P.R. last evening and was charged with vagrancy was allowed to go by the Magistrate as accommodation here is poor. He's going back to Kentucky to join his brother who owns a string of race horses.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

The record of improvements effected on the Dominion Atlantic Railway, which the Canadian Pacific Railway leased in 1911 for 99 years shows that new wharves have been built; 45 miles of new track have been ballasted; 30 miles of new 85 pound rails have been laid down; 120 cattle guards have been filled and replaced by surface guards, while dozens of bridges have been either improved or rebuilt. In round figures, 6,000 feet of wooden bridges have been replaced, or will be replaced very shortly, by steel bridges, concrete arches, and rail top culverts. New brick stations have been built; a general renovation has taken place, costing many thousands of dollars. The new stations include those at Wolfville and Annapolis Royal, Mosherville, Patterson and Iberville. During the past two years 35 stations have been repaired and painted, and platforms have been erected. A new line from Centreville to Weston, 14 miles in extent, has been built in the most substantial maner. Both permanent work and the lighter things which needed attention have been carried out; and today the old Dominion Atlantic looks spick and span—looks as if it had taken on a new lease of life.

BROKE THROUGH WEAK ICE AND SANK TO HIS DEATH

Sydney Craven, Pupil at Grove School, Lakefield Loses His Life

Impetuousness of youth, urging the boy in his 'teens to take big chances, resulted in the bright young life of Sydney Craven, a pupil of the Grove School, Lakefield, being suddenly closed yesterday afternoon about four o'clock. For several days the boys of Grove School have been skating and playing hockey on what is known as McKenzie's Bay which is close to the school. With the day's classes over the youngsters again went out and as is customary commenced chasing a puck. Young Craven accompanied by another pupil named Markill drew away from the main body of skaters and not realizing the extreme danger, they skated on to a section of "honeycombed ice" which had been marked off from the safe ice by means of a few bushes being laid on the surface.

The two youths skated around the bushes and even refused to heed warning shouted to them by Mr. Lody Rogers, a Lakefield young man who happened to be passing along the shore. They had but taken a few strokes after hearing Mr. Roger's warning, when the ice broke and simultaneously they were struggling in the cold water amid cakes of ice. Mr. Rogers not being a swimmer could not plunge in the water, so he secured a fence rail and walking out on the ice a few feet he reached the rail to them. Both took a hold on it and from their calmness it appeared as though both would be rescued but Craven lost his grip and went down. He made a desperate effort to grasp the ice when he re-appeared at the surface but the ice was not of sufficient thickness to bear his weight and he went down again, for the last time. Markill had been rescued through the efforts of Mr. Rogers.

In the meantime many of the other skaters and Mr. McKenzie, one of the masters at the school, had arrived on the scene and Mr. McKenzie immediately plunged into the water. He dived once and was unsuccessful in finding the body and in the second dive was instrumental in bringing it to the surface. Bystanders' assistance enabled the plucky teacher to bring his burden to the shore and no time was lost in summoning medical assistance. Before Dr. Fraser arrived artificial restoration was begun. The doctor assumed full charge and every means of resuscitation was brought to force but all with no results. Life was extinct. The body was carried to the residence of Mr. B. Marling, another teacher, and Undertaker Hendren of Lakefield notified.

Sydney Craven who was about fourteen years of age had been in attendance at Grove School for over two years. This was his third term. His home is in Annatolis, Md., and his widowed mother has been notified of the sad fatality. She wired back that she is on her way to Lakefield, and the funeral arrangements are left over, pending her arrival.

The unfortunate youth's absence will be greatly missed by his fellow pupils for he was a general favorite and though small for his age he was very active in athletics. He played for Grove's second hockey team against the P.C.I. last winter and performed for the same team on the rugby field. Although Grove School, since its founding, has always promoted aquatic sports this is the first drowning accident among its students.

WAR PREPARATIONS OF GERMAN ARMY AND THE ACTUAL EFFICIENCY

Nation Fails in Individual Initiative For Action in Unforseen Contingencies---Cavalry is Inferior.

The special correspondent of the London Morning Post at Belgian headquarters has communicated to his paper some highly interesting and instructive information regarding the studious war preparations of the German army and the actual efficiency of that body in active service. The correspondent writes:

"A general impression of German war tactics, after some ten weeks' observation in the field, leaves these two points outstanding: (1) the wonderful thoroughness of preparation on the part of the German nation for this war, and (2) the failure of the German nation to assert a superiority over, or even an equality with, its British, French and Belgian antagonists in unforeseen contingencies calling for individual initiative.

In all that could be provded for by thought beforehand, in all the book-work and routine of war, in the matter of discipline and equipment, the German force was generally above criticism. In those other things which tell of the character of a race, of its native wit, and its natural courage, the German has taken second place to the Belgian, the Frenchman, the British man. Constantly therefore in considering the German at war — apart from the strategy of his campaign, which is outside the scope of this article — one is moved to astonishing alternations of applause and censure.

Spoiling the Citizen.

But perhaps there is an explanation which will do away with the astonishment. It was impossible that an intelligent and methodical people should devote their whole energies to the perfection of a plan of aggressive war without securing great results; but impossible also that this devotion to a single and inhuman end should not have de-humanized the people, somewhat, lowered their general intelligence, injured their spirit of initiative. To train for the defence of one's own country is, I suppose, an almost necessary part of intelligent life. But to submit to a military despotism for the sake of organizing a war of conquest over one's neighbors must spoil the citizen somewhat in drilling the soldier. Germany has profited in the field by the scientific exactness of her slavishly drilled people. She had lost in the field by the failure of these people under circumstances when equipment failed and a 'common sense shift' was called for, when obedience was not sufficient and an individual elan and judgment was called for.

Perfect Equipment.

In regard to equipment, the first days of the campaign disclosed how perfected was the German war machine in this regard. The first German dead gave up many secrets. The German soldier was clothed in cloth of a color which on the average of European days gives a greater degree of invisibility than khaki. This cloth was excellently woven to withstand weather and strain. Each soldier carried in his pocket-knife a little equipment for mending his clothing (as also a little first aid Red Cross bandage of adhesive plaster). . . . His boots were of wonderfully strong and supple leather, such boots as only civilians in good circumstances can buy. His valise of cowhide, tanned, with the hair on, was most ingeniously furnished with straps and removable belts of white metal for ease of carrying and ease of packing and unpacking. Its contents, disposed in various little cupboards, gave the maximum of food reserves and clothing comforts for the space and weight. Quite regardless of the value of the soldier's life at the critical moment of an action, the German plan at least equipped him perfectly at the outset, even with materials to facilitate the work of pillage and incendiarism which had been mapped out for him. The order books of officers and non-commissioned officers showed the same meticulous devotion to details. During the years of preparation the German mind evidently devoted itself with passionate industry to providing for every possible emergency of the soldier's life in the field.

Inferior Cavalry.

As the equipment was the zenith, the cavalry tactic was the Nadir of the German army. Whether against the Belgian, French or British cavalry the German cavalry was always inferior. The much-advertised Uhlans might appear from some episodes to have done good, daring work. But in real fact they were simply shot out from headquarters like stones from a catapult, recklessly, non-intelligently, to raid somewhere, anywhere. With so many of them out they had to blunder on some success. In the aggregate, their record was one of failure. Repeatedly they were trapped and almost exterminated by far inferior forces. (I recall one instance of many near Osmael, when six Belgian cyclists ambushed twenty-five Uhlans and killed thirteen of them without suffering any loss.)

On the march they had no idea of scouting. In the first phase of the war the German idea of cavalry on the march in hostile country was for a squadron of twenty-five to precede by 500 yards the regiment, without flank scouts or advance scouts. Taught by heavy losses they modified that a little. But never did they seem to learn the scouting side of cavalry work. Nor did their cavalry seem to know how to follow up a retreat. I have been in several retreats and never were they harassed by the German cavalry. To give another proof from personal experience, when the Germans, after a victory were about to enter a town on three occasions I went forward on a cycle to get in touch with their advance cavalry and make sure of the direction they were taking. Never was there any real ground for uneasiness in doing this, though some press gentlemen once reported me as killed because they saw me cycling out, apparently into the arms of the Uhlans, at Louvain, after the battle of Tirlemont. The German cavalry, in short, had no eyes; its courage was of the blind sort, and rapidly evaporated on a hot challenge.

Whether the cavalry was able to shine in any charges such as used to be rehearsed so carefully at Potsdam I do not know, not having seen any charges or encountered an officer who has.

Competent observers tell us that both the British and the French artillery have outclassed the German in the heroic combats of Northern France. It is a very high record for them, since the German artillery, from the heaviest to the lightest, is without a doubt extraordinarily good in tactics. The way in which it co-operates with its infantry seems to me specially good. Step by step it follows the infantry advance with patient care, and I have never noticed it either smash up its own men or leave them at a pinch without the moral support of the guns. In return the infantry sticks well to its guns, and I have never noticed nor have I heard recorded an instance where the infantry cleared out regardless of the fate of the guns.

In artillery ranging the Germans evidently relied upon:

(1) An excellent system of maps. The area of operations was very minutely set out in numbered squares; and on one battery finding its fire effective on a certain square the number of that square was sent on to as many other batteries as was necessary, and their fire thus could be instantaneously directed on to the required spot. This system of ranging with the aid of squared maps is not peculiar to the German artillery; but it seems to have reached with this a high degree of perfection.

(2) By aeroplanes and captive balloons. The captive balloons usually operated in couples on two flanks; and, I conclude, took cross-observations from two angles of view.

(3) By the use of spies within the lines of their antagonist. This was probably their most effective means of ranging. Spies, passing for peasants and wandering about the field of operations, would give signals as to the position of batteries, trenches, and Staff Officers. The absence was noticeable of ranging by "brackets" (i.e., finding a distance by trial firing first at, say, 2,000 and 2,300 yards, then at 2,100 and 2,200 and finding the range at 2,050). This system of ranging seems almost obsolete with German batteries.

Moral Effect of Artillery.

The moral effect of artillery fire is thoroughly understood and explained by the Germans. Against infantry in trenches after finding that shrapnel does not cause a quittance they try high-explosive—less likely to be deadly, but more terrifying. On a wide battlefield a proportion of their guns will fire—seemingly without known aim—at points all over the place. This is evidently not only with the hope of finding a chance mark but of breeding terrors over the whole field, making troops in reserve feel that they are, too, under fire. It is an expensive way of causing fright but against unseasoned troops can be useful.

The German big guns were laid perfectly. It was always possible to see what they aimed at and to recognize that the aim was good. In the bombardment of Antwerp in particular I noticed this. The guns clearly had exactly the right elevation and exactly the right deflection. Whether it was intended or not—I think it was—the last stage of that bombardment showed perfection in big gun pointing. Six shells in quick succession came within a few yards of the Hotel de Ville. I imagined that the idea was to hurry up the burgomaster to come out and surrender. (He had left on that mission at 8.30 just before this banquet of shells arrived.)

There was no notable horse artillery work on the part of the Germans, so far as I could see or hear. The artillery worked perfectly "by the book" but without dash or any spirit of adventure. Certainly it was never pushed forward to punish a retreat.

The Infantry's Mass Attacks.

The German infantry has to be credited with a very stubborn courage, but it was, so far as can be judged, chiefly "officers' courage." Left to themselves the German infantrymen were prone to surrender though the same men under their officers would suffer the most severe punishment without flinching. The virtues and defects alike of the German military system concentrated in the infantry. Educated, partly by godly precept, partly by brutality, into believing that the military officer is a being apart, worthy of worship, the German rank and file follow their officers, or are driven forward by their officers, in positions which seem almost desperate. On the other hand, the German rank and file deprived of their officers, are more helpless than French or British soldiers in the same circumstances. In entrenching himself the German soldier is as good as the best (book work and methodical practice!). In taking advantage of natural cover he is far inferior to the British (absence of initiative). The virtues and defects alike of his training send him to the charge in close platoons. Thus he is easier to kill but more terrible if he arrives. His marksmanship is inferior to that of the British soldier, but his volely firing—helped by the flat trajectory of his rifle—can be very effective. He is not fond of the bayonet as a weapon.

Not at all sparing of the infantry when the order to advance is given, the German tactics is nevertheless careful of its infantry in that it practices a very thorough artillery preparation and, as I have noted before,

MADE IN GERMANY HELPED THE GERMANS

Renewed Interest in the Cry, Commandments Distribut- by the Chamber of Commerce.

Many Canadians have in the past been inclined to scoff at the "Made-in-Canada" appeals which have been launched by Canadian manufacturers, and have expressed doubt as to their effectiveness in achieving the object desired. No doubt when Germans commenced their persistent advocacy of the "Made-in-Germany" idea they, too, had to contend with those who belittled their efforts. With characteristic tenacity, however, they stuck to their guns, with the result that "Made-in-Germany" has become one of the most powerful commercial appeals in the world. Most Germans know the Ten Commercial Commandments, which appear below, almost as well as the decalogue handed down by Moses.

1. In all expenses keep in mind the interests of your own compatriots.

2. Never forget that when you buy foreign articles your own county is poorer.

3. Your money should profit no one but the Germans.

4. Never profane German factories by using foreign machinery.

5. Never allow foreign eatables to be served at your table.

6. Write on German paper with a German pen, and use German blotting paper

7. Use German flour, eat German fruit, and drink German beverages. They alone give your body the true German energy.

8. If you do not like German malt coffee, drink coffee from the German colonies.

9. Use only German clothes for your dress and German hats for your head

10. Let no foreign flattery distract you from these precepts, and be firmly convinced that whatever others may say, German products are the only ones worthy of the citizens of the German Fatherland.

If the words Germany and German are changed to Canada and Canadian the foregoing Commandments are applicable to every individual in Canada, and should be adopted by him in his daily life, particularly under present conditions. Bear them in mind the next time you go into the corner store to make a purchase.

A Plucky Prince

The act for which Prince Maurice of Battenberg won honorable mention in Sir John French's despatches is thus described by Corporal J. Jolley, of the King's Royal Rifles. "We found the enemy encamped on the other side of a wood," he wrote, "making blockages on a bridge they were preparing to blow up. The order came that the bridge must be taken at once. Prince Maurice of Battenberg was the first man over." Prince Maurice was later killed in action.

Home of the Rosemary

The home of the rosemary was originally in the south of Europe, more especially in Italy, where it grows to the height of six or eight feet, either being trained upwards from the ground or embedding its roots in an old wall. It grows in three varieties—gold, silver, and green.

How to be Sure

Shopkeepers and merchants throughout the Dominion are giving magnificent support to the "Made in Canada" movement.

Occasionally a shopkeeper, through lack of accurate information, may express the opinion that a certain class of article is not made in Canada, or is made only of an inferior grade.

If you are conscientiously trying to give "Made in Canada" goods first call in all your purchases, do not be content to relax your efforts just because you happen to receive this answer.

The shopkeeper may be perfectly sincere in his opinion, but there are other people who are more likely to have full and accurate information.

Why not write direct to the Canadian Manufacturers Association, Montreal, Toronto or Winnipeg? They have agreed to constitute themselves a general information bureau for the assistance of those who are trying to live up to the "Made in Canada" idea, and a line to them will always bring you prompt and reliable information, as to how and where to obtain the article you desire most conveniently and most quickly. If it is not made in Canada they will frankly tell you so.

"Canada First" is Everyone's Duty

RUSSIAN VICTORY IS THE GREATEST OF MODERN TIMES

Grand Duke Said to Have Utterly Crushed the Enemy, Capturing or Destroying 100,000 Men--Russians Are Now Well in the Rear of the Invading Army.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Officials who have the ear of the Ministry of War, have been told privately that the Russians have won the greatest victory of modern times between the Warta and the Vistula, and about 60 miles from Warsaw.

The report is that the Grand Duke Nicholas' armies have utterly crushed Gen. von Hindenburg's divided army, have captured or destroyed 100,000 men and have cut off the retreat of the surviving corps.

"The German army which has been crushed and dispersed from the region of Lodz," says the Petrograd correspondent of The Daily News, "is Gen. von Machenzen's army. A portion of this army is now hastening back due north in the hope of being able to cross the Vistula in the region of Plock.

"Gen. von Hindenburg has ordered the army of Gen. Francois, which was engaged for some weeks in the Soldau Neidenberg country, to redouble its efforts to break through the Russian army westward of Mlawa. More reinforcements have been sent him from Thorn, but the Russians still keep their grip on the railway inside the East Prussian frontier."

The London Daily Telegraph has a despatch from Granville Fortescue, its special correspondent:

"Disaster once more has overtaken the Germans in Poland. Their second army of invasion is smashed. Not only has their flank been cut, but the Russians are well in the rear of the German army.

"The battle of Koluski is the crowning victory of the campaign in Poland. What is left of the German army is still being pursued. Surrounded by a wall of Russians and in terror of the steel of the Cossacks, the enemy is fighting with the desperation of despair to regain his own frontier.

"When the final cost is counted, Koluski will be found a greater blow to German hopes than either Lemberg or the San.

"Koluski, which is about 20 miles directly east of Lodz, and is a junction of three railroads whereby the troops might reach the Vistula valley, was of vital importance to the Germans. In order to anticipate a counter-attack, they made a demonstration against Lodz. This effort only infuriated the Russians, who, balked for the moment of their prey over the Silesian border, turned to face the foe on the new quarter.

"It has been an axiom among military authorities that the Russians cannot take the offensive. Bury that axiom right here. They took the offensive like maddened wild-cats, and they fought rings around the Germans. Admitting their numerical superiority, their victory is none the less brilliant, considering the difficulties involved in their change of front. The undoing of the Germans was their contempt for the Russians' numbers. You cannot disregard numbers when the opposing troops are as well armed as you are.

"The battle of Koluski still rages and straggling regiments of Prussians are even now fighting their way out of the swamps and over the foothills, Cossacks surrounding them like wolves."

QUEEN'S OWN MEN ARE LUCKY

Two Privates Now Lieutenants in Gordons

SALISBURY, Eng., Nov. 27.—Two privates in the Queen's Own Rifles have fallen into luck. They are W. F. Eardley Smith, of the Bank of Montreal, Toronto, and Sydney H. Griffin, formerly an employe of the T. Eaton Co. They are now second lieutenants in the famous Gordon Highlanders.

The British regiments are greatly in need of officers owing to the heavy casualty lists, and the fact that the Canadian force has more than 200 officers, who are not required, will be considered more or less of a blessing. There is every chance that many of these officers will be found within a short time attached to Kitchener's huge army, which is now training all over the country. They can get placed easily, according to reports.

Smith and Griffin had been members of the machine gun squad of the Queen's Own for two years. Lieut. "Mato" Macdonald, who is in command of this section, stated that they were about the most experienced men he had.

Drawings of human beings and animals in ancient caves in France are regarded as proof that man was right-handed as far back as in the Stone Age.

KREISLER IS IN AMERICA

Great Violinist's Wound Will Not Affect His Playing

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Lieutenant Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, and his wife returned from Europe on the steamer Rotterdam. Both served with the Austrian army, Mrs. Kreisler as a Red Cross nurse and his husband with his regiment, the Third Gratzer Jaeger Regiment.

"We were in the trenches near Lemberg when the Cossacks made a night attack on Sept. 16," said the violinist. "They rode right over our trenches and a horse's hoof struck me a glancing blow. Its rider then jabbed me in the right thigh with his lance. I shot him dead.

"My orderly found me several hours later and got me back to the field hospital. There were so many there that I was sent to Vienna. Mrs. Kreisler came and nursed me. I shall be all right in a few weeks and my wound will not affect my playing."

Kaiser Saw Troops Defeated.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—"The Emperor of Germany last week witnessed in East Prussia from a hill called Obernlagen, a German defeat at the hands of the Russians," says the Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail. The Emperor took an abrupt leave of the commander-in-chief, asking him to convey his greetings to the troops.

Lima, Peru, Nov. 27.—The Peruvian cruiser Colonel Bolognesi has been assigned to patrol the coast of Peru in order that the neutrality of the country be preserved.

TEN THOUSAND JEWS FIGHT FOR BRITAIN

London, Nov. 27.—British Jews are proving their loyalty by offering their lives wholeheartedly for the empire. Ten thousand of them are today serving with King George's forces by land and sea. Three officers: Major Seligman, R. H. A.; Captain Frank L. Beddington, 18th Lancers, and Lieut. E. J. Wyler, R.A.M.C.—have been mentioned in Sir John French's despatches, as well as Sergeant Marks, of the Coldstream Guards. In all nearly four hundred Jews are holding commissions in the army and navy, and they include several of the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Another interesting fact is that there are two hundred Jews in the Canadian contingent now in England. Many of these men were born in Russia and Roumania and had settled in Canada.

LATIN REPUBLICS TO UNITE

Want to Bar Belligerent Ships From American Waters.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The U. S. Government has been asked by the principal nations of South America to co-operate with them in negotiations with the belligerent powers of Europe to bring about the exclusion of all belligerent warships from the waters of the two Americas and safeguard the trade of pan-American countries with each other.

Argentina, Chile and Uruguay have laid their suggestions before the Washington Government, while Brazil is considering the advisabality of taking a similar step. Practically all the Central and South American countries have been circularised by some of the principal nations, resulting in a series of diplomatic conferences in Washington and the capitals of South America, which are now in progress.

While the proposals are different in character and scope, they all seek the same end—the restoration of the trade between North and South America, paralyzed by the European war. The movement also has for its object the removal of possible causes of serious friction between the countries of this hemisphere and the European belligerents on questions of neutrality.

Already Chile, Ecuador and Colombia have had serious difficulties with the belligerents over the use of the wireless and the coaling of foreign warships, whose presence in the Atlantic and Pacific is growing obnoxious to South American countries.

The Peruvian cruiser Colonel Bolognesi, has been assigned to patrol the coast of Peru in order that the neutrality of the country may be preserved.

Another cruiser will sail to-day to do scout duty along the southern coast. Both cruisers are under orders to protect British steamers, by force if necessary. As a result of this action by the Government, steamships will renew their voyages immediately.

VILLA GIVES GUARANTEE.

Arrival of His Troops In Mexican Capital Will Be Free From Looting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The forces of Gen. Zapata are preserving order in Mexico City, according to advices reaching the State Department yesterday through various channels, and the agents of Gen. Villa in the capital are co-operating in these efforts. It was not known last night whether any of Villas' troops had entered the city.

An official report from American Consul Carruthers, who is accompanying Gen. Villa, was received last night, however, which said Villa had renewed his promises that there would be no looting or disorder after he entered the capital, and that the rights of all residents, native or foreign, would be respected.

Gen. Carranza has arrived amid acclaim in Vera Cruz, where he has established his provisional capital, from which he will conduct his campaign against Villa.

Cold on Fighting Lines.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—(By wireless to London.)—In the eastern theatre of the war the weather generally is clear but frosty, the temperature averaging 10 degrees centigrade, below zero. At Cracow fog alternates with snow.

In Flanders the rain continues and the temperature is near the freezing point. A low temperature prevails in the Lorraine plateau. In the Vosges the crests of the mountains are covered with about six inches of snow.

Town Not Damaged.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27.—Aviators returning from the Austrian fortress of Przemysl say, according to a despatch received here from Budapest, that the Russian bombardment has not done the slightest damage to the town. The defenders of the fortress are reported to be showing the greatest and keenest activity and to be continually repulsing the Russians. The fortress has provisions for a year, the airmen assert, and the garrison is in excellent spirits.

Actor Robert Lorraine Wounded.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Robert Lorraine, the well-known English actor and aviator, who is a second lieutenant in the British flying corps, is among the wounded reported from army headquarters under date of Nov. 22. Mr. Lorraine, who was one of the earliest and most enthusiastic of the English aviators, narrowly escaped death in a flight across the Irish Sea three years ago.

SPIES IN DOCKYARDS.

Lord Haldane Says Britons Are Giving Away Secrets.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Morning Post's naval correspondent, in discussing the theory that the battleship Bulwark was lost through an internal explosion, gives a technical description of how artificial detonation may be caused, and then says: "Members of his Majesty's Government may endeavor to persuade the public that the danger of German spies is exaggerated, and also that the authorities are dealing with it adequately. The fact remains that his Majesty's dockyards are infested with spies. If evidence of that statement is required the answer is that evidence is in the possession of the naval authorities. The Lord Chancellor, on Wednesday committed himself to the statement that the dangerous spies in this country were not German, but were British. Some of the information which had been given could only have been given by people who had access to it because they were British. His belief was that we had every little of this kind of thing, but that we had some, and that it was formidable he could not doubt."

DIXMUDE IS RECAPTURED

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Dunkirk, France, telegraphs that Dixmude has been retaken by the allies. He says:—

"The French marines attacked the town strongly on Tuesday night and drove the Germans out of three lines of advanced trenches. On Wednesday they followed this up by entering the town in an irresistible charge.

"The enemy did not halt in their retreat until they were seven miles out of the town. The marines lost 800 men."

New movements of German troops into western Belgium from Germany are under way on a large scale, and much heavy artillery is being sent forward from Essen.

Train loads of pontoons have been sent to the canal region between Arras and the coast.

The next attack is expected to be delivered with its greatest force near Arras.

The correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"Two days ago to the south of Dixmude, where the Germans are still concentrating large bodies of infantry and cavalry, the enemy has made an attempt to throw a pontoon across the Yser. Nearly 200 men engaged were covered by a powerful German battery. So well was the German plan arranged that the Franco-Belgian forces could not possibly have prevented the construction of the bridge without losing heavily. The Germans completed three parts of the task when up came a British armored train roaring and spitting death. It raced into sight quite suddenly not more than a thousand metres from the nearly-completed bridge, and the 200 German sappers were taken completely by surprise. They dropped their tools and bolted. Many did not get far, as four of the train's guns and half a dozen mitrailleuses hurled a perfect tornado of shot and shell at them. In less than five minutes nearly a hundred engineers were killed, about fifty more were wounded, and their handiwork had been blown to splinters. It was undoubtedly a magnificent bit of work. The armored train did not have everything its own way. To get within range of the bridge, the train had to be exposed to the fire of a German battery which had been keeping a watchful eye on the construction of the pontoon. The enemy's guns managed to hit a store truck at the end of the train and one of the guns was also put out of action.

The official communication issued last night by the French War Office reported comparative quiet throughout the day. Heavy snowfalls occurred at various points along the line. The communique says:

"In Belgium complete calm prevailed.

"In the centre there was cannonading, but no infantry attacks.

"There is nothing of importance to report from the Argonne.

"There was a small engagement to the east of Verdun."

HOCKEY WAR MAY BE STAGED DURING THE COMING SEASON

O.H.A. and Northern League Will Likely Clash — New Organization Forging Ahead

London, Nov. 27.—There are whisperings of war in amateur hockey in Ontario this winter. It is expected that the first gun will be fired at the O. H. A.'s annual meeting Toronto a week from Saturday. The battle will be waged between the O. H.A. and the Northern Hockey league, and from present indications it promises to be a real fight.

The Northern league is apparently standing up for what the O.H.A. has been trying these many years to suppress, tourist hockey players. The Northern league is a comparatively new organization, and in broadening its circuit and competing with the greater and older organizations, it must have some sort of ruling like this to attract new clubs. It is a great deal easier to secure a hockey club by January 1 than by August 1. It also assists the smaller towns in putting out just as good teams as the larger cities where jobs for the players are more easily secured.

The O.H.A. is sitting up and taking notice. The Ontario Hockey Association has had things pretty much its own way as far as amateur hockey in this procince is concerned. Many previous attempts have been made to form rival organizations, but the O.H.A. has always outclasses them. Now, the Northern league has shown by past performances that it can deliver the goods, and it ranks as the most formidable rival of the O. H. A.

The Northern league's opposition may have one effect upon the O.H.A. this winter. It is not unlikely that as large a number of players will be refused certificates in the Hewitt league as last year. Some of the things that resulted in bans on certain players last season may be overlooked or passed by in the O.H.A. now that a rival is sharing the platform of popularity. However, that there will be a few clashes between the two organizations this coming winter seems certain, and hockey fans in this part of the province will watch the fight with considerable interest.

There is lots of room in the province for both organizations. There may be war between them at the start, but there is little doubt that in the course of time they will become affiliated and work together. The Northern league has adopted O.H.A. rules in almost every instance. The only difference is in the residence clause.

It is understood that the O.H.A. will take steps to prevent the Northern league's advance into former O. H.A. strongholds by making a ruling forbidding any club entered in the O.H.A. also being represented in the Northern league.

The O.H.A. has a residence clause that dates back to August 1. The Northern league has a residence clause that allows a player to play on a Northern league team as long as he resides in the town or city on and after January 1.

In the past the residence clause in the Northern league rules was of little account as most of the teams were made up of homebrews who had been born and brought up in the towns they played for. Now, however, as the league is broadening out, it is either going to make or break the organization, with the odds favoring the former course.

WANTS TO COME BACK

Marsans the Cuban Would Like to Join Giants

New York, Nov. 27. — Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder, who jumped from the Cincinnati Nationals to the Federal League, has informed his friends in New York, according to reports published here yesterday, that he desires to return to organized baseball and would like a berth with the New York Nationals. Marsans is said to be playing ball just now in Havana, stationed at first base, under an assumed name. It is not generally believed here that Manager McGraw of the Giants will undertake to have the Cuban's name stricken from organized baseball's blacklist.

The Shop team uncovered their masked guns for a while and took three straight games from the Unknowns by their best bowling thus far. They promise some further surprises for some other teams later in the season.

Game tonight, Nov. 27, between Examiner and Belmont Clubs should be a god contest. It is understood that the Belmonts will produce a dark horse.

The Australian Blacks.

It is believed by many persons that the blacks in Australia are dying out. As a matter of fact, says a correspondent of the London Standard, no such thing is happening. The belief, however, is easily explained. As civilization advances, and it is yearly advancing, the blacks recede farther and farther into the back blocks and unknown country, save a few who have acquired the craving for opium or drink. These latter succumb amid the advancing wave of civilization and seldom leave any children. Those who have passed inland, if they do not increase, have certainly not decreased. In some few cases whole tribes have died out when civilization has reached them, but these have usually been small tribes.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS FOR CURLERS AND ANOTHER YEAR FOR ANGUS

Prospects for the coming curling season are very bright and there is some stir amongst the local curlers already.

Extensive operations are taking place at the rink. The upstairs room is being remodelled and made very cosy for the coming season.

The old system of gas lighting is being removed and up-to-date, electric lighting is being installed.

The services of Mr. Angus McIntosh have again been secured, which fact insures ice for the members at the earliest date possible.

The committee met last week to select the various rinks, and after that everything will be in readiness for the ice.

The ladies' interests are being looked after as well as the men's, the ladies' rooms are being re-arranged, and every convenience is being used on their behalf, to make them comfortable.

IMPORTANT AMENDMENT TO O.H.A. RULES UNDERWAY

Talk of Dividing Games Into Three Periods — Varsity at Work — Hockey Items

Among the amendments to the O. H. A. rules which will be discussed at the forthcoming annual meeting will be one which provides for the division of the hour of play into three periods of twenty minutes each. Indications now are that the proposed amendment will receive very general support of the clubs and will doubtless be adopted.

Especially in junior games is the strain of going at top speed for half an hour severely felt. This condition is aggravated if the team happen to be playing on ice that is not hard and keen. In addition to these objections to the half-hour period, the referees are instructed to allow no offside loafing, so that the forwards must keep on the move.

The Intercollegiate Union favors the O.H.A. offside rule and the twenty-minute periods. When the proposed Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is formed next month there is no doubt that the O.H.A. rules will be adopted as a whole. With a uniform playing code some of the difficulties which have been encountered when intercollegiate and O.H.A. teams met will be overcome. —Toronto Globe.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Varsity hockey candidates were out in full force at the Stadium Wednesday evening, over twenty candidates putting in an appearance. They kicked a Rugby football around for awhile, and ran the track a couple of times. Ernie Jupp was the only senior of last year's team on the job, but several promising players from out of town are available. Mathers, the good junior cover point, has developed into a big boy, and should make a place on the seniors. Saunders, Stratton and Milne are still tied up with the Rugby boys, but will be in excellent condition for hockey.

Having exhausted the supply, says the Toronto News, of out of town players who will turn out with the Rowing Club Harvey Sproule has put over another "scoop" and given out the startling intelligence that Gordon Meeking and "Moose" Heffernan will desert the Toronto R. and A. A. This is a cruel blow to hand "Livey" right after the O.R.F.U. meeting.

Edmund Lamy, the speed skater and outfielder of the London Canadian League team, is goig to try out with Ottawa in the N.H.A.

James Murphy, manager of the Ontarios has announced that his club is for sale.

Galt has organized and will place two teams in either the Northern League or the O.H.A., but it looks like the Northern League.

MANUFACTURERS AND CONSUMERS

An Excellent Statement — How the War Strengthens the "Made-in-Canada" Appeal

Under the heading, "Buy Canadian Goods," a well known Canadian periodical has the following sane and well worded appeal in a recent issue:

This is no longer a commercial appeal. It is the rallying cry of combatants fired with imperial and national patriotism. We must furnish Britain and our friends at war with food and supplies. More land should be brought under cultivation, and part of our urban population transferred to the task of bringing wealth out of the soil. The money received for our products will go far to provide for our necessities and, if wisely circulated in our own country, will alleviate distress from unemployment. This is the perfect circle that will benefit our farmers, keep our factories in operation, provide work, maintain credit and retain money. It is the duty of Canadian citizens to spend every possible dollar at home during the war. Sending money abroad in payment for foreign goods indirectly helps the enemies of Britain, because such action weakens ourselves. Campaigns should be organized by the citizens of every community. The support of the local press, public officials and consumers should be enlisted. It is evident that a flood of goods, from neutral countries, deflected from the ports of belligerent nations, will threaten to overwhelm our markets.

Develop Our Resources

While our fellow-countrymen fight in Europe, let us fight at home to develop the sources of our national wealth so that they may strengthen us in time of need. All that stands between our safety and prosperity and the colony-hungry Germans is a group of ships in the North Sea. The tremendous struggle is only begun. The end is shrouded in uncertainty. The struggle and its after-effects will tax us to the limit of endurance. Canadian producers and consumers must stand together, watchful of one another's interests, ready to sacrifice personal inclination, willing to incur inconvenience. This is no time to indulge whims, prejudices or fancies in favor of foreign manufactures. Neither should citizens who have means economize too severely; spend now, keep factories going and retrench later. In such a crisis everything should be done by the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, and, if necessary, by the Government, to keep down to the lowest possible figure the price of articles manufactured in Canada which Canadians are asked to buy for patriotic reasons. Manufacturers and other producers must show consumers that they are willing to dispense temporarily with profits and will be satisfied to make ends meet. By restricting their purchases to Canada, consumers are bound to reap the advantageous lowering of prices which is the natural result of large outputs, and they will escape the inevitable levies and possible confiscations which must follow wide-spread unemployment. Fight the enemy by buying at home.

Unite For Home

Those of us who remain in Canada can hamper the enemy by making our own country as near as possible self-sustaining, and producing from our natural resources the greatest possible amount of wealth. To the farmer in the first instance, the miner, the lumberman, the fisherman and the manufacturer is given an opportunity to serve their country in their own calling. Let us present a united front for "Made-in-Canada" production. Begin by patronising the stores in your own town. Ask for goods made in your own district if you have factories therein, but at any rate buy "Made-in-Canada" goods, and if what you want is not made in Canada be sure to buy within the Empire.

SAILORS' REWARDS

In the old days the successful sailor reaped his own reward. He took a large share of the value of the prizes he captured, and on one occasion there was some unpleasantness between Queen Elizabeth and Dartmouth because it was thought she took more than her share.

Spoils were divided in certain proportions, the commander taking the lion's share, though each man received his quota. And very rich were some of these prizes, when it is remembered that great galleons were continually employed carrying gold, precious stones, and valuable merchandise from Spanish colonies to the Motherland, such as the rich ship that sailed from Manilla to Acapulco, and was once captured by Anson.

Knighthoods were conferred on successful admirals, and they frequently received a monopoly in some article of merchandise. Blake only received a diamond ring worth $2,500 and a letter of thanks; but Anson was one of the first to be given a peerage, which he should not have had much difficulty in keeping up, considering his captures.

Hawke received a peerage and a pension of $10,000 a year for his distinguished services; while numerous peers can point to gallant ancestors who won the title. But no sailor has ever received so many rewards as Nelson.

Young Baronet's Death

Sir Archibald Gibson Craig, of the Highland Light Infantry, a lieutenant, was in charge of sixteen men, and the party was proceeding to a somewhat steep hill when they came across a large number of Germans, the enemy's force being estimated by the H. L. I. privates who told the story at between 300 and 400. The men had not been aware they were so close to the Germans, but when Sir Archibald recognized the position he drew his sword, and, holding it aloft, shouted, "Charge, men! At them!" rushing in front of his small force himself. "Our men fired a volley and then charged with fixed bayonets," said one of the soldiers. "The Germans in the rear apparently thought there were more troops than there really were, for they retreated. Our men had, however, soon to retire, two being killed and three wounded, and the remainder got back safely, carrying the bodies of their dead comrades and also the wounded men. Sir Archibald Gibson Craig was shot through the mouth, and I think he must have been instantaneously killed."

WITH THE SEAFORTHS

"Grand Were the Highland Men" Wrote a Young Officer of Them.

A lieutenant of the Royal Army Medical Corps with the 2nd Seaforth Highlanders, writing to his mother, said: "Every morning we stand at arms at three a.m., and move about four o'clock, with or without breakfast, which consists of tea and biscuits, bacon if we have time to cook it. Our sleeping places vary; an orchard, a plowed field, and now and then a billet, which means a floor in a house of some sort. We are often so sleepy that we lie on the road. I often feel myself reeling like a drunken man.

"I am no martyr. I am doing less than the men. Just think of them, march, march, march, and then while we sleep it falls to the lot of many to guard the outposts, with no chance of shelter, and then next day marching wet, hoping to dry as they go. Only the highest praise can be given these men. At present we are entrenched. Our first day in this place (where we have been for five days) was awful. We were under fire the whole day, with practically no protection. Our total killed and wounded amounted to seventy. The men never wavered, and gaps were always filled. Grand were the Highland men, and grander still will be the account they will render. I am lucky to be with such men."

LIVINGSTONE—SHEARD.

(Toronto World.)

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock the marriage was solemnized at the residence of Mrs. Henry Sheard, in Grosvenor street, of her daughter, Ella Gertrude, to Mr. Thornton Fleming Livingstone, only son of the late Robert Livingstone, Aurora, and of Mrs. Livingstone. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. J. Simpson, pastor of the Carlton street Methodist church, in the bow window of the drawing-room, which was a forest of palms and chrysanthemums, an aisle being formed with heavy white cords leading to the window, where a white and gold kneeling stool was arranged for the bride and groom, the large drawing-room accommodating the seventy guests easily. The wedding music was played by the favorite orchestra, and Miss Gladys Jones, London, sang the "Happy Song" after the ceremony. The hall and staircase were beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums, the orchestra playing behind a screen of tall phoenix leaves. The dining-room was arranged with yellow chrysanthemums and ferns, and the bride's table with roses and lilies. The beautiful fair bride, who was brought in and given away by her brother, Dr. Robert H. Sheard, wore a gown of white satin with basque and court train hemmed with seed pearls, with overdress of Chantilly lace. Her veil was of tulle and lace hemmed with pearls, and crowned with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley, and wore the groom's present, a pearl necklace. Miss Florence McMurtry was maid of honor, wearing pale blue satin with white tunic and black velvet picture hat with blue, and she carried an armful of Beauty roses. Miss Pearl Carton, Peterboro, was bridesmaid, in shell pink ninon and lace, with black velvet picture hat and an armful of pink tea roses. Mr. William C. Gowland was best man. The groom's gifts to the bride's attendants were necklaces of pink coral roses and pearls, and to the best man a silver-mounted snakewood stick. Mrs. Sheard held a reception after the ceremony, wearing a gown of black crepe de chine and ninon. Mrs. Livingstone, who was also present, wore black. The Rev. R. J. Simpson proposed the bride's health. Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone left for the Eastern States by the 5.20 o'clock train, the latter wearing a black tailor-made trimmed with fur and a hat to match, and a stole and muff of ermine.

War Preparations Of German Army

the artillery follows the infantry step by step.

German Air Work.

In regard to minor points, the German air works was far better than was expected in the absence of any special advertisement of her airmen before the war. Her aeroplane proved a very good, serviceable model, and the aeronauts were, it seemed, standardized. A Taube could always be relied upon for about the same speed and daring. The German commissarist and transport had astonishingly hard work to do, and seemed on the whole to do it very well. Occasionally the men lacked food; but I do not think they ever lacked ammunition. Food problems were in part solved by the system of pillage, but the demands of the wasteful guns had to be supplied from headquarters and, apparently, always were.

In the villages and towns the individual German soldier showed a tendency to become human and to attempt to fraternize with the inhabitants. Perhaps it was partly because of a fear of the results of this that some of the outrages were organized. Fraternising with civilians would have deteriorated the discipline, so slavish in its methods, and would have probably led to many desertions.

Summed up the German army in the field had all the virtues which a thorough book preparation and a slavish discipline would give. But it was not the ideal army; and, in my judgment, inferior in effectiveness to the French and the British armies. Comparing it particularly with the British army, it showed no point of superiority, and several points of inferiority.

KITCHENER IS CHEERFUL

Allies Are Winning Everywhere he Tells the Lords

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Field Marshal Earl Kitchener yesterday afternoon made a speech in the House of Lords, where he summarized the war's operations. Among other things, Earl Kitchener said:—

"The Russians have defeated the Germans with the heaviest losses yet suffered; the Germans have made no advance since I last addressed this House; the British are in touch with Turkish forces thirty miles east of the Suez Canal."

While the losses of the allies were admitted by Earl Kitchener to be great, at the same time, he said, they have been slight compared with those of the enemy. He added that the allied troops are in excellent spirits and confident of success.

Regarding recruiting, Earl Kitchener said that he still had room for men, and he was confident that the men would answer the country's call and see that the war was brought to a successful conclusion.

"The time will come," said Earl Kitchener, "when we shall require many more and I will then make it thoroughly well known."

Sir John French's successful resistance to the German advance, Lord Kitchener told the Lords, was maintained, notwithstanding that the German supports had been pushed up in large numbers. "In the early days of November," he continued, "no less than eleven army corps were attacking the British position. At this critical period the eighth division was despatched from England to join the forces in the field, and the valuable co-operation of our allies on our left materially strengthen the British position.

"Strong French reinforcements occupied a considerable portion of the British trenches in front of Ypres, and with their front thus appreciably shortened, the British troops which for over 14 days and nights had never left the trenches or allowed the enemy to maintain a footing in them, were enabled to enjoy a partial well-earned rest."

ADDING MACHINE

They Are Not New, as Pascal Invented One in the Year 1642.

The adding machine is of modern development, but not a modern invention, a passable one having been invented in 1642 by Pascal (1623-1662), a celebrated French geometrician, philosopher and writer. Later, in 1671, the adding machine was modified to facilitate multiplication by Gottfried Wilhelm Leibnitz, a German mathematician of great achievement, and his invention was followed by many improvements.

A notable experimenter in this line was Charles Babbage (1792-1871), an English mathematician, many years professor of mathematics at Cambridge university. In order to secure accuracy in tables of logarithms he conceived the idea of doing the work by machinery and was commissioned by the British government to superintend the construction of a machine for the purpose. He spent much time and money in experimenting and attained some remarkable results, but died before perfecting his machine.

All calculating machines contain certain features devised by special reference to the work to be done, including circular metallic disks, wheels with teeth, etc., ingenious, but not more complicated and no more responsive to human intelligence than many other machines. The thinking is all done by the operator.—Philadelphia Press.

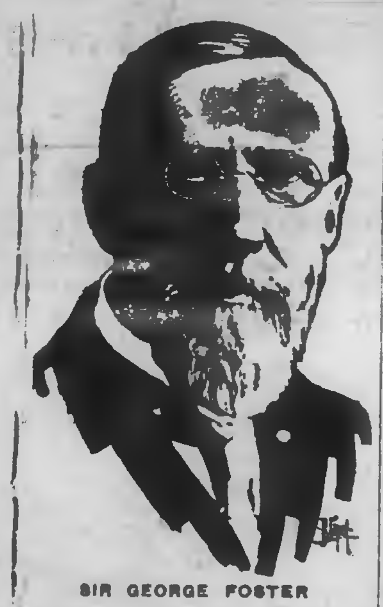
SIR GEORGE FOSTER VETERAN OF POLITICS

One of Sir John Macdonald's Old Guard — Brilliant Speaker With Hobby for Gardening

Sir George Eulas Foster is about the last left in harness of the old fighting Conservative leaders who were colleagues of Sir John Macdonald. His long political career and his temperamental chilliness lead many to think of him as a very old man, years older than his actual age—he was born in 1847.

Sir George is a member of a United Empire Loyalist family and he is chiefly famous as a speaker, fierce and sarcastic in debate, with criticism of finance his specialty. He was born in Carleton County, N.B., and after graduation at the University of New Brunswick and some study in Europe he was for a short time professor of classics and physics in that institution. In 1879 he became a temperance lecturer, appearing on platforms in both Canada and the United States.



SIR GEORGE FOSTER

He made his first appearance in Parliament in 1882 as member for King's County, N.B., and three years later was appointed Minister of Marine and Fisheries in Sir John Macdonald's Cabinet. He prepared the case for Canada for the Fisheries Commission, which met in Washington in 1884 and framed the Chamberlain-Bayard treaty which settled the controversy between Canada and the United States concerning the ownership of seals in Behring Sea. Sir George succeeded Sir Charles Tupper as Minister of Finance in 1888 and retained that portfolio practically without a break until the defeat of the Conservative Government in 1896. Sir George was defeated in St. John's City in 1900 and in North Toronto in 1908. In the latter constituency, however, he was successful in several successive elections. When the Borden Government was formed he joined the Cabinet again, as Minister of Trade and Commerce.

The veteran politician and his wife spend their vacation months in his native Province of New Brunswick. They have a pretty summer home on the banks of the St. John River and Sir George devotes a great deal of time to gardening, which is his hobby. His garden at Spohagin is a very fine one, containing over a hundred varieties of flowers and shrubs.

Those who have come into contact with Sir George in private life say they have been surprised to find that he is not cold and harsh, but mellow and mild. But his pungent style in debate has made his reputation and his lack of any of the graces of the "mixer" emphasises the popular impression of him, which is that he is brilliant intellectually and a rattling good speaker, but distant and unapproachable.

MENTAL THERMOMETER SHOULD REGISTER HIGH

Don't be governed by your mental thermometer.

It may be the plaything of mood and an uncertain liver. Never mind. Get rid of the moods and fix the liver.

It may be used to greeting you in the morning and dictating to you the day's work, how much shall be done and how well it shall be done. If so, forget the habit.

Learn to rise above your mental thermometer. Learn to be master of it. Learn how to change it to normal.

If it has dropped by reason of some failure of the day before, or some disappointment, look it squarely in the face the next morning and laugh at it.

Blow it full of sunny, happy, optimistic thoughts and make it get so busy that there will be no other possible thing for it to do but rise.

When your mental thermometer is right, the chances are that your body will be in a normal, healthy condition.

And when both are right, health and happiness are pretty apt to get together under the same roof.

SHELLING THE RED CROSS

Coldstream Surgeon Killed While Dressing Soldier's Wounds

A Coldstream Guard added some further details to what has already been made evident in regard to the German disregard for the Red Cross. "After I was found by the ambulance, I was taken to a sort of cave, but we couldn't get out from there because the Germans were shelling the Red Cross. I saw a medical officer in the Coldstreams killed by a shell while he was dressing a wounded man. And that was not an isolated case, for they shelled a farm in which the Germans had left eighty of their own wounded. And British troops were killed in trying to get the German wounded clear, and altogether thirty-four were got out.

"And I'll tell you something that may interest you. Amongst a number of prisoners we took was a chap who used to be a waiter in —— Hotel, London. I had seen him there, and knew him, and he said he was glad to get out of the fighting, and wished that he had been taken prisoner sooner."

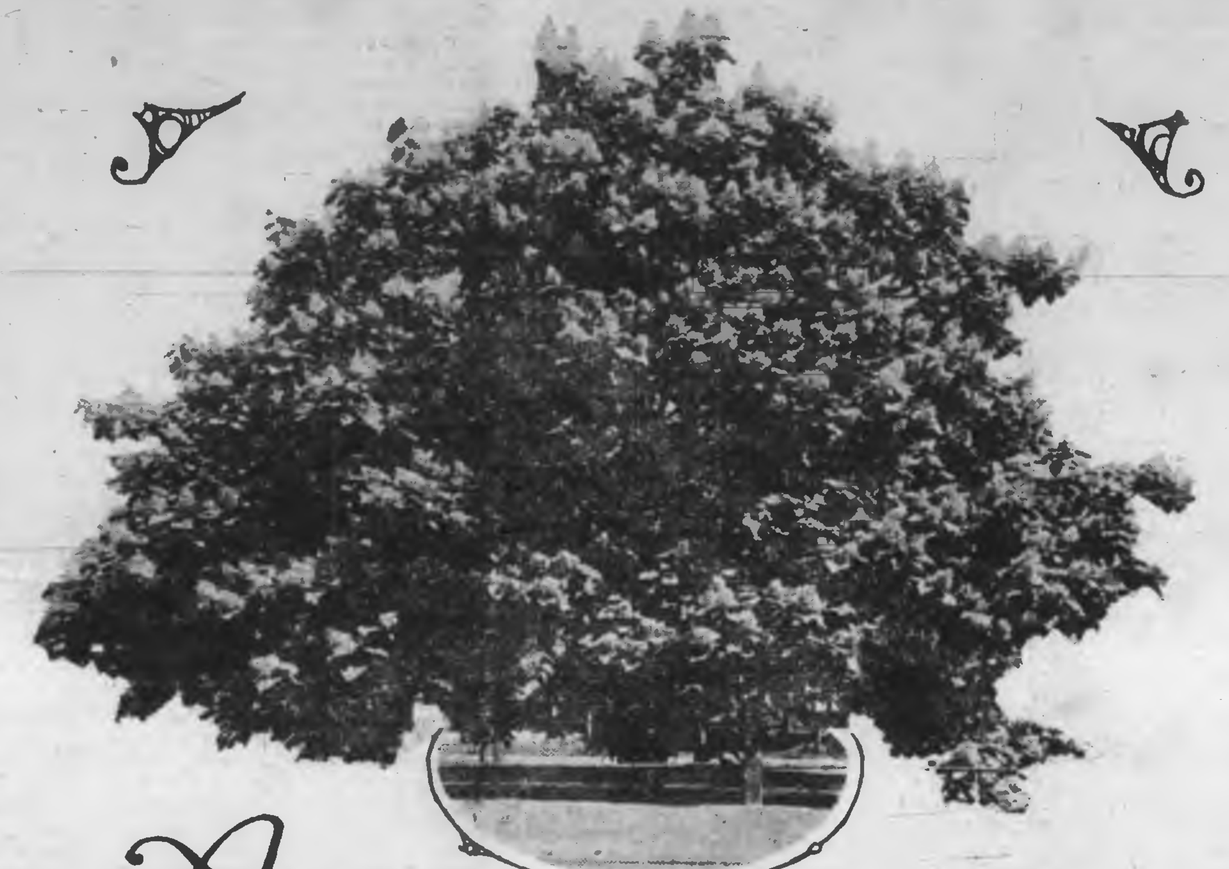
BEAUTIES OF ONTARIO



A Catalpa Tree

London, Ontario, famed as the "Forest City" of Canada, out of compliment to its beautifully shaded streets and parks, has one distinction, from the horticultural point of view, that no other city in Canada possesses. This is a rare specimen of the exotic shrubby-climber, the catalpa tree.

For size, wealth of foliage, clustering panicles, and gorgeousness, it stands unique in the Dominion. The catalpa tree is one of the most desirable ornamental leaves. It has simple leaves, but with terminal panicles of showy flowers, and long linear pods, with winged seeds. Some species show divided leaves and trumpet-shaped flowers. The general effect is one of showiness.

Although shrubby in form, the catalpa tree in the tropics and in the Orient (China and Japan) often grows to the tops of the highest trees in those countries. The wood is light and soft, but very durable, and the bark, which is very bitter, is much used by medical practitioners as a vermifuge. In the industries the wood has various uses, according to particular species.

From one of the species comes the gourdout of which are made the familiar and popular calabash smoking pipes. Another species is used extensively for railway ties, because the wood, though light and soft, is exceedingly durable, withstanding the corroding effects of rains and snows. And another species, West Indian, but known as French oak, is highly prized both for its architectural value and for its tannin.

London, Ontario, besides being one of the most beautiful and prosperous cities of Canada, has an important local history and tradition. For instance, Governor Simcoe thought of naming the city-to-be, "Georgina-on-the-Thames," but finally decided on the shorter and more famous name, London, the decision being taken on the advice of Englishmen, who kept in their hearts a warm affection for their native city in England, the metropolis of the British Empire.

The Canadian London is also known as one of the most fertile and wealthy sections, not only of Ontario, but also of the great Dominion. With a population of more than 50,000, it is noted for the enterprise of its citizens and for the manifold industries it sustains. It is a military post, and the seat of one of the best universities in the Dominion. Well laid out, its streets beautifully shaded and paved, London is noted for its fine churches and public buildings. All in all, in site, in environs, in highways, waterways, in residential architecture, and public buildings, and in parks, London, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific, is quite one of the finest cities of the Dominion of Canada.

Admires Our Soldiers

Words of Praise From an Englishman For Canada's Fighting Men.

Writing in Answers, a British soldier who fought alongside the Canadians in South Africa, pays a remarkable tribute to the fighting qualities of the men from this Dominion.

"When the news was cabled that Canada was sending so many men to the war," he says, "one of my first feelings was, Heaven help the Germans concerned, for they'll need it!

"I have met the Canadian fighting man both in detail and in bulk, and he is unique and amazing. He has cold blood, hot courage, not any fear of death, a sweet smile, and a murderously-sure eye, and no superfluous flesh.

"The Canadian is more like the Yankee than he is like the Englishman, though his unruffled soul is all his own. He contrives to be high spirited and serene at one and the same time, and to him has been given the cloak of invisibility. He will leave your side in the most casual and matter-of-fact way—and vanish. It is the art of taking cover worked out to its ultimate possibilities.

"The Canadian, being utterly brave, never goes in for histrionics. He takes all the cover he can get, advances with the caution of a redskin, shoots to kill, and accepts with a stoical soul whatever comes to him. He is not too fierce about drill; but he is savagely efficient in the real things that matter.

"Deep in the roots of his being, seldom finding any expression in words, is a love for and belief in the Empire that stay-at-home Englishmen, who bear so many of its burdens, hardly ever feel. We live in an old land, but he has seen the first furrows in the rich, virgin soils, and is a doer of deeds as well as a thinker of thoughts."

RACED FOR TERRITORY

Famous English Explorer in Contest With Germans For Parts of Africa.

"There is only one conclusion so far as Germany's overseas possessions and spheres of influence are concerned; they must cease to be German." This was the keynote of an address delivered in Toronto by Sir Harry Johnston, G.C.M.G., of London, England.

Sir Harry Johnston, among British people at least, is Africa. He is responsible, more than any other person living to-day, for the establishment of British interests in Central Africa, as well as in the southwest and east.

The first idea that Sir Harry had that the Germans might be contemplating the acquisition of territory in Africa was when he came upon a German traveller dying of thirst by a desert wayside. He was trekking through the southwest in a Boer wagon when he came upon the unfortunate traveller, who was given relief and sent along his way. "That man," said Sir Harry, "had been sent out to make treaties with and to secure territory from the native peoples; and that was the beginning of Germany's attempt to get a foothold in Africa."

Referring to his own travels in Africa, Sir Harry told of the assistance in exploring the Congo River that had been rendered to him by the late H. M. Stanley. He told of his work in British East Africa, provoking much amusement with the remark that "between scientific exploits, we managed to establish the British flag here and there. We made treaties with the native chiefs that would pass muster, and endeavored to acquire valuable new territory.

"In East Africa," he said, "I worked all the more feverishly, because I was aware that the Germans were also working diligently in that same region. But I think we got most of the territory worth having. More by accident than design," he added humorously," we managed to get the healthy places, and left the Germans with those parts that were unhealthy."

"NO SUCH THING AS FEAR"

Trooper W. R. Long, of the 2nd Dragoon Guards, writing from hospital to his father, said:

"I am up and walking (slowly), and I think that in the course of another week I shall be on my way back to the regiment. The old boys have not done so badly, especially at the place where Lieutenant C. N. Champion De Crespigny was killed. We were surprised at daybreak. The Germans had their guns and maxims on us, with a fine range, too, but they cannot time their shells, so they merely make a bit of a row, and it takes more than noise to frighten us boys. When we had pulled ourselves together and got a bit of a firing line stretched out and one maxim on the go we settled down to what we thought was going to be a twenty-round go. We fought them in the good old style for half an hour, and at the end of that time we had to our credit twelve guns, four maxims, and about fifty men. Two of my dear old pals went under. One big sausage manufacturer that we captured stood about 6 feet 2 inches, and he let me go and take his hat off, and never said a word. There is no such a thing as fear out here in the British army, but there is no chance of getting a really good scrap. If we get close they put their hands up, and our officers won't let us go in and use the butts of our rifles or even our fists."

The Kaiser's Part

Glad to Turn to Real Soldier For Help in Tight Position.

What part does the German Emperor actually take in the military operations? One who has been with him on manœuvres, and who has observed the attitude of his generals towards him on those occasions, believes that their attitude then may be taken to be their attitude now. He says that the Kaiser, being a man of very remarkable superficial qualities, both can, and does, talk strategy by the hour. Having devoted his whole life to the study of military problems, he has all the technique and jargon of strategy and intricate tactical operations at his finger-tips. "But the ability instantly to see and seize opportunity has never been his, unless the opportunity looked as big as the side of a house. I have been on manœuvres with the Kaiser, and I have been a witness to the little comedy which invariably accompanied field exercises. The Emperor was always in command, and his side always won—it generally had all the advantage of numbers and position. When things were going well, none disputed his leadership, but when there was a difficulty it was always 'Now, Von So-and-So, let me see what you would do in this case.'"

However, it is said that the Kaiser is fully conscious of his own limitations as a strategist, though wild horses would not drag an open admission from him. But, while his personal leadership is of no account, save for the encouragement it gives his troops, he has a very shrewd eye for a good leader, and Von Kluk's selection was due to him.

Faithful friendship is like the needle which speedily repairs its puncture with the thread in its wake. —Ivan Panin.

STORIES FROM THE FRONT

Short Extracts From Letters Written by Soldiers in the Trenches.

Cheerfulness under any and all circumstances is reflected in letters written by British soldiers in the thick of the fray to friends and relatives at home as can be proved by the following brief paragraphs:

Lance-Corporal Laird (Royal Army Medical Corps) wrote: "I hung my shirt out all night to dry on a tree. At daylight I found that a piece of shell had taken the elbow off it. Good job I wasn't in it."

An officer in the Leinster Regiment: "I spent my morning potting at Germans in a turnip field across the way. Awfully cute chaps. They had the tops of turnips stuck in their helmets and through my glasses I could see a turnip growing very rapidly, then have a crack at it, and it would disappear like a shot.

An officer in the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry: "The houses have really strong cellars, and when the German big siege gun is turned on, as it is every day, we get into them. We call the gun 'Calamity Jane,' and she lives on a huge motor wagon about seven miles away. Fortunately you can hear the shell coming quite distinctly and generally have time to go to ground."

Jack Hesselop (Essex Regiment): "I was in South Africa and that was a jolly beanfeast to what this is. I have been all day soaked to the skin standing knee deep in water. Sometimes all is quiet, then shot and shell come down like rain and men drop out all around one, but we English Tommies know how to shoot and that is more than the Uhlan does. We came to fists with them once and we know more about that also. I downed three with my fist and I believe I struck four with my bayonet before I got shot."

Captain A. F. G. Kilby (2nd South Staffordshire Regiment): "The Germans have got a huge gun in position somewhere near here which we call 'Black Maria,' and she leaves her card on us at 'frequent and uncertain intervals,' but without doing any damage. She dropped an unburst shell yesterday, which measured 32 inches long by 8½ inches in diameter—quite a cough drop."

Bismarck and the War

Iron Chancellor Responsible For Formation of the Triple Alliance.

The hand of Bismarck, the greatest statesman Germany ever produced, can be largely traced in the present war. One of the great aims of Bismarck's policy in the 'sixties and 'seventies was to secure his country against attack from without through alliances and political combinations. Curiously enough, it was the manner in which he engineered certain European alliances which led to this "man of blood and iron"—the phrase is based on the Iron Chancellor's own use of the words in a speech in 1862—being termed the "Peacemaker" of Europe; for while his foreign policy aimed principally at isolating France and rendering her incapable of forming anti-German alliances, he gradually combined the central Powers of Europe into a Peace League, the nucleus of which was the Austro-German Treaty of Alliance, which Italy joined in 1886.

So successful was he in counteracting the aggressiveness of Russia that the latter Power remained passive during the great Franco-Prussian War of 1870, when Alsace and Lorraine fell a prize to the Germans.

The Big Little Man

Recruiting in England seems to be proceeding fairly well. In the meantime a loud wail has arisen from the little men who have been rejected for lack of height. The five-foot-four men seize their pens to write to the newspapers to complain of the injustice. How about Nelson and Napoleon? They exclaim. And hasn't Japan something of an army and navy composed exclusively of little men? Welshmen are especially loud in complaint.—N. Y. Tribune.

Dominions Fight For Rights

Canada does not stand alone in her convictions that this war is hers as well as ours, and that she is fighting for her own rights and liberty as truly as ourselves. With one accord the Dominions have grasped the same fact, each for itself.—London Times.

A Big Fish.

A record kingfish was caught recently off Cape Brett, New Zealand, by an Aucklander, and landed after a fight which was estimated to have lasted over an hour and a half, and which went a long way towards exhausting the strength of the fortunate angler. The fish measured 5 feet 2 inches in length and 36 inches in girth, and scaled 97 pounds. The capture was made single-handed from a launch.

Tower of London

It is not generally known that until the year 1834 there was a menagerie of wild beasts in the Tower of London. In his book, "London Survivals," the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield writes:

"A word or two may be said about this collection of beasts. It commenced with the present of three leopards from the Emperor Frederick to Henry III.—an appropriate gift, as our sovereign bore three of these animals on his shield of arms, and then a white bear was added, for which the sheriffs of London were ordered to provide a muzzle and an iron chain to secure him when out of the water and a long, stout cord to hold him when fishing in the Thames. We fear his successors at the zoological gardens do not enjoy the like diversion. Then came an elephant. In the time of Edward II. there was a lion, for which the sheriffs, who must have deemed these creatures troublesome beasts, had to provide daily a quarter of mutton.

"Paul Hentzner saw here in 1598 three lionesses, a lion of great size—called Edward VI. from his having been born in that reign—a tiger, a lynx, a wolf, 'exceedingly old,' a porcupine and an eagle. James I. often visited the menagerie and used to enjoy baiting the lion with dogs or seeing a fight between a bear and a lion. In 1754 there were two 'man tygers'—orang-outangs—one of which killed a boy by throwing a cannon ball at him."

DRYING OUT GASES.

Various Methods by Which the Moisture Is Eliminated.

In the manufacture of gases like oxygen, acetylene or illuminating gas, to be used immediately in chemical processes, it is often necessary to free them from all moisture.

One of the commonest means is to bubble the "wet" gas through concentrated sulphuric acid or through a heap of glass beads covered with this liquid. Concentrated sulphuric acid has a powerful tendency to absorb moisture from other substances—a property which is aptly illustrated when a splinter of wood is dipped into the liquid. The acid extracts from the cellulose (which is the principal constituent of wood) all the hydrogen and oxygen, which cellulose contains in just the proper proportions to form water. The only other component of cellulose is carbon, and this alone is left, leaving the wood charred as if by fire.

Another way to dry a gas is to pass it through small chunks of calcium chloride. This extracts water or vapor from everything.

The most efficient of all methods is that adopted by the bureau of standards at Washington, where a machine is used which, by lowering the temperature of the gas passed through it, freezes out all the moisture and leaves the gas absolutely dry.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Working Butter.

Butter is worked enough when the salt is evenly distributed. Just when this point has been reached cannot always be told from the appearance of the butter immediately after working. But butter that has not been sufficiently worked will show white streaks or mottles after five or six hours. Whenever such streaks occur the butter must be reworked until all the streaks have been removed. To avoid mottled or streaky butter the only safe rule to follow is to work the butter twice. The first time it is worked lightly, just enough to fairly distribute the salt. It is then allowed to stand six hours or longer, when white streaks will be noticeable. The butter is then worked again until the color is uniform.—Chicago News.

Continuous Performance.

Mrs. Crabshaw (to daughter in hammock) — Haven't you got rested yet from last night's dancing? Marjorie—Yes, ma, but I'm resting for tonight's dance.—Puck.

All men that are ruined are ruined on the side of their natural propensities.—Burke.

THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER'S DAUGHTER

BY F. A. MITCHEL.

George Tuttle was a lighthouse keeper on the Atlantic coast. The tower was built on a tongue of land, and a few hundred yards back from it a railroad crossed the little peninsula, with a bridge on either side. George could see from the top of the tower in either direction trains coming and going.

At first the young man—he was twenty-five years old—was much pleased with his position. He was fond of reading and had plenty of time for the purpose. The lighthouse library consisted of a thousand volumes, so that he was not at a loss for books. But gradually loneliness came down upon him, and after awhile he discovered that he could stand his isolation no longer. He must give up his position or have a companion.

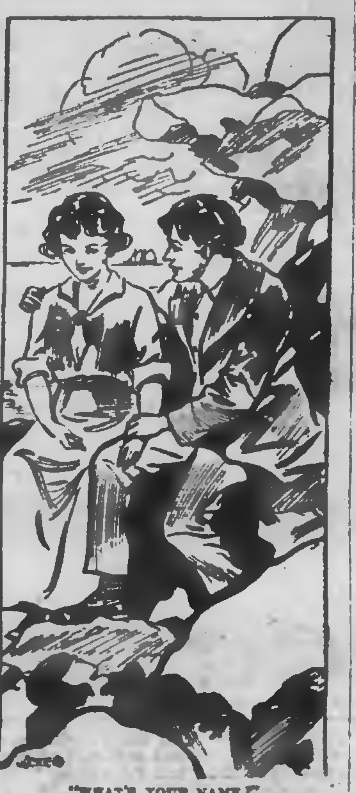
One day when the wind was off shore and the surface of the ocean was like a lake a girl in a boat pulled around the point so near that George, who was sitting on the rocks, spoke to her.

"You're a very pretty girl," he said.

She stopped rowing to hear some more of the same kind of talk.

"I hope you're not offended," George continued. "I'm the lighthouse keeper. You're the first person I've spoken to in a week or more. It's awful lonesome keeping a lighthouse."

"It must be," said the girl, dipping the oars in the water preparatory to moving on.



"WHAT'S YOUR NAME?"

"I wish I had a girl like you to come and live with me as my wife. I don't think I should be lonely any more."

She had begun to pull away, but at this let the oars rest idly on the water.

"Where do you belong?" pursued George.

"I'm the daughter of the chief of the life saving station."

"Oh! Do you think your father would give you to me?"

"I don't know. You might ask him."

"I can't leave the lighthouse."

"Not in the daytime?"

"Suppose some official should come when I was absent?"

The girl thought awhile, then said that she wouldn't mind staying there while he went to see her father. She didn't think he would object to her marrying, since he had a large family to feed. Then George said he thought he might as well go now as any time. The girl pulled in to the rocks. George helped her out, got into the boat and pulled away. He found her father quite willing to give her away, and after an absence of a couple of hours George came back with the news.

"An inspector has been here," said the girl.

"An inspector! What did you say to him?"

"I said I was going to marry the lighthouse keeper, and he had gone to see my father about it."

"Oh, you did! What did he say to that?"

"He said it was all right."

Then the two sat down on the rocks to get acquainted.

"You see," said George, "when a feller is cooped up in a lighthouse he has to get a wife the best way he can. What's your name?"

"Madge. What's yours?"

"George. You'll be Mrs. Tuttle."

"Did father ask you for references?"

"No. He said I must be all right or I wouldn't be given the care of a lighthouse."

"Reckon that's so."

"When will you marry me?"

"Most any time."

"Can't you bring the parson and the folks up here for the ceremony?"

"Maybe."

"Tomorrow?"

"Oh, that's too soon."

"Well, let me know when you're coming. Never mind that either. I'll be here. I can't go away."

A few days later when the wind was again off shore George saw a boat coming full of old and young persons. It was pulled up at the foot of the lighthouse, and they all got out, then lifted out a trunk. Madge was among them, dressed in her best. She and George stood on the rocks and a parson made her Mrs. Tuttle. Then a hamper was taken from the boat containing a bridal feast, and the party refreshed themselves.

* * * * * * *

"What's that?"

The lighthouse keeper and his wife were eating supper. It had been raining for three days, and there was a howling wind.

"A landslide."

The pair listened, but could hear nothing further except the gusts of wind and the waves beating against the tower.

"If that's a landslide it's probably over the railroad at the cut beyond the inlet. I've often wondered that it did not give way even in dry weather."

"The train," said Madge, "that comes down about 9 o'clock will strike it. If it's this side the cut the engineer won't see it."

"That would wreck a trainload of people."

George dare not leave the lighthouse, and Madge concluded that she must go to the scene of the trouble and do what might be necessary in the case. She put on her wraps while George lighted a lantern and handed it to her as she went out, picking up a box of matches at the same time and thrusting them into her hand.

Madge made her way to the railroad track, then, turning eastward, soon struck the bridge across the inlet. It was really nothing better than trestlework, though very short, being not more than 100 feet in length. To cross it on a dark night in a howling wind required bravery. Lest the wind should blow her off the bridge she got down on her hands and knees and crawled over to the other end.

George from the tower could see the dim light of the lantern moving slowly and knew by its quicker motion when it had passed the bridge. Then suddenly the light went out. At the same time he saw the stronger light of a locomotive some eight miles away.

Madge had fallen into a cattle guard, and her lantern had gone out with the jar. She was only slightly bruised and climbed out. She was near the hither end of the cut and pushed on until she stood on earth and stones that covered the track. The obstacle was not wide, but quite enough to wreck a train. She ran on a little farther till she could see through the cut. Then she set about to relight her lantern.

Opening the box George had given her, she found within it only three matches. She lighted one, but before she could put it to the wick of the lamp the wind blew it out. She lighted another with the same result. Then she was horror stricken on feeling in the box to find that but one match was left.

A trainload of people dependent on one match! At the same moment Madge heard the whistle of the coming train.

It did not take her long to realize that the lives of these persons depended not on the match, but on her coolness and ingenuity in transmitting its flame to her lantern. Kneeling on a tie, she tore cotton strips from her finest underclothing. Then she covered the lantern with the skirt of her dress, putting the end of the strips to the wick. Then, risking the flame communicating with her dress, she lighted the match and touched it to one of the strips. The strip caught the flame, but the wind, which could not be entirely excluded, blew out the match. Other strips caught, and the lantern was lighted.

George Tuttle, watching the place where his wife should be, saw the flashes of the first two matches that had been lighted. Then suddenly he saw a broader light. The front of his wife's dress had caught fire. Madge rubbed it in her two hands, and it appeared to be quenched. George heaved a sigh of relief, when he saw a light swinging to and fro. Then there was the sound of putting on brakes and the coming headlight stopped a few rods from the lantern.

It required an hour to remove the obstruction on the track, at the end of which time Madge was carried on the train to the point where the track passed near her home. There she was put off and in a few minutes was caught in the arms of her husband. As soon as she was released she handed him a handkerchief which she held by the four corners, full of money collected from the passengers whose lives she had saved.

The next day an officer of the railroad called at the lighthouse to see the woman who had saved many lives and many thousands of dollars for the company. He had a check with him for $10,000 into which he inserted her name. Nor was this all. The railroad company took her husband into its service and promoted him as fast as he learned his duties.

George Tuttle when he hears of long courtships and elaborate preparations for marriage sneers at them. "Do you suppose," he says, "I could have got a better wife by all that fuss? And, as for the divorces, there are more of them in proportion among the rich, who make most ado about their marriages, than any other class."

Mrs. Tuttle doesn't talk about such matters. She thinks any way is a good way if the parties concerned are worthy persons.

DALLES OF THE ST. CROIX.

Its Quaintly Shaped Rocks Formed by Plunging Waters.

At Taylors Falls, the terminus of the Taylors Falls branch of the Northern Pacific railway, the dalles of the St. Croix form a most interesting feature. The St. Croix river here tumbles over a bed of trap rock. The theory of its production is that a great outburst of lava was overwhelmed by a glacier. This very hard rock has been weathered into a great many quaint and curious shapes, and the vertical cliffs of from one to three hundred feet in height form a little canyon where the water is very deep.

Among the quaintly shaped rocks are the Devil's chair and Pulpit rock, in proximity to each other. These are on the Minnesota side of the river, and the trains pass beside them. On the Wisconsin side of the river is a remarkable profile rock. It is known as "the Old Man of the Dalles" and has a resemblance to the profile of George Washington. Minnesota and Wisconsin have set aside the land bordering the river as an international park.

Among the interesting features of the place are the cistern-like holes, known geologically as potholes. These range from one and one-half feet in diameter and six feet in depth to ten feet in diameter and ninety or a hundred feet deep. These potholes indicate the presence of former rapids high above the present surface of the water. The stream by its great eroding power and carrying pebbles and stones in its circular movement slowly excavated these potholes.—Exchange.

ANCIENT FOOTWEAR.

And the Old Ceremony of Baring the Feet at Worship.

The India Hindus and Mussulmans alike wear both sandals and shoes (slippers) and the latter boots also. The sandal (the word is Persian) was evidently the original covering for the feet over all southern and eastern Asia, while the shoe was probably introduced into India by the Persians, Afghans and Mongols, together with the "tip tilted" (Hittite and Etruscan) boot.

Both are usually made in India of leather, but never of pigskin, and, while the shoes are always colored red or yellow, the boots are generally brightly particolored, both among the upper classes being also richly embroidered in gold and silver and variegated silk thread and with bangles, bugles and seed pearls after the manner of the ancient Persian boots represented on Greek vases.

But, of however rare and costly elaboration, the invariable rule is to remove them after entering a private house just when stepping on to the mat or carpet on which the visitor takes his seat. They must be cast off, the right boot or shoe first, before the worshiper enters a temple or mosque, and it is still regarded as an absolute profanation to attempt to enter either fully shod.—Westminster Gazette.

Kid Gloves.

The majority of the fine kid gloves used in this country are imported from France. The superiority of French kid gloves over all others, according to an importer, is due above all to the perfection of the skins, the kids being reared in villages by poor peasants who own only a few goats and therefore take great care of them.

Another reason is that in France one workman takes the prepared skin and manipulates it himself right up to the finished glove. In Germany, on the contrary, division of labor is extensive and great factories turn out in two or three hours what requires two days' labor on the part of the French workman.

The best kid gloves still come from France, but the factories of Stuttgart are a formidable rival.—New York World.

Woolwich Arsenal.

Woolwich arsenal owed its establishment to an explosion which took place at a foundry in Moorfields. Until 1716 the government obtained its ordnance from private manufacturers, but in that year the explosion decided it to build a foundry of its own, and Woolwich, already famous as a naval station, was chosen as the site. Woolwich was only a small fishing village until the sixteenth century, when Henry VIII. laid the foundations of its prosperity by making it the royal dockyard. —London Chronicle.

Bows in Warfare.

The bow is first seen depicted on Egyptian monuments about 2000 B. C. Its form then did not differ greatly from that in use among boys at the present day. It was used in European warfare as late as 1640 and was deemed quite as effective as the arquebus then employed.

The Kindest Action.

"Papa," said the daughter, "Jack is coming tonight to ask your consent to our marriage. Be kind to him, won't you?"

"Certainly, my child," said the stern parent. "I'll do the kindest act I can. I'll tell him he can't have you."—Exchange.

A Remarkable Tribute to Gin Pills
FOR THE KIDNEYS

In February last, Mrs. J. P. J. Wedge of East Street, Summerside, P.E.I., wrote to a friend in Toronto and among other things said, "Gin Pills are the greatest of all Kidney remedies and a medicine which is at present doing me a world of good. They are worth their weight in gold to any sufferer". We asked permission, through a mutual friend, to publish the above extract and received the following testimonial to the great efficacity of Gin Pills.

Summerside, April 24th, 1914.
"Your letter of the 21st, to hand this evening, asking my permission to hand my letter to the National Drug & Chemical Co. You have my full permission to do so, and to them I give the liberty to publish and use my name if they wish, because Gin Pills have done for my husband and myself what no other remedy could do.

I have advised two other parties to use them: one being my Mother, who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years and one box of Gin Pills cured her so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many years. The doctors told her they could not cure her but could relieve her by an operation for a Floating Kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it was advisable for her to undergo. Upon my advice, she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."
MRS. J. P. J. WEDGE,

Remember, you can TRY Gin Pills BEFORE you buy them.

If the urine shows brick dust deposits or mucus—or is hot and scalding—if you have to urinate too frequently—if there is a burning in the bladder or pain in back—get Gin Pills at once and cure yourself. Gin Pills are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 and every box carries with it our spot cash guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Sold in U. S. under the name "GINO" Pills.

His One Mistake

Jim Crook, who travelled incognito—sometimes as a Russian prince, sometimes as an Italian count, occasionally as a German baron—spent most of his life crossing and recrossing the Atlantic from New York to Liverpool.

By profession he was a cardsharper; and he found the big ocean liners an admirable hunting-ground, for he was a man of considerable charm of manner, and had an extraordinary knack of establishing himself in the good graces of distinguished fellow-travellers.

Once he made a mistake.

"I should like very much to hear one of your sermons, sir," he remarked to an eminent clergyman whose acquaintance he had made on the first day out from Liverpool.

"Well," replied the parson, who was no mean judge of character, "you ought to have heard me last Sunday."

"Ought to have heard you! Was it an exceptionally good sermon?"

"Oh, no! But I was preaching in the chapel at Portland Prison!"

The Long-sought Chance

"Very well," she said, "if you are afraid to ask father for me we will consider our engagement at an end."

"Thank you," he replied. "I was afraid you might be disagreeable about it."

On the Table

"Beanbrough is very fond of the birds."

"Ah, ornithologist, eh?"

"No; epicure."

Very Far Off

"You are a relation of the Richleighs, aren't you?"

"Yes, a distant relation."

"How distant?"

"Well, as distant as they can keep me."

Might Not Need It

"Will you have anything on your face, sir, when I am through?" asked the barber.

"That depends on whether your razor slips or not," said the victim in the chair.

Still in Doubt

To a young bridegroom a man said: "So you've got a wife, eh?"

"Humph. I don't know," the bride groom answered. "Sometimes I think I've got her, and sometimes I think she's got me."

MAN'S CRITICAL AGE.

If Thirty Is Safely Passed Many Serious Diseases Are Outgrown.

A medical lecturer recently declared that in many ways thirty is the critical age in the average man's life. Once you reach thirty you have outgrown many serious diseases. On the other hand, you become liable to many others that seldom or never attack people in the teens or twenties.

Anaemia, for instance, is practically unknown after thirty. If you have not had it by then you never will. If you have you will have outgrown it at thirty or so. Acne, too—that spottiness of complexion so common among young people—is certain to have vanished by then.

Thirty, too, sees you out of the reach of the gravest of all diseases—consumption. If you have shown no sign of it by then in all probability you never will. If you have hitherto escaped rheumatic fever, too, you are fairly safe from it for life. Epilepsy and goiter, too, never make their first attacks on any one who has reached thirty.

But your thirtieth birthday lays you open to kidney troubles of all sorts. They are very rare in people under that age. Cancer, too, usually confines itself to people over thirty. And you may at any time be surprised by a touch of gout. You may have had a tendency that way all your life without knowing it. It never develops till the critical birthday is past. — New York Press.

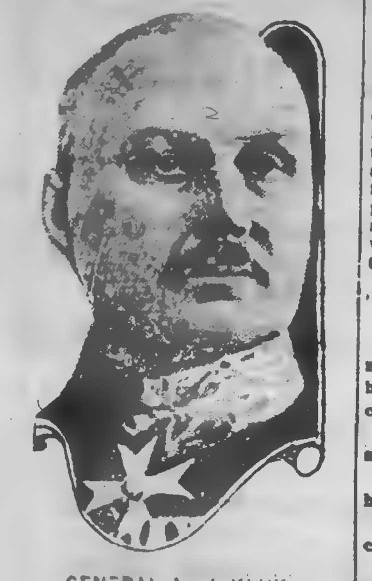
ONE GERMAN GENERAL ROSE FROM THE RANKS

He is Von Kluk, the Best of the Kaiser's Leaders Who Usually Get Command by Virtue of Title.

Military experts recognize in General Von Kluk the best commander in the German army. Great strategists and tacticians as Joffre and French have proved themselves, they have a worthy opponent in von Kluk. He has done all that a general could have done. All the Kaiser's other generals without exception are either German princes or veterans who were on the retired list before war began. The only soldier still in professional activity among the German commanders is von Kluk, and he, moreover, is the only commander who has risen from the ranks. The German fashion is to give important military commands to German kings and princes. In times of peace the German princes are the rulers of their people, and the theory is that in time of war they should be their leaders. Therefore, all the German princes are trained for war. If they would be content to assume the honors of leadership and leave professional soldiers to do the real planning, not much fault could be found with this principle, but the German princes take themselves seriously, and in fact, as well as in name, they are the commanders of the armies in the field.



GENERAL VON KLUK

Despite the "von" in his name, General von Kluk is a plebian, and for a plebian to rise to the rank of commander in the German army bespeaks unusual military ability.

Alexander Kluk was born in Muenster, Westphalia, in 1846, the son of an architect in the employ of the Government. He received his early education in the Muenster schools, and at the age of 19 entered the infantry. The following year he became a sub-lieutenant, and for seven years remained in that rank, though he fought through both the Austrian and Franco-Prussian Wars, and was awarded the Iron Cross. In those days it seemed to be generally recognized among his fellow-officers that he was an unusually brilliant soldier, and the fact that he failed to rise rapidly led to him being called Lieutenant von Ungluck, or Lieutenant of Bad Luck. However, fortune favored him when he won for a wife the Countess of Donop. Thenceforward his rise was more in accordance with his merit, though probably not directly due to it.

As lieutenant and captain he changed regiments several times, and in 1881 became an instructor in a training school for officers, finally being transferred with the rank of major to an important school at Breisach, in Alsace. He remained there for only a short time, as he preferred to rejoin the army. In 1896 he was made colonel of a regiment in Berlin. In 1906 he was general in command of the fifth army corps, and in the same year was made general of infantry. About a year before the flare-up he was appointed general-inspector of the eighth army corps, and it was from his command of the Koenigsburg army corps that he was recalled when war was declared. He was ennobled when a colonel, and since then appears to have been watched by the Kaiser. At the important annual army manœuvres von Kluk has never failed to win the praise of his Imperial master, and the command he now holds is a recognition and reward of his skill as a strategist and tactician.

"So you want to make a fresh start, my man?" said the philanthropist, as he looked at the notorious young cracksman.

"Yes, sir," answered the expert safe-breaker.

"I take it you're prepared to do any honest work?"

"Anything that'll give me another chance, sir."

"Well, now," continued his patron "I've a friend who is just producing a new melodrama. In it there is a scene where a burglar enters the room and rifles the safe. Now, you could do the thing to the life. Fifteen dollars a week, and you can start to-morrow."

The convict shook his head in a resigned manner.

"Sorry, boss," he said, "but it's no go."

"What! It's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it. But I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage boss!"

DECORATIONS FOR VALOR

Great Britain may well feel proud and boast of her military decoration, the Victoria Cross, which is only conferred for conspicuous acts of bravery on the field of battle.

France confers her distinctive badges in the well known form of the Legion of Honor.

Austria confers her Ancient Order of Marie Thérèse.

Germany's equivalent of the Victoria Cross is the Iron Cross.

Russia distributes her Cross of St. Vladimir sparingly to her successful soldiers.

Denmark has one of the most illustrious orders of chivalry, the Order of the Elephant, which ranks even with that of Britain's Order of the Garter.

Spain is justly proud of her Order of the Golden Fleece, which is, and has been, most sparingly conferred.

Italy never fails to decorate her soldiers with her Military Medal of Merit.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

WHEN misfortune is your enemy your efforts to look sorry are not the most successful things you have pulled off in the course of a long and useful lifetime.

We all think we know it all, but some of us are more or less successful in concealing what we think.

You never can tell by the looks of a woman whether she can cook or not.

Eggs have become so expensive that even used ones can't be thrown at the barnstormers any more.

Some things are hard to understand, but not the flattery of the man who wants you to go on his bond.

Perhaps man was made to mourn, and if so it is the only justification some people have.

There are persons that are so near-sighted that they can't see a thing that has no close relation to themselves.

An opinion is certainly your own if you acquired it by a disbursement of cold, hard cash.

It is hard to believe that our own harmless little idiosyncrasies are any relation to the glaring faults of our acquaintances.

There is some difference in utility between being always at hand and being handy.

Removing the Cause.

There was a man who had a corn
Upon his little toe.
The world looked dark to him indeed
And loaded down with woe.
Outside the sunshine was so bright
That brilliant gems looked dim,
But only double barreled gloom
Appeared in chunks to him.

He took that corn, likewise his toe,
Unto a man who made
A specialty of yanking corns—
In fact, it was his trade.
It happened when the thing occurred
The skies were dull and gray.
He looked about him and observed,
"My, what a lovely day!"

That is the way we look at things.
Our little aches and ills
Give to the world a somber tinge
And all the sunshine kills.
If we are bothered with a tooth
That takes an aching part,
What do we care while it holds sway
For music or for art?

According to our aches and whims
Or how our liver frets,
We think the world is bright and fair
Or loaded down with plots.
The moral is to lose our corns,
To keep our liver tame.
Then, come what will, our life will have
A pretty golden frame.

Undoubtedly.

CAUGHT IN A TRAP

Swinburne's Odd Adventure on the Coast of Normandy.

FACED A MADDENING DEATH.

A Perilous Feat That For a Time Entombed Him In a Narrow Tunnel of Solid Rock and Came Near Putting a Premature End to His Mortal Career.

In his youth Swinburne was a famous swimmer, and for years he used to retire in summer to the picturesque little village of Etretat, on the Normandy coast, there to breast the waves and to wander about the chalk cliffs and gaze forth from some coign of vantage upon "the blown, wet face of the sea."

One day he met with a singular adventure, which has never been told in print, and came near putting a premature end to his mortal career.

At one point of the coast a vast natural arch nearly 100 feet in height is formed by a flying buttress at right angles to the general line of the cliffs, which plants its foot below high water mark on the shingle beach. The central mass of this buttress fell or was eaten away by the waves in prehistoric ages, leaving a pointed gothic doorway of remarkable symmetry and mightier than any ever built by man.

It is a famous landmark of the coast and is to be seen in countless marine pictures painted in the latter half of the last century.

The outer springer or pier of this gigantic arch is submerged at flood-tide, but when the water recedes it is seen to be pierced by a small hole or tunnel, also of natural formation, passing clear through the substance of the chalk from one side to the other. This hole is partly choked up with the flint pebbles of which the beach is composed, but space enough remains for a man to crawl through.

The passage is about sixty feet in length, but is bent in its course, so that when halfway through daylight cannot be seen in either direction. It was a local feat of the athletic young fishermen of the region to wriggle their way through the tunnel at low tide.

Swinburne had witnessed one of these performances and made up his mind to attempt the passage himself. He chose a day following one of the fierce storms of late August. When he reached the spot the sun was setting and the beach was deserted. He did not think it worth while to remove any of the rough tweed outing garments that he wore, but got down on his hands and knees and began worming himself into the darkness of the hole.

At first all went well, but as he proceeded the passage narrowed and the slimy walls of the chalk rock so impeded his movements that he was unable any longer to use his arms freely, but could only push with his feet and undulate his body. He had reached the bend of the tunnel and the darkness was absolute. He still pressed on, but only to find himself wedged in yet more tightly.

A minute more and he realized with horror that he could no longer move an inch either forward or backward. The waves had heaped the pebbles up in the center, and he was now firmly embedded within a hundred thousand tons of solid rock.

It was evening. There was no chance of any one's coming to his rescue. No one had seen him enter the tunnel, or had been informed of his purpose. His presence there might not be discovered in days or weeks, and meanwhile the tide would have risen and fallen many times, and he would have been helplessly drowned.

In black darkness, powerless to stir, he must lie and wait for the certain end. The recession and rise of the tide would take, he calculated, not less than six long hours, and his best hope was that madness would render him unconscious long before the end came.

But as he lay there a sound came to his ears that chilled his nerves with a fresh terror. It was the sound of a wave breaking at the farther mouth of the tunnel. The tide was rising and in a few minutes it would begin to fill the narrow passage.

The realization of this fact paralyzed him for a moment; then it stimulated him to almost superhuman effort. Forcing himself on his left side, he succeeded in getting his right arm out beyond him. It gave his body a little more play.

By desperate but systematic wrigglings and twistings he was able to work away from beneath him some of the loose shingle, and to gain a little forward. The exertion was tremendous and far beyond his natural strength, but he was working for life or death. It was a race between him and the tide.

The end was sudden. The tunnel abruptly enlarged. He could now crawl on hands and knees. As he scrambled forward, trembling and gasping, a rush of water met and submerged him, but it carried him with it as it receded. It flung him forth into the open air like a wrack of seaweed, bruised, choking and exhausted, but alive, with the blessed sky above him. Another wave caught him and drove him up on the beach, and he retained just sense and strength enough to scramble up a little farther, beyond immediate danger.

PARAGUAY'S FLOWER TREES.

Thousands of Square Miles of Forests Blaze With Blossoms.

A great many of the big trees of Paraguay—the giants—flower in the spring and summer, and vast masses of the most gorgeous blooms are at the disposal of the bees. In fact, it was difficult for one who has never seen it even to imagine these thousands of square miles of forest ablaze with gold and heliotrope, white, yellow, pink and green blossoms during the flowering season.

Curiously enough, the two trees which attain the greatest size and almost invariably stand head and shoulders above the general mass bear the most beautiful flowers. They are the lapacho and lapacho creepo, the former having large heliotrope and purple blooms—something like Canterbury bells—clusters of which grow at the end of each twig. The lapacho creepo has a bloom exactly similar in shape, but of a rich golden yellow color. Both these trees array themselves in full regalia of bloom before a single leaf appears, and it is only after the flowers begin to fall that the foliage commences to appear.

When all the other trees have ceased flowering there remains the bitter orange, of which the forests are full and the blossom of which imparts to the honey a particularly delicate flavor.—Wide World Magazine.

Argument is generally waste of time and trouble. It is better to present one's opinion and leave it to stick or not as it may happen. If sound, it will probably in the end stick, and the sticking is the main thing.—Samuel Butler.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

The Playwright of St. Petersburg

A Story of the Russian Revolution

By EUNICE BLAKE

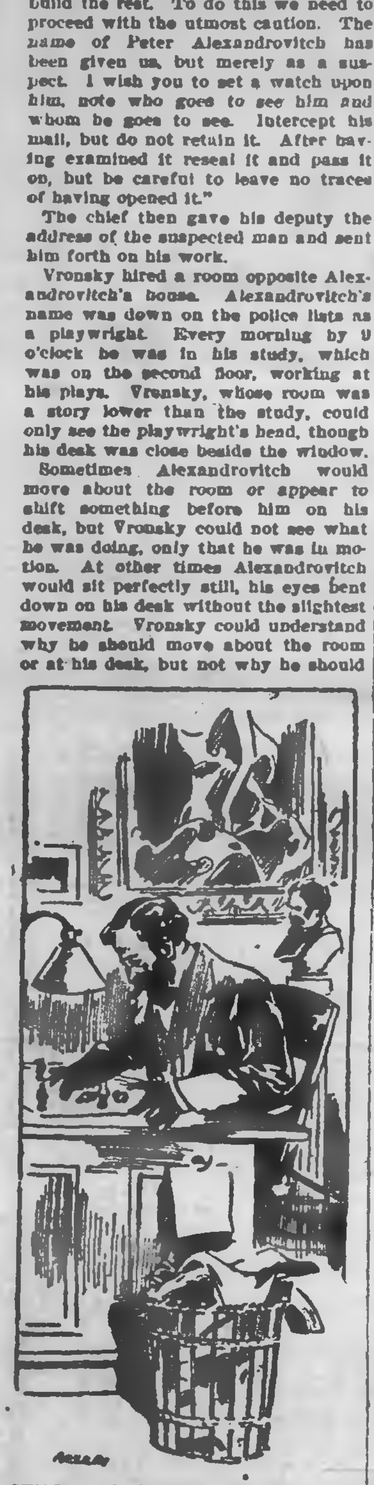
The chief of police in St. Petersburg called one of his most efficient men into his private office and said to him:

"Vronsky, there is a plot hatching to assassinate the grand duke. We have but a trifle of information about it, but on what we have we must build the rest. To do this we need to proceed with the utmost caution. The name of Peter Alexandrovitch has been given us, but merely as a suspect. I wish you to set a watch upon him, note who goes to see him and whom he goes to see. Intercept his mail, but do not retain it. After having examined it reseal it and pass it on, but be careful to leave no traces of having opened it."

The chief then gave his deputy the address of the suspected man and sent him forth on his work.

Vronsky hired a room opposite Alexandrovitch's house. Alexandrovitch's name was down on the police lists as a playwright. Every morning by 9 o'clock he was in his study, which was on the second floor, working at his plays. Vronsky, whose room was a story lower than the study, could only see the playwright's head, though his desk was close beside the window.

Sometimes Alexandrovitch would move about the room or appear to shift something before him on his desk, but Vronsky could not see what he was doing, only that he was in motion. At other times Alexandrovitch would sit perfectly still, his eyes bent down on his desk without the slightest movement. Vronsky could understand why he should move about the room or at his desk, but not why he should sit perfectly still. He referred the matter to a theatrical man, who said that usually a play was made by first laying down what is called the scenario—that is, the story. Some playwrights use dummy figures on a miniature stage while making the scenario, and when they have finished it they write the dialogue. It was suggested to Vronsky that Alexandrovitch when moving at his desk was making his scenario and when still was engaged in writing the dialogue of his plays.



THERE SAT THE PLAYWRIGHT AT HIS WORK.

Vronsky gave orders at the postoffice that Alexandrovitch's mail be returned for examination. A letter thus intercepted contained a statement that the suspect had been working for several days on the scenario of a play and that he would spend the balance of the week in putting in the dialogue. The watcher had noticed that his head had been active at his desk, and for the next few days he was remarkably quiet, sitting for hours at a time without apparent motion, though several times he turned his head from the window. On each of these occasions the motion was followed by a lady coming to the window to change the curtain to let in or cut off light, as required.

It did not seem to Vronsky that there was any doubt that Alexandrovitch was, during the day at least, following his vocation as playwright. But this had nothing to do with any secret work he might be doing. Besides the official, having been ordered to watch the suspect, remained at his post. One day he was sent for by his chief, who asked him if he had seen Alexandrovitch the day before.

"I did," was the reply. "He sat writing at a window of his house most of the day."

"Are you sure?"

"I saw him with my eyes."

The chief looked puzzled. "I have information that he was seen in Moscow yesterday," he said. "He was disguised, but was recognized through his disguise."

"Then he must have been in two places at once."

"Did you see him about noon?"

"I did. When I went to dinner he was writing at his desk."

"H'm!"

"Was he seen in Moscow at that hour?"

"My informant reports that he saw him there."

"Can you rely on your informant?"

"That is the question. We never know when we hire a spy that he does not enter our service for the purpose of gaining information for the revolutionists."

"Do you doubt that I am true to his majesty's interests?"

"I have perfect confidence in you."

"Then have a care how you tell your secrets to whoever has told you that he saw Peter Alexandrovitch in Moscow yesterday. I swear to you that just before I went to dinner yesterday—I go at half past 12—I saw a lady, likely the suspect's wife, come to the window, pull the shade partly down—for the sun had come around to shine in at the window—then turn, put her arms around his neck and kiss him. I left them in that position."

The chief seemed greatly perplexed. After some thought he asked:

"Does Alexandrovitch go out often?"

"No; he goes out very seldom. He seems to be very busy. I have intercepted several letters addressed to him from managers asking why he had not finished work he is doing for them, and letters from him to parties saying that he cannot at present contract to do any more work, since he is unable to finish what he has in hand."

"Have you come near him?"

"Yes. One afternoon when he went out I followed him, as I always do when he leaves his home. He walked a short distance, then turned suddenly and passed me as near as I am to you. He went back to his house and in a few minutes came out again with a package in his hand for the post, which he appeared to have forgotten. I possessed myself of it and found a play which, I judged, he had been revising."

"You had better make some excuse to enter his house and see him there. But be careful that he does not suspect you to be shadowing him for the government. That will do. You may go."

The next day Vronsky, wearing the badge of a building inspector, went into Alexandrovitch's house, pretending that work was being done on a sewer beneath it and he wished to examine the walls to see if they were cracked. He saw the playwright sitting at his desk with a number of chess men before him, each piece bearing a label. They were set on a piece of cardboard, on which was drawn the outline of a stage. Alexandrovitch was reading from some manuscript before him and now and again would move one of the pieces off or on the stage.

The next afternoon Vronsky went to his chief and reported that he had been in the suspect's house and seen him working on a play.

"Have you seen him today?" asked the chief.

"Yes. He was sitting quietly at his window writing and smoking, as he often does when at work. Why do you ask?"

"Because I have just received a telegram that he is in Moscow."

The speaker handed Vronsky a dispatch which he read with every evidence of surprise.

"Whose signature is this?" he asked.

"One whom I trust as implicitly as I trust you."

"But may he not be mistaken in the person?"

"He is never mistaken. He is the best sleuth in the government service."

"I will go at once to Alexandrovitch's house, enter it and see with my own eyes that he is there."

"Wait a moment."

A telegram was laid before the chief, who took it up, tore off the cover and read:

The grand duke has been assassinated by a bomb.

It required some time before the recipient of this important news could recover from the shock. Then he said:

"Go! Enter the house of Alexandrovitch unannounced, go to his study and put your hand on him and let me know the result at once."

Vronsky darted out of the office and in a few minutes was at Alexandrovitch's house. He attempted to open the door, but found it locked. He listened for a moment, but heard no sound. Something told him that the place was deserted. He ran across the street and looked up at the study window. There sat the playwright at his work. Vronsky ran back and hammered at the door loud enough to be heard in any part of the house.

No response.

Smashing a window, Vronsky effected an entrance and ran upstairs. He met no one and made his way unopposed to the study. Alexandrovitch was at his desk, but took no notice of the intruder. Vronsky went up to him, put his hand on his shoulder and knew that the figure was inanimate.

A further examination revealed the fact that it was of straw, the face wax. The head was set on a pivot and could be turned by pulling on a cord.

Vronsky ran back to his chief and reported how he had been deceived. He was informed that government officials in Moscow had discovered that Alexandrovitch was the leader of the conspiracy that had resulted in the grand duke's death. He had contrived to keep the attention of the St. Petersburg police fixed on him in the capital by means of the dummy while he was spending enough of his time in Moscow, disguised, to direct the operations. But he had made good his escape.

Long Coats Are Smart.

The long, tight fitting coat, very full at the hem, has come in.

This type of coat is very much in evidence. Its advent marks a distinct change of the line, and for that reason it cannot be treated lightly. At the present moment the leading tailors are making these long coats in linens and shantung, and fashionable people are accepting the change with enthusiasm.

S'POSIN'.

Suppose 'twould be the farmers' turn
A few things at first hand to learn;
Suppose those quiet things they prize
Should go a-kiting to the skies
And hired men should unionize.

When farmer goes the cow to pail
And says, "Bill, hold her pesky tail,"
Would William haughtily stand still
And say, "I do not think I will;
It is not in the union bill?"

And when the clock is striking four
And some one hollers at the door,
"Arise, dear Bill," perhaps he'd say,
"Not at this beastly time of day;
Go read the union schedule, pray."

When as the sun was getting low
The boss said, "Plow another row,"
There'd nothing be to arbitrate.
He'd say, "I guess that row can wait,"
And for the house he'd pull his freight.

When to the table they repair,
If he grows tired of the fare,
He'll say, "This bill is rather shy;
While I'm not used to living high,
The union schedule calls for pie."

That toil may softened be and sweet
The plow should have a cushioned seat,
And should the coupling sections bend
For union blacksmiths they must send.
The farm hand's trade is not to mend.

Oh, farmer, most upright of men,
You'd sure be up against it then;
Proud master of a broad estate,
You'd simply have to bow to fate
And to the walking delegate.

Down His Way.

"It is as cold as July," said the traveler, buttoning up his coat.

"It is, is it?" said the hotel clerk, who was in no mood for sarcasm. "Say, where were you raised?"

"South Africa," returned the traveler. "I wish I was back there."

And then he dipped the dip;
He next most gayly scooped the scoop
And later skipped the skip.

WOMAN'S WAY

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

The ladies of Ringwood, having decided to establish an orphan asylum, met for the purpose and organized. Then they appointed various committees and adjourned for one week, when they came together again to hear the reports. All committees reported favorable results except the committee appointed to rent a house for the asylum.

"The only place large enough for the purpose," reported Mrs. Imogen Brainard, chairman of the committee, "and with grounds such as we must have is the Canfield property. It has been vacant for two years, but has just been taken by a men's literary club, to be called the Goldsmith. Unfortunately a lease was signed by the owner and by the officers of the club only yesterday."

"Perhaps," said mild mannered Miss Blanding, "if the gentlemen of the club knew that we wanted it for the dear children they would"—

"Hold on to it," Mrs. Jimber continued, "just as tenaciously as they would if we wanted it for any other purpose. Far be it from me to become a suppliant to them. I prefer a heroic method. I move that a committee be appointed to go to them and demand that they give up the property to us."

The motion was carried, and Mrs. Jimber, Miss Bates and Miss Blanding were appointed on the committee, Mrs. Jimber being chairman.

The three members of the Goldsmith club's committee on house consisted of Mr. Flint, Mr. Downing and Mr. Fairweather. Mr. Flint was among men what Mrs. Jimber was among women. When the asylum committee called upon him to give up to them the Canfield property he replied with an emphatic "No!" Messrs. Downing and Fairweather, though sympathizing with him in retaining the place for the club, could not but feel that Miss Bates and Miss Blanding, who were comely, looked upon the refusal as extremely ungallant.

Mrs. Jimber issued a request that the members of the club meet, march to the property in dispute, take possession of it and hold it. Mr. Flint got wind of the movement and barred all the doors and windows.

This made a deadlock for both clubs. The men knew that if they opened the house the women would take possession, and so long as it was locked up it could not be used either for a club or an orphan asylum. There was a meeting of the women's committee to take measures for further procedure. Mrs. Jimber was in favor of proposing that every woman interested in the asylum cut every member of the club. Her colleagues did not agree with her as to the effectiveness of this measure. Then the chairman suggested that they use militant methods, threatening to destroy the property. But it was pointed out to her that the club was not the owner of it and might prefer to see it ruined rather than be forced to give it up. Then Mrs. Jimber lost her temper and told the other two members of the committee that she would have nothing more to do with the matter.

One day Miss Bates heard that Mr. Flint had been called away. She wrote a note to Mr. Downing stating that a majority of the asylum committee would be pleased to see the club's committee that evening at her house for the purpose of making a proposition that would, she thought, be satisfactory to the men and end the deadlock upon the property in dispute.

Since Mr. Flint was away and Mrs. Jimber would have nothing more to do with the matter the interview was between Mr. Downing and Mr. Fairweather on the one part and Miss Bates and Miss Blanding on the other. The two men, both of whom were bachelors, went to the place of meeting together, each hoping to parry what was expected to be some sharp move on the part of the women and do it without wounding their feelings.

Miss Bates, by way of smoothing the way, she said, proposed a game of cards, and before it was finished a maid brought in refreshments. After that Mr. Downing paired with Miss Bates and Mr. Fairweather with Miss Blanding. Each gentleman was feeling very comfortable and very happy when Miss Bates whispered to Miss Blanding:

"I have named a price at which Mr. Downing will recommend that the club let us have the Canfield property. I have agreed to give him a kiss before both clubs assembled when we take possession. He has accepted. See if you can get the same terms from Mr. Fairweather."

Miss Blanding succeeded in securing the terms, both men thinking the matter a bluff. As soon as the ladies had effected the arrangement they declared the conference ended.

The next morning the two committeemen received a note addressed to them by their entertainers of the night before stating that they would be on the steps of the Canfield property the next afternoon ready to keep their contract.

The men now began to consider the position they were in. If the women had the hardihood to face two clubs in such a case of graft the men dared not. They drew up a statement giving the best of reasons why the Goldsmith club should assign their lease of the property in question to the asylum managers. Their recommendation was accepted.

WHY HUSBANDS DESPAIR.

Here's One Reason, and It Shows How Really Unimportant a Big War Is.

"COME here, my dear," he said. "I want to show you something. This is a war map, which I cut from a newspaper. Don't you think it would be nice for us to follow the course of the armies and try to get a better idea of the situation?"

"Yes, dear."

"Draw your chair a little closer. You want to know something about the fighting nations, don't you?"

"Yes, dear."

"Of course. Now, let's see. Ah, I've got it upside down. There, that's right. The evening papers say that Bilek in Bosnia was the scene of a severe engagement between the Montenegrins and Austrians. Can you find Bilek?"

"How do you spell it, dear?"

"I'll look in the paper. Yes, here it is. General Vokovitch has left Bilek and is marching on Tchainitch. Just look for Tchainitch while you're at it."

"How do you spell it?"

"I'll look."

While he looks his wife stares at the map, picks it up and turns it over. She at once becomes absorbed in what she sees.

"Oh, George," she cries, "look here!"

"Have you found it?"

"No, no, dear, but listen. 'Choice sale of dress remnants at Roozle's. Take your pick at 7 cents a yard.' I must go down the very first thing in morning!"

He stares at her.

Then he picks up the map and flings it into the wastebasket.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Encouraging an Absentee.

"So they docked you for staying away from congress?" said Farmer Corntossel.

"Yes," replied the statesman. "And it's all wrong."

"That's what I think. After findin' out what you're liable to say or do they ought to pay you extra."—Washington Star.

Autumnal.

It's sad to think that summer's fled:
That all her pretty pranks are played;
That autumn, russet, gold and red,
Has come to make her yearly raid,

Has come to take the flowers away,
To bleach the color from the grass,
To make all cold the dismal day
And freeze the festive garden sass.

But still we will not sit and sigh,
For autumn has its golden store,
And that's perhaps the reason why
Her coming we may not deplore.

For sweet potatoes, pumpkin pies
And sauerkraut and Hubbard squash,
Big rutabagas, chicken fries,
Come always in the fall, b'gosh!

An Improvement.

They make me go to bed at night
Just when I want to stay
And read awhile or maybe write
An' have a bit of play.

My mother says, "Come, little one,
Away to Slumbertown;
Tomorrow will be time for fun,
So put your playthings down."

It isn't treating children right
To pack them off to bed.
The older ones sit up all night,
And not a word is said.

My mother whispers, "Close your eyes
And beauty slumber take."
And then next day she makes me rise
Before I am awake.

I do not like the bedtime hour
Nor what the morning brings.
I'd change it if I had the power
And I were running things.

I'd try my best to fix things right,
As sure as you are born.
I'd never go to bed at night
Nor get up in the morn.

OTTAWA BOARD NOT CONDUCTING SCHOOLS ACCORDING TO THE LAW

Separate School Board Acted Beyond It's Powers the Finding of Justice Lennox --- Injunction Previously Granted is Confirmed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Nov. 28. — Mr. Justice Lennox in his judgment on the Ottawa Separate School case delivered this morning, finds that instructions and regulations of the Department of Education around which the case centered, are within the powers of the Ontario Legislature and that the defendants "The Ottawa Separate School Board" have not been and are not conducting their schools, according to law. SUMMER PASTIME PRIZE WINNERS

Result of Review Contest in Progress During the Summer Months

The result of the Summer Pastime Contest of the Review has at last been decided and the names of the winners, as well as those who were not successful, who took part, appear below, together with the number of correct answers which each participant gave.

It was quite unexpected that the winners would secure so many correct answers, the winner having only one incorrect guess.

A curious part of the contest is that the second prize winner secures more money than the first prize, for the reason that the former handed in two sets of correct answers, while the first prize winner submitted only one set.

The fourth and fifth prizes go to Alex. C. Kay, who had TWO sets of answers to the number of 67 in each, while Mrs. Des-Marteaux gets sixth prize, who had ONE set of answers numbering 67. Alex. C. Kay also secures the seventh and eighth prizes having two sets of 66. The ninth, tenth and eleventh prizes go to T. P. Lancaster, having three sets of 65 correct answers. One set of 65 by Mrs. Des Marteaux was shut out, as there were only eleven prizes to be awarded.

The judges, Messrs. John McNabb, of the Richard Hall & Son Co., and E. Newton, of the Cressman Co., had a lot of work, and, we believe performed their duties well and conscientiously, which should meet with satisfaction.

HEAVY LOSSES FOR FOE IN CHAMPAGNE

Artillery Fire Brings German Biplane to Earth, and an Attack South of Ypres is Repulsed.

WILHELM DER GROSSE SUNK?

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 28. — The official communication this afternoon says:

"In Belgium, artillery exchanges were continued during November 27th without any particular incident. Heavy German artillery showed less activity. There was but one attack of infantry to the south of Ypres, which was repulsed by our troops.

"Toward evening our artillery brought down a German biplane carrying three aviators. One was killed and the other two made prisoners.

"In the region of Arras and further to the south there is no change. The day passed very quietly in the region of the Aisne. In Champagne our artillery inflicted serious losses on the artillery of the enemy.

"From the Argonne to the Vosges there is nothing to report."

HEAVY FIRING AT ZEEBRUGGE

LONDON, Nov. 28. — A despatch from Rotterdam says that heavy firing was heard Friday morning in the direction of Zeebrugge and Allied aeroplanes were seen flying over Flanders.

British destroyers continue scouting off the coast.

A message received in Vienna on Friday by pigeon-post from the besieged city of Przemsyl says: "Do not be disquieted. We are doing very well."

Amsterdam has a despatch from Berlin saying that seventy-six thousand Turkish troops under Izzet Pasha are marching against the Suez Canal. Their way is barricaded by the British with a long line of trenches and artillery positions.

A telegram from Berlin via Amsterdam denies the report that the Allies had reoccupied Dixmude.

PARIS, Nov. 28. — A despatch to the Matin from Petrograd states that it is reported there that the German battleship Wilhelm der Grosse struck a mine and sank in the Baltic, but adds that there is no official confirmation of the rumor.

Women Get the Verdict of Judges at Interesting Debate

George Street Ladies aid Members Return Talent Money

That the franchise should be placed in the hands of women on equal footing with men was the decision of the judges in a warm debate held yesterday afternoon by the Ladies' Aid Society of George Street Methodist Church.

Mrs. Kendry and Mrs. H. Moore brilliantly argued votes for women, while the negative side, consisting of Mrs. S. R. Armstrong and Mrs. H. Parker, very ably supported their contentions. Dr. Middleton, G. N. Gordon and A. W. Cressman constituted the judges court. It is reported they wanted to please the affirmative and brought in a verdict acocrdingly.

Six months ago the Ladies' Aid of George Street Church launched a talent contest. Every member was presented with a dime. They were to return the ten cents and as much money as they had contrived to have it make. The reward was a big bunch of chrysthemums, presented by Mrs. A. W. Cressman. One hundred and thirty dollars, which included the collection taken at the door, was turned in yesterday and Miss Morrow, Dalhousie Street, won the flowers, which she kindly promised to distribute among four sick members of the congregation.

A delightful program was supplied as follows: duet, Miss Mather and Miss Ruth; recitation by Miss Beatty; violin selection, Miss Telgmann; quartet, Misses Armstrong, Hanson, Elliott, and Mrs. Ritchie; duet, Mrs. Renwick and Mrs. Dr. Middleton; recitation, Miss McKenzie; violin selection, Miss Telgmann.

Rev. Mr. Peever acted as chairman.

SAVED PORT BY SINKING SHIP

German Spy Set Fire to Vessel Loaded With Dynamite

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Nov. 28.—Advices recently received by mail state that Colombo, the principal port of Ceylon, and its shipipng were in danger of destruction in the early days of the war. A German spy set fire to an anchored vessel, containing fifty tons of dynamite, and the only recourse was to sink the ship, which was done at considerable risk by volunteers.

Engineers Have Good Officers

An engineers corps organized and affiliated with the home guard last night.

Eighteen engineers comprise the strength of the new addition, which is commanded by Captain R. H. Parsons who fathered the suggestion in the beginning. He and first lieutenant Geo. F. Hilliard were elected unanimously, while the other officers were appointed by ballot. They are, second lieutenant Claude H. Rogers, sergeants Fred Shurety and J. R. Metheral, and corporals Reid Munro and Harry Evans.

The engineers will be a most welcome addition to the guard.

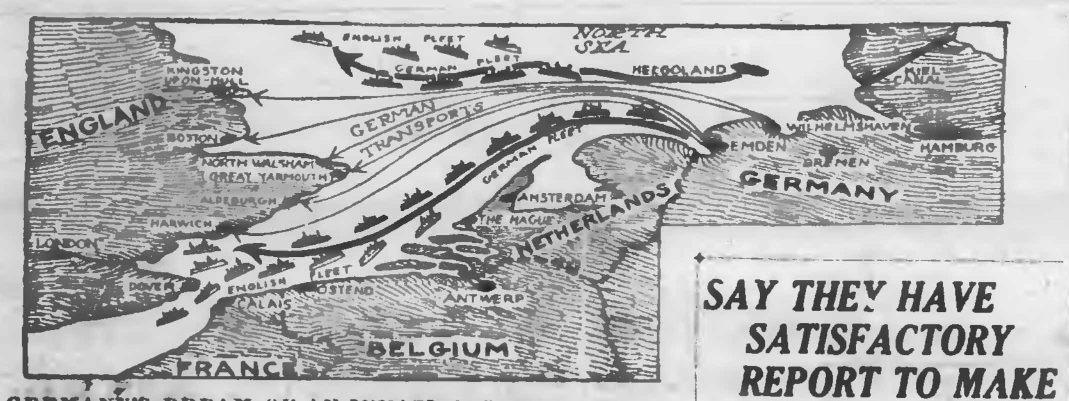
Mr. H. C. Cox of Toronto has been appointed president of the Provident Investment Co. Mr. A. H. Cox, son of the late Aaron Cox, is the new vice-president. He was born in Peterboro thirty years ago.



GERMANY'S DREAM OF AN INVASION OF ENGLAND.

This relief map explains the plan which Germany is said to be fondly hoping to put into execution of sending an army across to Britain in unarmed transports. Half of the German fleet, in theory, engages the British fleet in the North Sea, and the other half gives battle to the British vessels strung along the coast of France and Belgium, and in the confusion the big liners would make a dash between the two battle lines for the southeast coast of England. The scheme is perfectly feasible — on paper.

COLLEGIATE STUDENTS IN STUDY, SPORT AND WAR

Presentation of Scholarships and Prizes at Annual Commencement Exercises

Twenty-one pupils of the Collegiate Institute are at present on active service, and there may be others whose names are unknown. This fact was remarked upon by G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A., at the annual Collegiate commencement exercises last night, where parents, friends and scholars assembled to witness the presentation of scholarships, athletic and entrance prizes. As the prizewinners went forward to receive his or her reward each was given an ovation. Over $110 was given away in cash alone. J. H. Burnham's donation of a gold watch to the student winning highest entrance honors was presented to Miss Isabel Baird.

Various speakers referred to the splendid showing made by the scholarship winners, and regarded it as the best testimony to the efficiency of the Collegiate and the diligence of the students.

Two prizes of $5.00 each, donated by Dr. George Burnham, were won respectively by Ralph Turner and Muriel Moran.

The presentation of athletic prizes including cups was the occasion for much applause as the various winners claimed their trophies. A silver cup donated by A. D. Hone, B. A., was handed to Miss Kathleen O'Brien emblematic of the tennis championship. The staff cup for the senior championship won by Douglas Macdonald seemed to be a generally popular win. This young athlete also carried off a medal donated by G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A.

The H. S. MacDonald cup was presented to Angus McLeod as junior champion. A junior championship medal donated by J. E. L. Goodwill, B. A., was also won by Angus McLeod.

A pleasing program was presented

SAY THEY HAVE SATISFACTORY REPORT TO MAKE

Report Dealing With Rifles for Home Guard Will be Received by Executive

Claiming they have a very satisfactory report to present, Lieut-Colonel Miller and Major R. E. Layfield arrived back this morning from Kingston where they interviewed Colonel Hemming, D.O.C., for this division. They were royally entertained so they say, by the military authorities in Kingston. Both officers however were reluctant to disclose particulars of their report until it had first been presented to the home guard executive. The object behind their trip and interview with the D.O.C. was to secure the promise of rifles and ammunition for the use of the Peterborough home guard. It is generally known that the militia department are besieged with requests of a similar kind, so if the delegation as a result of their interview succeeded in their mission, they are to be congratulated. A meeting of the executive will be held immediately to receive the report.

HELP SOLDIERS FAMILIES ISSUE SHORT TERM BONDS

The North Monaghan Council Will be Asked to Take This Action

At a largely attended and very enthusiastic meeting of the residents of North Monaghan, held in May's School House on Thursday evening, it was unanimously decided to recommend to the council that a sum averaging between $3 and $4 a week be paid to each family whose breadwinner has joined the contingents.

The township had been giving clothing and provisions, but acting on the advice of Mayor Buller they came to the conclusion that cash was preferred.

The meeting further recommended to the council that short term debentures amounting to $2000 be sold, and the money utilized in providing work for the unemployed. The work performed will be along the lines of repairing roads and cleaning ditches. The council meets this afternoon at five o'clock to decide upon these matters.

THE INDUSTRIAL SIDE OF EASTERN LIFE

All those interested in the competition of the East and the West should hear the lecture of Rev. J. Sharrard, Presbyterian missionary from India, in Knox Church next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. There will be a silver collection.

The industrial future of India and China in competition with the West will be dealt with in addition to the religious advancement.

TRAVELLERS AS HOSTS.

The Commercial Travellers' Association are entertaining their members and wives to a euchre party this evening in their commodious and comfortable club rooms.

This is only the first of a series of such pleasant evenings to be spent during this coming winter by the members and their friends.

The association expect about 50 couples out tonight.

FAREWELL SERMONS.

Rev. F. A. Conners will preach farewell sermons at Park Street Church tomorrow. A congregational meeting will be held on Monday evening.

PETTY THIEVING AND DISHONESTY RESULT OF GROSS CARELESSNESS

Payrolls Were Padded at Hamilton and City Time and Material Used for Benefit of Civic Employes

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Hamilton, Nov. 28. — Report of Judge Snider on the recent civic investigation was made public today. It will be dealt with by council at a special session and a number of people may be prosecuted. His honor found there was much petty thieving and dishonesty as result of gross carelessness. Many cases were proved where payrolls were padded and city time and material used for the benefit of civic employes.

During years covered by the investigation, there was no proper city audit.

His honor advised this to be remedied at once. He believes system in the works department now is a good one, if enforced.

COMPLAINING AGAINST EXAMINING DOCTORS.

DOCTORS, who examine volunteers for overseas forces, should be very careful that they follow exactly the instructions of the Militia Department. Failure to do so has caused considerable trouble, most of which has been by country physicians who examined rural recruits.

Quite a number of men have been passed by the rural doctors on enlistment for overseas service, given up their jobs, and have gone to camp at Toronto, only to find, on examination there, by the service surgeons, that they are not qualified physically to join the contingent. In consequence they are put among the discards and find that they have lost their jobs without being able to serve their country through what can only be termed wanton negligence.

Out of 544 men sent from various parts of the Province, 80 were rejected for physical unfitness on arrival in camp, although all had been certified as up to the regulation standard by the examining doctor in the district from which they came.

The case of Thomas Hazelwood of Brantford is an example of the carelessness of examining doctors. He was employed in the Courier office at Brantford, and just a week ago gave up his job on enlisting in the 25th Mounted Infantry there, after passing his medical examination. In company with others, he was sent down to camp, and the doctors rejected him as being under the standard height for the regiment. Consequently he is in Toronto with winter coming on and unemployment rife, and no job or prospect of one, his place in Brantford having been filled in his absence, simply because he wished to fight for the Empire, and because some careless doctor told him he was physically qualified to do so.

Remember, the complaint is not one of overstrict regulations. It is well that the regulations are strict, for the soldiering required in this war is of the hardest kind. The life in the trenches seems not to have impressed some people as to what it really is. Marching a man ten miles or more, forcing him to dig himself into a trench four or five feet deep, go through slush and water, and some days get only one meal, is a test that requires the strongest physical frame. This fact is kept in mind in the regulations handed to examining doctors, yet they apparently do not consider their responsibility with any proper degree of seriousness in passing recruits for the overseas forces. When the regulations say a definite requisite is required, such as a certain height, and when this, along with others, is ignored, the carelessness or ignorance is such that should disqualify the examiners as practising physicians.

THE GRANARY OF THE EMPIRE.

THE CALL to the citizens of Canada who remain at home, particularly the farmers, is one of great importance to this country, the Empire and the world. A supreme duty of every citizen of this vast Dominion is to endeavor to maintain trade, and, for the farmers, to raise next year, if possible, the largest crop in the history of this country. Every available acre should be sown, because the food requirements expected to be made on next year's crop will be the heaviest in many a long year. The millions of men taken from shop and farm to wage war are not producers, but consumers of a surpassing magnitude. Decreased production throughout Europe cannot possibly be avoided, yet its millions must be fed, and those countries, like Canada, that produce a surplus of food products, should make every effort to have as large an offering of food as possible. For Britain particularly, as well as France, will likely be in sore need of such supplies, and, aside from the patriotic duty that is incumbent on every Canadian to produce as much as possible, there is the added incentive of an increased profit. While farmers should in duty bound grow as much as their acreage will carry, the factories of the city and town should also make every effort to maintain business and wages. While Canada is sending large numbers of men to the front to fight for our homes and liberties, there is another, far larger army of patient soldiers in the ranks of trade and commerce, farmers and professions, that is no less self-sacrificing and important in keeping Canada in a position to supply those very necessities on which the integrity of the British Empire and the success of its cause in this war depend almost as much as on the armies in the field. Note that the Westminster Gazette of London, England, says that Canada is required to do a double duty, a source of contingents for the war and of food for Britain's armies, fleet and people. The Gazette says:

> "Canada is said to be willing to increase its contribution of men to 150,000 by next autumn, if that number is required. We need not say that we hope no such call will be required from the Colony. We recognize to the full that Canada is with us in this fight to the full extent of its resources, but we shall expect that the recruiting at home will have settled the issue before we have to bring any such number of men from Canada. We have to remember that from Canada is required a double service in this conflict. The Colony will have to be to a large extent the granary of the Empire, and if we are to come successfully through the war the men who are working in the fields of Canada will be doing their share in helping forward our cause almost as effectively as those who are actually at the front."

BETTER VALUE IN MADE IN CANADA.

THERE ARE STILL a few people in this country who imagine an article is necessarily better because it's imported. In spite of a billion and a half dollars invested in modern Canadian factories, a percentage of consumers have got into the habit of looking for the foreign stamp on goods with the idea that they were getting a better quality — even if they have to pay a higher price than they do for the Canadian article.

There is no doubt—in most cases at least—about the price. The consumer of foreign goods has to pay freight charges and a duty. The consumer of Canadian goods pays railway charges and no duty. But the notion that some people never can get hammered out of their heads is that if an article only comes in over a tariff wall it is necessarily a better article than the home-made. If somebody with a foreign name made it, if it came in a ship that sailed from some foreign port, if it was originally paid for in pfennings or marks or francs, so much the better.

But the goods made in Canada by plain Canadian workmen—put side by side with the imported article—are just as good; in some cases better, and they usually cost less. The goods made in Canada are the goods that are produced under conditions with which all Canadians are familiar. With the price lower because of the duty, and the quality as good, if not better, because there is nothing in foreign manufacture to make it any better—it is time Canadians made a wholesale fashion of buying made in Canada goods, not only because they are made in Canada, but because they are equal or better value for the money.

AN EVIL AND A REMEDY.

THE UNITED STATES has adopted a measure of free trade in its low tariff, but conditions do not conduce to a good attitude to the tariff. The Erie Dispatch has the following to say in this regard:

> "In spite of the war, our imports for October were $5,000,000 more than a year ago —a remarkable showing indeed. During the same month our exports fell off $76,578,000 as compared with a year ago, making a net loss in trade balance of $81,000,000. The falling off in exports is due largely, of course, to the cessation of cotton sales. The increase in imports is due to a low tariff, which permits foreign products to come into our markets in increasing quantities, displacing home-made goods and resulting in the unemployment that is making the winter of 1914 the most distressful in our history. All the world is not yet at war. The Chinese and Japanese, the countries of South America and other parts of the world, are sending us products that we should turn out ourselves at good American wages. There is only one remedy—a restoration of protection to the labour and industries of the United States."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HON. DR. H. S. BELAND, a French-Canadian, has shown that he is on the right side. He is a Grit of the right sort, although his politics are such that we do not usually agree with him.

Not Anxious for Intervention.

(New York Evening Telegram.)

The same press agency that so industrially sowed the seed of culture, bogus victories and other weird things is now engaged in mysteriously hinting at peace. . . . Peace hints — for that's all they are — at this time are absolutely futile. France, Russia and England have to be reckoned with first in any negotiations, and, desirable as peace admittedly is, those three countries, for many reasons, well understood, have made no sign of being anxious for intervention of any kind.

St. Catherine's Day.

(Montreal Mail.)

This is St. Catherine's Day, and throughout the province of Quebec the French-Canadian children will enjoy their latire, made tasteful by the mixture of new strewn snow. The feast used to be a notable one amongst our French-Canadian citizens, and is so yet in the country districts, corresponding somewhat to the Scotch Hallowe'en; and even yet it is kept by some families in the cities. It used to be a tradition that November 26th always brought a great snowstorm, "la border de Ste. Catherine."

Germany's Real Object.

(Providence Journal.)

A German war magazine flatly declares that "the object of the war is the overthrow of England." At last, very likely, we have the essential truth of the matter. All previous German explanations to the effect that Germany was forced into the war to resist the "Slav menace" may now be discounted. England would have been justified in going to war, even without the excuse of the German violation of Belgian neutrality, for undoubtedly she had a strong suspicion of Germany's real "object" from the beginning.

Fight to a Finish, Whatever the Cost.

(London Times.)

History lends very little support to the theory of economic exhaustion, at any rate so far as ability to continue fighting for a considerable period is concerned. Those who think otherwise should ask how it was that in the American Civil War the South went on for two years after 1863, or the Boers after 1901, or France in 1806, or Spain in 1808. Nor is it sufficient to say that, if war lasted for three years, every belligerent would be bankrupt through the huge expenses. Whatever may be the cost, the British Empire intends to fight to a finish.

Modern Schools.

(Christian Register.)

They mean to rear tall students out in Wisconsin. A local paper says:

"The board of education has resolved to erect a building large enough to accommodate five hundred pupils three stories high."

WHY NOT ADD CAVALRY TO THE HOME GUARD?

Editor, Review:

Sir,—It is a great pleasure to any one who has any military spirit in him to see how rapidly the Home Guard is growing. Would it not be a good thing to organize a cavalry brigade. It would add greatly to the strength of home defence, as the cavalry are the eyes and ears of an army, and we see what excellent work is being done by them at the front. With all modern machinery, the horse still proves to be man's best friend in war. The city is doing its part nobly. I believe that if this was brought before the country boys, they would rally around the old flag with equal loyalty. Saddles would be out of the question just now, but the average country boy has had more practice on a blanket, which would serve two purposes. It could take the place of a saddle and could blanket the horse, too. We might suggest that socks and rubbers, and peajackets, too, would make a very becoming uniform just at present. There are numbers who have served in the Prince of Wales Dragoons who would be only too glad to prove their loyalty in this way.

Yours,
AN OLD TROOPER.

SEASONABLE ATTRACTION.

SHE comes, the sweet girl graduate,
With knowledge quite o'erflowing.
Upon the world and all mankind
Her simple charms bestowing.
She comes with plans to fix up things
That might be our undoing
In words we cannot understand
And simple, plain rag chewing.

Within her head she packs around
A ton or two of knowledge
Concerning figures, plants and stars
And things you learn in college.
She has the whole thing on display
And outlined full and ample
Where any one who thirsts to know
Can come and take a sample.

She answers questions great and small
When she is on her metal,
For when she opens up her mouth
That does the matter settle.
No use to argue or to try
To tear her case asunder.
Man at her wisdom manifold
Can only pause and wonder.

Why should she not know everything
And be as wise as any?
For sure her education cost
Her father quite a penny.
So let her gabble on, because
There's no way to restrict her.
And if a man were so inclined,
Pray, could he contradict her?

Unfitted.

"Let's go fishing," said one of the neighbor boys who happened along.

"No," replied the youthful George Washington.

"Got to work?"

"No," replied the future Father of His Country, "but I cannot go fishing."

"Why not?"

"I cannot tell a lie."

Their Only Asset.

"How do you like me anyway?" asked the earnest but conservative youth of the beautiful young woman.

"Well, you make love like an artist."

"That is a compliment. How do they make love?"

"With their eyes and not with their pocketbooks."

A Genius.

"What do you do for a living?"

"For a living?"

"Yes. You have to earn your living, don't you?"

"I should say I do."

"How do you do it?"

"Work my dad."

Not Necessary.

"A man should think twice before marrying."

"Oh, I don't know!"

"Really?"

"You see, he has so many thinks coming afterward."

Better Than a Pumpkin.

"Is he a great lawyer?"

"Yes; he is quite an onion."

"Why an onion?"

"He moves the jury to tears."

Two Views of a Face

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

It is singular how certain callings will be considered criminal in one age and respectable in another. There was a period—the early part of the nineteenth century—when the professional gambler in what is now the middle west was quite a prominent personage in the community. So in England there was a period when the highwayman, especially he who robbed the rich and gave to the poor, was regarded a very good medium for the equalizing of funds. Some of England's best blood has been represented on the highway.

One evening a couple of hundred ears ago a gentleman and his daughter were bumping along in a chaise on an unpaved road that led from London to their home near Clough when they were stopped by a masked horseman who appeared at the window and demanded their valuables. Sir Evan Brierly, the father, produced his money and his watch without resistance, but Evelyn, his daughter, demurred.

"I will give you, sir," she said, "the only valuable article I have, which you cannot take from me by force, provided you will give me a glimpse of your features."

"Pray what may that be?"

"I shall not tell you."

The robber hesitated, then lifted his mask, and by the side light on the chaise Evelyn saw the face of a young man, singularly handsome and refined. She remained silent for a time, and the highwayman said:

"I have kept my part of the contract. It only remains for you to keep yours. What is this article that I may not take by force?"

"My heart."

At that moment there was a sound of horses' hoofs coming, and the highwayman rode away with the words:

"So be it. I shall some day call for it."

Evelyn Brierly was but seventeen when she made this bargain. When questioned as to her intent when she made it she replied that she could not explain what induced her to say that in exchange for a view of the man's features she would give the only valuable article she had, nor had she framed a reply as to what the article was. She only knew that when she saw the strikingly handsome features of a gentleman the answer came to her from she knew not where and her reply was involuntary.

That was a period when Cromwell's Ironsides had defeated the forces of King Charles I. and Cromwell had made himself lord protector of England. The king's adherents were deprived of their fortunes and scattered. Some of them sought service in the armies of foreign sovereigns, and some, in order to make a living, took to the road. Among these was Lord Walter Wheatleigh, whose father, the Earl of Portland, had been killed at Naseby fighting for the king. Walter, the last of his race, had served under Prince Rupert, and after the beheading of the king his estates had been confiscated, leaving him penniless. He was one of those who took to the road for a living, and it was he who had stopped the chaise of Sir Evan Brierly and made the singular bargain with Evelyn. He afterward joined the young king (Charles II.) on the continent and at the restoration returned with the king, who restored to him his ancestral estates.

Meanwhile Evelyn Brierly grew to be a handsome woman. The face of the highwayman and the mysterious influence that had induced her to pledge him her heart in exchange for a glimpse of it never left her. The years went by, and he did not return to claim his own. Sometimes she dreaded he would and sometimes feared he would not. After awhile she began to think that he had suffered for his crimes on the gallows.

One October evening—it was Halloween—Evelyn stole out of her home and went across the fields to the river bank. The moon was but a few days old and was dividing the day and the night. Evelyn stood on the river bank among scattered trees and, raising a mirror she held in her hand, said aloud:

"Good moon, show me my future husband."

There was a sound of breaking twigs behind her, and a face appeared reflected in the glass: it was the well remembered face of the highwayman.

"Mistress Brierly," he said, "one night some years ago I gave you a sight of my face for your heart. To give you good measure I give you another sight of the same unworthy object."

Evelyn dropped the mirror and turned.

"The highwayman!" she exclaimed.

"The repentant highwayman, formerly Walter Wheatleigh of Prince Rupert's army, then reduced to make a living on the road, now Earl of Pentland."

"I did not know what I was saying," said the girl, turning away. The young earl caught her, saying:

"Nevertheless you said it, and I have come for my own."

Evelyn Brierly became Countess of Pentland and for a short while a member of the court of King Charles. But the profligacy of the court soon drove her to her husband's home near Windsor, where she remained, living a somewhat secluded life with her husband and her children.

A Ten Years' Penance.

It is happily seldom that the revenge of a disappointed husband takes quite such an extreme form as in the case of the man whose will ran thus: "When I remember that the only happy times I ever enjoyed were when my wife sulked with me, and when I remember that my married life might, for this reason, be considered to have been a fairly happy one because she was nearly always sulking, I am constrained to forget the repulsion the contemplation of her face inspired me with and leave her the sum of £80,000 on condition that she undertakes to pass two hours a day at my graveside for the ten years following my decease, in company with her sister, whom I have reason to know she loathes worse than she does myself."—London Tit Bits.

NEW PLAITED SKIRTS.

Comfortable and Graceful, It Is No Wonder They Are Popular.

SMART PLAITED SKIRT.

Some of the latest tunics are open in front to show the long skirt beneath. They reach well below the knee.

Broadtail cloths are used for entire skirts. Indeed, it is said that fur cloths generally will be very important this season.

Hip pockets are still a feature of some skirts. On sports skirts there are flat patch pockets. On some of the new plaited skirts small pockets are stitched over the plaits, and pockets are occasionally applied on skirt with smooth fitting yokes. Then there are the looped pockets on some of the new skirts, finished along the top with a little embroidery or braiding.

The skirt illustrated here is of dark blue or black serge, closely box plaited. A deep crush girdle of black satin may be worn with black serge or of blue satin if the skirt is of blue serge.

How to Treat the Woodwork.

Woodwork is best an ivory white in houses of colonial style. It may be stained dark oak in mission style houses and bungalows, and some with plenty of money have the real mahogany, which is always rich and grows more beautiful with time. A gum wood or birch takes stain well and may be given a cabinet finish much resembling the real mahogany, but it takes an expert workman to do it.

Gay New Scissors.

Some very good looking shears are now sold with colored handles—bright red and other bright colors. They are a change from the conventional nickel or black handled shears, and, as they cut just as well as the plainer ones, they may be indulged in by the woman with a love for attractive colors.

CRYING CHILDREN

When baby cries it is because he is unwell—not because he is bad-natured as so many imagine. Crying is the way the little one has of telling of his pains and the wise mother can instantly tell what ails her little one simply by his cry. When baby cries a great deal give him Baby's Own Tablets and he will soon be happy again. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Jas. Gaudreau, Notre Dame des Bois, Que., says: "My baby cried day and night and I was greatly discouraged. I began giving him the Tablets and he was soon happy, healthy and fat." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ON WHAT DAY WERE YOU BORN?

There is a very old rime that forecasts the character or the fate of every babe according to the day of the week on which it happened to be born.

Need it be said that, as in another case, "Sunday's the best day of all?"

Born on a Monday,
Fair of face;
Born on a Tuesday,
Full of grace;
Born on a Wednesday,
Merry and glad;
Born on a Thursday,
Sour and sad;
Born on a Friday,
Loving and giving;
Born on a Saturday,
Work for your living;
Born on a Sunday,
Never shall want.
So there's the week
And the end on't.

Culinary Notes

Peppers For Winter.

Sweet peppers may be kept for winter's use in several ways. One is to salt them away. Wash and wipe whole sweet peppers and tie tight in a cheesecloth bag; place in a stone jar and fill it up with cold water, salted, allowing four tablespoonfuls of salt to each quart of water. When needed freshen by soaking in fresh soft warm water. Keep them in a cold place. Another scheme is to dry them. Wash and dry the peppers thoroughly. String them on heavy thread or tie and knot each stem with twine (not close enough to touch) and hang the strings in a dry place until the moisture has evaporated. Later, if preferred, they can be tied in bags and hung up.

Fresh Tomatoes For Winter.

Gather smooth, ripe tomatoes in the fall. Select those without broken skins, wipe them off clean and put them in stone jars; melt lard, let it cool and pour it over them, covering them well; set jar in cellar. When taking them out for use save the lard, melt and pour back over the remaining ones. In this way you have fresh tomatoes all winter.

English Jam.

To a pound of fruit allow a pound of sugar and let all stand awhile to draw the juice out of the fruit. Put on the fire to cook without adding water. Cook until it will jelly when cold. It does not need to be sealed; it will keep without. Just tie a cloth or paper over the top of the jar when you set it away.

Cooking Vegetables.

When cooking vegetables remember that all vegetables which grow above ground should be put into boiling water, and all which grow underground in cold water, with the exception of new potatoes.

Linen of Bohemia.

One of the oldest and most important industries of northern Bohemia is that of linen weaving, which furnishes employment under favorable conditions to fully 25,000 people, who are so skilled and clever in the production of fine linens that these goods are favorably known and find a ready market in all parts of the world.

A MEDAL FOR GEN. JOFFRE

"Medaille Militaire" Conferred on French Commander-in-chief

PARIS, Nov. 28.—President Poincare has conferred upon Gen. Joffre the "medaille militaire," the highest honor that can be conferred on a general. The presentation was made in the presence of Premier Viviani, Minister of War Millerand, the presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and the members of the General Staff.

In making the presentation, President Poincare said the simple medal, which was the emblem of the highest military virtues and which was worn with equal pride by illustrious generals and humble soldiers, was a mark of the nation's gratitude to their commander-in-chief. Mr. Poincare added that he associated with him in his sincere congratulations Gen. Joffre's devoted collaborators of the General Staff and the magnificent armies of France.

Canadian Division Manoeuvring.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—For the first time the whole Canadian division is to-day out on manoeuvres, which will prove a most welcome change to the keen spirits who, for some time, have been eager to get busy at a real kind of drill which is necessary before they are fit for the front. The only combined movements so far have been route marches and brigade drills.

Considerable amount of leave is still being granted. The work of erecting wooden huts goes on well, Canadian engineers helping the civil contractors in this work.

WORLDS OF THE UNIVERSE.

All Might Be Annihilated and Not Affect the Solar Systems.

I am asked, "Are distant stars which shine by their own light visible only, or are worlds like our earth visible by reflected light?"

Go out to Neptune, our own last local world in our modest solar system; turn around, look back this way; then you must have a large telescope to see the earth. Only the sun of all bodies in our solar system is visible from space deeps. And it looks like the point of the finest sewing needle from stellar distances.

Thus from space depths only suns at terrific heat are visible in any telescope, even the largest that can be made. Then all worlds are invisible and unknown. The earth and man are both totally unknown to people on worlds revolving around any of the hundreds of millions of other suns, if there are such worlds and inhabitants.

Imagine that there are 1,000,000,000 suns, each surrounded by eight worlds like those revolving now around our sun. Then if an accident suddenly annihilated the 8,000,000,000 worlds, people and all, the accident would not even be noticed. The suns would all move on with velocities in between four and eighty miles per second precisely as if there had been no accident. Thus if there are intelligences in the depths of the sidereal universe they have not heard of man nor his infinitesimal world—the earth.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

CONTINUE BUILDING WARSHIPS

Britain Will Add Fifteen Dreadnoughts Before End of 1915

LONDON, Nov. 28. — Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a speech in the House of Commons last evening, before the adjournment of the lower House to Feb. 2, told the country, that, despite the loss of some of the older ships of the British navy, there was no cause for nervousness, but every reason for complete confidence in the power of the navy to give effect to the wishes and purposes of the Empire.

The First Lord told of the danger to British ships from mines and submarines and of the possibility of armored and fast enemy liners escaping to the high seas to prey on the allies' shipping, which, he added, had been prevented thus far. He concluded his speech with the statement that there was anothr danger, "that of an oversea invasion—an enterprise full of danger for those who might attempt it."

On the whole, the First Lord said, he considered the navy had done well. It was, he declared, driving German commerce from the seas, and preventing enemies getting war material, which they needed more and more as the war proceeded. Even if England were single-handed, there would be no reason to despair, but with the French in control in the Mediterranean and Japan in the Pacific and the Russian navy developing, "we could go on indefinitely, receiving our supplies from wherever we need them, transporting our troops wherever they are required and continue the process with our strength growing greater every month, until at the end of perhaps a not very distant date, we achieve the purpose for which we are fighting."

As for building, the First Lord said, England would add fifteen capital ships to her fleet before the end of 1915 to Germany's three. In fact, he declared, England could lose one super-dreadnought monthly for a year and still maintain her superiority over Germany in these ships.

Light cruisers, Mr. Churchill continued, were being rapidly added to the British fleet, and England had commissioned since the commencement of the war more than Germany had had destroyed or interned. This number, including the Breslau, he said, amounted to six.

The loss of British merchant ships, the First Lord said, was a loss that had been anticipated by the Admiralty. Nevertheless, England had been able, by virtue of its sea power, to draw from all over the world for the cause of the allies everything that was needed, including an abundant supply of munitions, while deficiencies in these commodities were beginning clearly to show in the enemy's military organization.

"We have been at war for four months and I should like to consider how the process of attrition is working," said the First Lord of the Admiralty, referring to the German plan of reducing the British fleet by raids. "The number of submarines lost on both sides has been equal. Our destroyers have shown an enormous superiority in gun power, and we have lost none of them, while eight or ten of the enemy's have been destroyed. We have lost six of the older armored cruisers and Germany has lost two; but we have three or four times as many of these as the enemy has. Of the most important class of minor vessels, modern fast light cruisers, we have lost two out of thirty-six; Germany has lost six out of twenty-five."

In conclusion, Mr. Churchill expressed the hope that these facts would comfort nervous people. He paid tribute to the patriotism of the workmen in the shipbuilding yards. He said that the health of the sailors was twice as good as in peace times and their conduct exemplary. The navy was following the traditions of the historic struggles of the seas, while the soldiers in the field showed a zeal and enthusiasm which was inspiring their leaders with the utmost confidence.

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Haliburton, P.E.I.:—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. Geo. Collicutt, Haliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

Read What This Woman Says:

New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. Cassie Lloyd, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

AUDACIOUS IS BEING REPAIRED

Unconfirmed Reports Say She is at Belfast

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 — Passengers arriving yesterday on the steamer Lusitania from Liverpool, say that the dreadnought Audacious, reported sunk off the Irish coast, has been raised and is now in a Harland & Wolff dry dock at Belfast, undergoing repairs. According to J. J. Spurgeon, one of the passengers, this report is generally current in Liverpool and is accepted as true by those in the inside, although the same degree of secrecy is maintained as to salvage operations as was the case regarding the sinking of the battleship and the attendant rescue of her men by the steamship Olympic.

The report is that the Audacious did not sink in the spot where she was left by the Olympic, but that other vessels succeeded in drawing her into shallow water, where the hole in her bottom was patched sufficiently to permit her being towed to Belfast.

The passengers on board included Col. G. Patterson Murphy and Col. H. H. McLean, who were attached to the first expeditionary force of Canada. They are returning home, but declined to discuss their mission or the war.

WHITE AS A GHOST

Pale or Sallow Cheeks One of the First Signs of Anaemia

Pale and sallow cheeks, with blanching lips and gums, and dark circles under the eyes, are the first signs that anaemia has begun its deadly progress. This first warning is followed by great weariness and breathlessness after any exertion. You grow melancholy, have frequent headaches, awake in the morning feeling tired. You become morbid and nervous, starting at the slightest noise, and your heart palpitates violently even on going up-stairs. Most girls from fourteen to twenty suffer from anaemia. Neglect to supply new blood to the languishing, bloodless body, means a life of misery—indeed it is an open invitation to that most hopeless of all diseases, consumption.

The new, rich blood that cures anaemia and gives new health and strength is readily created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. That is why these pills have cured more cases of bloodlessness and blood disorders than any other medicine. They have made thousands of girls and women strong, well and rosy, with bright eyes and new energy, just because they nourish the body with the new, rich, red blood of health. Here is a typical instance. Miss Laura Dempsey, Auburn, N.Y., says: "For several months I was in a very bad state of health, with many of the symptoms that accompany anaemia. I was pale and bloodless, had terrible headaches, would be breathless at the least exertion. Having tried a number of medicines without relief I naturally became discouraged and began to fear that I was doomed to continued illness. At this stage a friend who had herself been benefitted by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills urged me to try them. I did so and thanks to the pills I am now enjoying the best of health, and feel that I cannot recommend this splendid medicine too highly."

Other weak and ailing girls can also obtain new health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or they will be sent by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ADVANCE BY SOUTH WING

French Have Made Big Advance in Upper Alsace

PARIS, Nov. 28.—From a reliable source information has been received of a considerable French advance in upper Alsace. Advancing from Thann the French occupied Gebwenheim, southwest of Cernay, where the Germans had massed ten thousand men. This advance gives the French direct communication with Belfort via Rodern, whereas previously they were compelled to take high circuitous routes. Farther north they descended from Schluct heights to Slosswelr and Munster, the latter an important centre on the road to Colmar.

The following official communication was issued last night: "The day has been calm. There is nothing to report."

The German artillery fire upon the allied positions eased off during yesterday, the official communique issued yesterday afternoon states. During the visit of the newspaper men of neutral countries to Rheims, however, the city was violently bombarded by the enemy.

The text follows:

"The slackening of the artillery fire of the enemy was noted all along the line during the day of Nov. 26. Two infantry attacks directed against the heads of bridges which had been thrown down on the right bank of the Yser, to the south of Dixmude, were easily repulsed.

"There was no other engagment on the rest of the front in Belgium, and as far as Oise, nor was there any action on the Aisne or in Champagne. Nevertheless, Rheims was rather violently bombarded during the time that a number of journalists from neutral countries were making a visit to the city.

"In the Argonne some infantry attacks resulted in the loss and then the recapture of certain trenches. The men engaged in this fighting never exceeded a battalion. The ground lost and then retaken was never more than 25 yards.

"Along the heights of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

An official naval bulletin, issued last evening, says:

"In the Mediterranean French and British squadrons continue to blockade the Adriatic Sea and the Dardanelles and to protect the coasts of Egypt and the Suez Canal.

"In the North Sea British and French ships have made a reconnaissance of the German batteries established on the Belgian coast. The German cruisers in the Pacific do not seem to have left Chilean waters since the fight of Nov. 1."

The bombardment of Rheims would indicate a resumption of activity along the lines before that city. There is much speculation among staff officers of the allied armies as to the next objective of an assault in force by the Germans. With the invaders beaten off at Nieuport, Dixmude, and along that front, checked at Arras and Armentieres, it may be that Rheims is to again withstand the shock of the Prussian avalanche. There has also been a vigorous artillery exchange in the vicinity of Arras and along the line from Ypres westward to La Basse, where the Indian troops have recently won distinction.

It is denied from German sources that the bombardment of Zeebrugge on Nov. 23 by British warships resulted in the destruction of submarines being built there, of an important arsenal and great quantities of stores.

The Germans spoke scornfully of the small damage, which they say was caused by the British fire.

It is announced that the price of diamonds is to take another rise. Lay in your winter supply before it is too late.

LAST STAGE LODZ BATTLE IS GOING ON

Bitterly Cold Weather Militates Against German Forces in Fast

LONDON, Nov. 28. — The Central News' Rome correspondent telegraphs:—

"The Russian Embassy here states that the battle of Lodz began afresh after the Germans had brought up reinforcements.

"Several German divisions have been annihilated, many generals have been killed, and the German front has been broken by the Russians in a number of places. A decision is now imminent.

Granville Fortescue, the London Telegraph correspondent at Petrograd, telegraphs:

"The feet of many of the prisoners were frozen." This detail from the battle of Lodz conjures up a picture of Napoleon's all-conquering army of one hundred years ago, which found an enemy it could not rout—the cold.

To-day we have a parallel case. The weather here has turned suddenly cold, and the army of invasion has been caught in front, flank and rear by that redoubtable Russian, Gen. Frost. North Russia sleeps under a blanket of snow.

The weather conditions in Poland will be an important factor in the future campaigning of the German troops, for the most part recruited from cities and small towns, where it is the custom to coddle one's self against the cold during the winter. At home they keep their houses well heated, eat well, and are warmly clothed. Now they are burrowing in frozen ground to find protection from the shot and shell of an untiring enemy. This is in direct contrast to the circumstances of the Russian. To him long, cold winters are an old story. He is inured to the severest frost. Short, depressing days mean nothing to him, and gloomy, interminable nights mean nothing to him. The Russian winter nights will in time sap the fibre of the finest troops.

The battle of Lodz is in its last stage. Such German corps as have been able to hold together, in spite of the hammering they have received, keep up the desperate struggle. German forces retreating from Koluski have been caught by pursuing Russians at Brzeziny. They are trying to fight their way through to Strykow, but this road is no longer open, and every hour their position becomes more desperate. Unless they can replenish their ammunition they are lost.

The thought of a winter in Siberia made more vivid by the cold has given the remnant of the German army the fury of despair, but relentlessly the Russians close in on them. If the enemy break through, but a straggling remainder will ever find the trail to Thorn. If they fail, the battle of Lodz will be the greatest catastrophe ever suffered by German military power.

The successes in front of Cracow continue. Captures on the Austrian side have become so common that the news of two entire regiments had recently been taken passes almost without comment. The investment of Cracow is already under way. Russians realize what a task is before them, and they are preparing for a protracted siege. But they have two surprises in store for their foe. There is every reason to believe that these surprises will shorten the investment.

Meanwhile the Russians are converging on Cracow from three sides. In the battles in this vicinity they have been almost invariably successful. Artillery has been taken in every engagement, and two days' fighting resulted in a bag of 15,000 prisoners.

An earlier despatch from London stated that a third German army in the vicinity of Wielun had initiated an advance which was believed in London to have been started too late to be of any use.

Military men declare that unless the German advance toward Kutno and Lodz was part of a larger movement the operation was too hazardous to be credible.

CRAFT SAVED BY AIRMEN

Daring of Commander of Dirigible Prevents Disaster

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A special correspondent of The Standard, writing from a town in northern France, says:—

"A remarkable feat has earned distinction for the commander of a dirigible who was sent out to destroy with bombs a railway junction occupied by the Germans. Descending low, after evading the enemy's searchlights, the dirigible dropped the first three bombs in rapid succession, but the fourth, after its mechanism had been set going, failed to slide from its tube.

"The dirigible was in imminent danger of being blown to pieces, but the commander boldly climbed out on the framework with an axe in his hand, and, now under the full glare of the searchlights and pelted with bullets, hacked away the tube and its projectile only just in time. The bomb exploded 300 feet below. The dirigible was tossed in all directions, but got away safely. Its purpose was fully accomplished."

FORCES OF AUSTRALIA

Commonwealth's Total Contribution so far is 28,258

MELBOURNE, Nov. 28.— In the Senate yesterday the Minister of Defence said that in addition to the forces raised for service in Europe and the citizen forces there were 51,153 members of rifle clubs and 16,000 recruits, totalling 67,153 reservists available for the war, a grand total of 164,621 men under arms. The Government has also raised first, second and third reinforcements to the Australian Imperial forces, totalling 9,000 completed units previously accepted by the British Government, making a total of 28,258 for the Commonwealth.

The Premier told the House of Representatives that 2,000 men monthly could be provided in addition to the number already sent.

Deadly Poison on Soldier.

LONDON, Nov. 28.— An analysis of the contents of the bottle found on the person of a private of the 18th Battalion, arrested Wednesday night, shows the liquid to be a deadly poison, made up largely of strychnine. The man is under a strong guard at Wolseley Barracks, and Lt.-Col. Wigle, commanding officer of the battalion has decided upon a most searching investigation.

Will Permit Missionaries To Leave.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.— Ambassador Morgenthau, at Constantinople, cabled the State Department yesterday that the Turkish Minister of the Interior had given orders to permit the departure from Turkey of several Canadian missionaries, for whom safe conduct had been asked by the British Ambassador here.

What do you think of the man who draws his pay in one town and spends it in another?

SUPPLIES FROM CANADA

The Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa announces that a large number of applications continue to be received as to the possibility of obtaining from Canada commodities, mainly raw materials and partly manufactured goods, to replace supplies formerly drawn from the continent and other sources. Among articles which have been the subject of enquiry are split peas, wheat, apples, hemlock for laths, dowels, broom and tool handles, picture mouldings, office desks and bent wood chairs, matchwood and splints, wood pulleys, hammocks, chair frames, veneer formaldehyde, pearl ash, bronze powder, tissue paper, household and hardware sundries, brushes, flannel.

Many letters have also been received from Canadian manufacturers regarding the possibility of finding a profitable market in England with a view of replacing continental supplies, and from Canadian manufacturers' agents and merchants wishing to obtain fresh sources of supply of goods which have previously been drawn from countries affected by the war.

Molybdenite Wanted.

During the past week or so the attention of the Mining Department of the Provincial Government has been turned towards the possibility of Ontario minerals supplying many of the commercial acids, the supply of which has been limited since the outbreak of war.

Numerous requests for information have been received at the Department from manufacturing and experimental chemists. It is recognized many of the acids most commonly used are obtained from certain mineralogical formations and the desire is to find the location of quantities of molybdenite and dolomite.

Information will be prepared by the Department for any wishing to investigate. Specimens of the two minerals named have been found on occasion in Hastings County and other sections of Ontario.

Faces As Fair As A Summer's Day

Are Possible If Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used for a Short Time After Each Meal.

Many people have been heard to say that they used creams and lotions for years without effect, yet after five or six days of Stuart's Calcium Wafers their complexions were perfectly clear.

"I Got Rid of Blackheads in a Jiffy by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers."

It's easy to understand why. Creams and lotions only get at the surface, while Stuart's Calcium Wafers go right into the blood and instead of a sluggish deposit in the skin and impurities that cause skin diseases are destroyed in the perspiration that is exhaled through the pores in the form of invisible vapor. You'll never have a good complexion without pure blood, but you positively will have a fine, beautiful complexion if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

They contain no poisonous drug of any kind, are perfectly harmless and can be taken with absolute freedom, and they work almost like magic. Calcium Sulphide, their principal ingredient, is the greatest blood-cleanser known to science.

No matter how bad your skin may be, Stuart's Calcium Wafers will quickly work wonders with it. It's goodby to blackheads, pimples, acne, boils, rash, eczema and a dirty "filled-up complexion. You can get a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 50 cents a box, and you will be positively delighted with their wonderful effect. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. Charge is Dismissed

No Evidence to Show Fowl Was Unfit For Use

The charge preferred against Mrs. McIlmoyle of selling fowl unfit for use, was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble in police court this morning.

After reviewing the evidence the Magistrate said: Mrs. McIlmoyle had not drawn any of the birds she sold and had no knowledge of anything being wrong with them. There was no evidence offered to show that the bird in question by reason of disease was unfit for use, save that the Inspector advised the purchaser not to use it. Inquiries at the Oriental Hotel elicited the fact that the two turkeys sold there by Mrs. McIlmoyle showed no evidence of disease.

As Mrs. McIlmoyle did not open any of the birds there is no evidence that any of her flock save this one had a sick liver. And there is no evidence that this bird was unfit for use because of its liver.

Mr. Baptie thought if cooked no harm would come of eating it. This is a grave criminal charge making Mrs. McIlmoyle liable to fine and imprisonment if the fine be not paid.

I do not feel justified in making a conviction under the circumstances. The evidence offered falls far short of the proof required to justify a conviction.

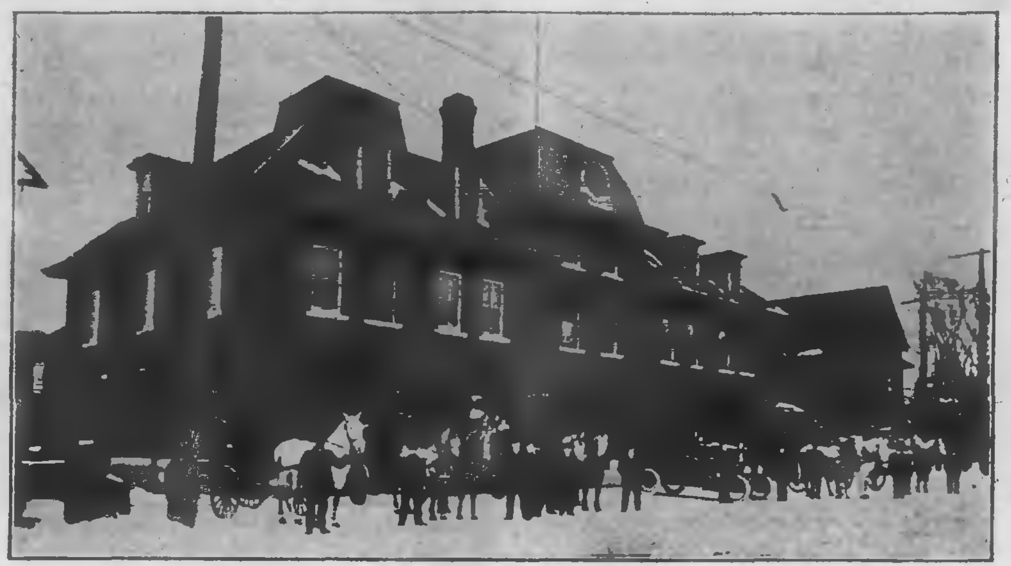
PETERBORO'S FIRE DEPARTMENT AN EFFICIENT ORGANIZATION



Peterborough's Fire Hall, showing equipment and staff. Regarded as one of the really modern and well-equipped departments of Ontario.

Fire! Fire!

How vividly the words spell excitement, danger, anxiety or disaster. In the stillness of night, the faint clang of an alarm reaches a slumberer. He listens for a moment, mainly to assure himself it is not near his house, then lazily rolls over and falls asleep. Somewhere he knows firemen are dashing forth on their mission of succor and help. Human life and property are at stake but the average man sleeps on, secure in the knowledge the fire laddies are on the job.

Here we have an example of what happens hundreds of times a year. An efficient fire department implicitly trusted and relied upon is easily the most valuable asset a progressive city can own. Does Peterborough city lay claim to such an asset? The answer emphatically is "Yes." Glance a moment at a brief resume of its history.

How it Started.

The reorganization of the Peterborough fire brigade from a volunteer brigade to a paid department occurred in July, 1908, a move which had been contemplated for several years and each succeeding municipal council had considered the matter more or less seriously up to that time. The real change was brought about during the first term of ex-mayor Rush. The pressure brought to bear upon the council by the fire underwriters and the fact that several of the volunteer firemen were anxious to be relieved from duty, together with a misunderstanding between council and fire brigade and which terminated with the destruction of the Peterborough Cereal Company's plant. The volunteer firemen had resigned in a body owing to differences which had existed between them and members of the council and consequently the city was left without fire protection. The coincidence called for speedy action on the part of the mayor and aldermen who proved equal to the occasion. A special committee was appointed consisting of Robert Neill, Mr. Harry Phelan, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, and the mayor. This committee entered into negotiations with Fire Chief W. A. Howard and secured his services. Mr. Howard however, could not assume his new duties until June 20th, and the council were compelled to enter into an agreement with the old brigade to carry on the work another month.

Chief Howard's Arrival.

The chief arrived on June 20th, but could not enter upon his duties until the time had expired with the volunteer brigade. That took place at midnight, June 30th, when the old brigade marched out headed by the 57th band, which most people will remember, and Chief Howard with his new staff marched in and took possession. Excitement ran high and the citizens turned out in thousands to witness the change.

This drastic change it must be said would have been affected many years sooner in all probability had it not been for the fact that Peterborough had the best volunteer fire brigade in Ontario. This was generally conceded. As the city was growing very rapidly the change had to come for no volunteer fire brigade can cope with conditions in a large city. Hence the prudence of this action on the part of the mayor and council of the year 1908.

But it took considerable time to convince the citizens that such action was warranted and for nearly three years there was constant strife between the different factions until the superior work of the permanent department finally convinced the citizens that a paid fire department run on business principles with a competent head exercising proper discipline, without political or other interference, was the best paying public utility that the city could have.

The persons and concerns most interested in the formation of a paid department were the merchants and manufacturers and with these influential bodies backing the new department they of course enlisted the interest and co-operation of all the professional men in the city. People who were on the inside of things were better fitted to judge the natural outcome of the undertaking. The criticisms that were hurled at the new department were so severe that it required patient endurance and stability of character for men to stand up in the face of such tremendous odds and today after nearly seven years the department is well past the experimental stage.

Department Has Made Good.

In other words Chief Howard and his men have made good and that's handing it to them modestly. They have been eminently successful in their work throughout this length of time and now stand well in the eyes of the community. Perhaps no city official has received the criticism that Chief Howard has but he survived it all and today is popular with all classes and no one can lay their finger on any weakness in the department which he controls so efficiently.

Fire Losses Light.

Turning for a moment when on the efficiency question to how Peterborough stands in regard to fire losses it was noted at all conventions that this city's losses were invariably light in comparison with similar sized and even large centres. There is a conclusion in this fact that is obvious to all.

There has never been an accident to a man or horse connected with the department, that could be termed serious. Every Monday, regular as the clock, the whole year round, the members of the brigade are put through some kind of fire drill. Lectures are given by Chief Howard on modern methods of fire fighting so that every man is in a sense a chief and knows immediately the proper course to pursue when fighting a fire.

While a fireman's life necessarily means plenty of risk and danger and sometimes hardship, nevertheless he is not deprived of amusements. Oftentimes he has more recreation than other people. At the local hall amusements, consisting of billiards, cards, dominoes and checkers while away many an otherwise irksome hour. Physical exercise is secured when not attending to the many duties around the hall, of dumb bell drill, club swinging and running up and down the spiral stair tower. This is excellent for a man's wind so the chief claims and soon shows whether a man has a weak heart or not, better than any physician's examination.

Amusements Ample.

But it is on Christmas eve and Christmas day that the fireman's cup of pleasure overflows. Christmas at the fire hall has come to mean much in the hearts of the firemen and every year is more eagerly anticipated than the previous. Nowhere is the holiday more prevalent. A big Christmas tree is placed in the hall and a banquet given where the firemen, their wives and kiddies have the feast of the year. Deliciously roasted turkeys, and every dinner accessory known to culinary skill is there in abundance. Then the Christmas tree is stripped of its load of gifts and the children of the firemen return home with glad hearts and full stomachs and wish that Christmas came every day.

Force of Eighteen.

The present strength of the force is eighteen, a force which is more than sufficient to cope with the situation in Peterborough. The city has expanded so quickly particularly in the south that the need for a southern substation has become urgent and it is hoped that before long the council will be able to make this necessity a realization.

Every Call Known.

No person can send in a telephone call to the fire hall without it being readily discovered where the call originated. With a system established by F. W. Doan of the Bell Telephone Company and the chief, some years ago at the Bell Telephone Company's plant, the telephone number of every call rung in the hall is recorded. For example, if a party phones from any part of the city without leaving their number, all the chief has to do is call up central and he can supply him with the number of the phone. In this way the chief can often find out the location of a fire in case the phone call was to give an alarm. It also is a protection against any jokers who might be inclined to ring in an alarm of fire for a lark. A punching apparatus records the number of every call.

CHIEF W. A. HOWARD.

Fire Chief W. A. Howard entered the London, Ont., fire department as a volunteer firemen twenty years ago next February. He served continuously under two chiefs, who were both killed in active service. He was promoted to assistant foreman, then foreman, then captain, and afterward department foreman with the rank of captain. He was made chief of the Berlin, Ont., department, which he reorganized and controlled for two years. He then undertook a similar task for the Owen Sound council, where he was highly successful. From Owen Sound he came to Peterborough, where he has been for nearly seven years. "I have always been lucky," remarked the chief to a reporter. "I have been in many accidents and disasters, but some way always escaped unscathed. Never even had a finger hurt."

Trade With Japan.

The Canadian trade commissioner at Yokohama states that the German and Austrian trade with Japan totalling $30,000,000 yearly is now entirely cut off and Canada will on this account find Japan a good market for pulp for paper making, printing paper, packing paper, malt, glue, dynamite, iron, screws, nails, bolts and other articles.

THE COLLEGIATE STUDENTS IN STUDY, SPORT AND WAR

during intervals. Miss Bernice Giroux contributed a piano selection and Miss Lora Logan a number on the violin, while the school teachers quartette was as popular as ever.

The entrance prizes were presented by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., and Dr. George Burnham, the athletic prizes by A. D. Hone, B. A., and C. S. Brown, M. A., and the Nicholls scholarships by G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.

Inspector Mowat and Dr. M. A. Morrison both made congratulatory speeches of an appropriate character, classing the local Collegiate as second to none in Ontario, a feeling seemingly re-echoed by the audience, judging by the loud applause.

In presenting his prize, a gold wrist-watch, Mr. Burnham said:

There has been a decided tendency of late years to follow science and to ignore literature and history. Science is not only exercise of the intellect, but of immediate practical use—but, beyond mere practical material use, beyond the law of cause and effect, the law of mechanical compensation, there is nothing further. There is nothing whatever of the ethical in science. Science is pure materialism. The study of science alone therefore inclines a people to materialism. Experience shows that the moment we sink to the level of materialism we are in immediate danger of losing all sense of moral duty. The spiritual also vanishes. Take, for example, common honesty. Honesty is a duty. It also can, as in science, be considered merely as a act Duty is no part of materialism. Science ignores duty, honor, human kindness, and all that goes to make up what we regard as civilization. We must seek that in religion, philosophy and poetry and all that which records the history of human conduct as a manifestation of moral responsibility. The neglect of these in favor of the study of science has made the world a wonder, materially but will make it a shame morally or ethically. Rising generations whose mental energies have been largely devoted to science are almost wholly ignorant of what is meant when breaches of public or private trust are referred to as a disgrace. The word disgrace is unknown to science. The word has no meaning to the law of the conservation of energy. If in science we do not do certain things the required results will not follow. There is no cheating science. To take an example of what I mean: The torpedo is a marvel mechanically. Explosives are great achievements chemically. Ethically they are the inventions of the devil and are in no sense indicative of any of the virtues. Human conduct is over and above all these things and can only be learned from that which teaches the principles of human conduct. The man who spares his horse because he dislikes to see it suffer is a humane man. The man who spares it solely because it will cost him so much to buy another is a mere animal and nothing more, if indeed that. We must be careful therefore that in providing for education we do not miss the chief essential, viz.: a sense of responsibility, and that sense can only be provided for by the study of the lives and noble deeds of exemplary peoples. Their achievements are recorded in the classics, and apart altogether from the artistic beauties of the classics, there are the records which they preserve, and to those we must pay due heed. There will be a return to a more general study of the classics on moral grounds, and the benefit will become manifest. To expect a noble-minded, upright people without sowing the seed is to try to make bricks without straw. It is impossible. It has been ascertained by experiment that children brought up without moral guidance are simply animals, and when it was pointed out to them that they should do certain things involving responsibility of character, they were of course ignorant of the meaning and of the idea and met every statement by the simple reply: "I want it." In other words, the animal instinct of supply had completely supplanted their whole moral being. If, in addition, they had been taught mathematics and natural science they would have been more highly intellectual and capable people, but they would have been entirely ignorant of the moral law except in so far as they could have divined some faint glimmer of moral responsibility which experiment has shown to be very faint indeed. I do not propose to discuss the problem of innate ideas, but merely to show that if we wish to accomplish results we cannot do so by ignoring them. That is the ethics of Christian citizenship.

There is, too, another feature of classical study of far-reaching importance. While science appeals to the highest capabilities of the imagination and of the intellect, yet it cannot focus them into reverence for an ethical ideal. What would life be to humanity if humanity were deprived of the incentive and attraction of an ideal which prompts men not merely as science does to unravel the scientific riddle of the universe, but to self-sacrifice and supreme effort in the cause of humanity as well? There is no soul in science. It is all mind. How much then we owe to the classical records of the soul in humanity in the great stress and struggle of life can be imagined.

NATURE UNUSED TO MAN

It is the deliberate opinion of a party of engineers in charge of a recent expedition into Ungava that nature is at her dotage in those dense solitudes and that consequently trees, birds, beasts and fishes lack the strength and vigor which appertains to them elsewhere.

The ease with which the smaller fur-bearing animals were caught and the tameness, or rather the unconsciousness of danger from men which was the rule among the wild creatures, was almost appalling at times.

White ptarmigan the party learned to snare by setting fine slip nooses of sinew, or root fibre, amongst the red shoots of young willows upon which they fed.

Fiji Islanders for War

MELBOURNE, Nov. 28. — A despatch from Suva says that Lewis Harcourt, the British Colonial Minister, has given his approval for the sending of a contingent of Fiji Islanders to the front.

The Fiji Islands constitute a British colony in the South Pacific and are administered by a governor. The inhabitants are of a Malayan-Polynesian stock, and before they were Christianized were barbarous warriors with a tendency towards cannibalism.

WILL BRUSSELS BE DESTROYED?

MARY BOYLE O'REILLY SENDS NEWS OF SITUATION AT BELGIUM'S BEAUTIFUL CAPITAL

Miss O'Reilly Vividly Describes Misery and Famine in Conquered Capital---A Loaf of Bread a Day, no Butter, Milk or Eggs and no Fuel, Death Penalties, That is the Life of the Terrorized Inhabitants of Belgium's Metropolis Under Stern Rule.

London, England, Nov. 10.—Life in Brussels is almost intolerable. Stern, often galling, orders fan the smoldering rage of the citizens. In a city overcrowded with stricken people, threatened with famine and on the edge of turmoil, the garrison daily exasperates the Brussellers who feel it is done to incite them to acts which invite reprisal.

Householders are forbidden to look out of their windows or to fasten their doors.

The public clocks, all set at German time, complicate daily life. The spectacle of Belgian prisoners led through the Sunday crowds by grinning guards incites to outbreak. Throngs of Landstrum are whispering together in the public squares to hear accounts of the latest German victories. "Important decrees" in German, French and Flemish announce that Brussels is now a German city, Belgium a German province, with threats of severe reprisals for overt acts.

To all intents and purposes Brussels is besieged. Since Aug. 20 it has been cut off from the world. No newspapers are published. In the midst of alarms local affairs sink to insignificance compared with the interest in happenings "out there."

Military proclamations forbid the use of bicycles under ban of being shot. Passes to leave the city for a few hours are confined to those who can produce birth certificates, even when the applicants come from Belgian towns recently burned to the ground. Such passes are good for 12 hours, since at night no one may pass, however great the need. To attempt escape invites death, for sharpshooters man a hundred road traps, captive balloons scout the countryside.

For three months all the shops have been closed, excepting the retail food stores. During the first fortnight of German suzerainty soldiers commandeered to their heart's content. Officers bought what they would with war script, promissory notes payable on the Bank of France after the war. In this way alone hundreds of little dealers were looted and ruined.

Now the money crisis is acute. All the French banks are closed, the Germans refuse to allow any banks to do business, even through their foreign branches, with the countries of the allies.

FAMINE THREATENS WHOLE CITY.

Most critical of all is the problem of food. On the day of entry the wholesale butchers were requisitioned to bring tons of chilled beef to the invaders.

It rotted in the square under the August sun while tons of other looted foodstuffs littered the streets. The commandeering of food stores reduced the city to famine.

For two months Brussellers have had no milk, eggs or butter. On September 1 all the wholesalers closed. Since September 19 paraffine wheat, sugar, rice or dried vegetables have been practically unobtainable. A week later there was no condensed milk for little children, no farinaceous foods for the aged or the invalids.

On October 1 the coffee and potatoes gave out. On October 10 the supplies of salt and yeast were exhausted and the population faced famine. Soap cannot be obtained at any price, coal is hardly obtainable and daily the terrified citizens are requisitioned from their scanty stores for the benefit of the German soldiers.

There is no flour for sale in Brussels, a city of 600,000 people, not counting the refugees from the Belgian cordon. All the flour at hand has been requisitioned by the communal authorities who sell only to the bakers under agreement that bakeshops shall sell only one day's dole to each inhabitant.

The daily bread of besieged Brusselers is a one-pound loaf, black and unsalted. And daily the German commander decrees that bakers bake "good bread" for the soldiers. Two weeks ago when the daily ration of the poor was fixed at four ounces of wheat and potato meal, mixed, the ambassador obtained from Field Marshal von der Goltz permission to send emissaries into Holland for food supplies. But the Hollanders, taxed with a million Belgian refugees, refused to export food.

ON VERGE OF REIGN OF TERROR.

Brussels is continually on the verge of a reign of terror. Three months ago all arms were commandeered; men found in possession of a fire arm are instantly shot. At night the streets are kept dark and citizens are warned to keep within doors. Sentries guard the street corners clearing the way for military motors with lifted rifles. Maxim guns with crews lying beside them hold every square. Hussars billeted beyond the barriers plunder the suburbs, soldiers practice shooting in public daily.

The burgomaster and three leading citizens are held as hostages, their lives being forfeited if a single civilian lift hand against the invader. All youths of an age to join corps or to be useful to the Germans are held as prisoners of war on parole and the fathers who allow grown sons to leave the city are punished with death.

"Brussels deserves no consideration whatever," declared Field Marshal von der Goltz, the German governor of Belgium, in a proclamation. "the resistance of the Belgian army to the Landstrum merits severe reprisal. If the slightest hostile act is committed by citizens we will burn the city to the ground. Mark that well."

Should the war tide return to Belgium, the Germans be forced to evacuate Brussels, then the fate of the city is sealed!

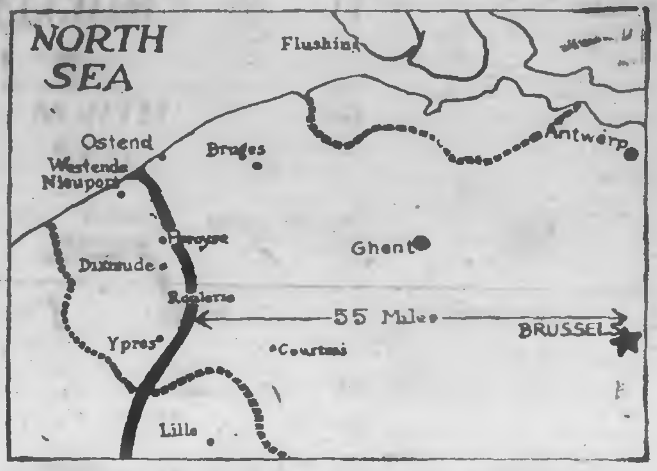
Brussels is a city set upon a hill, open, unfortified, of no military importance, its 600,000 citizens helpless prisoners of war. Guns are entrenched on the Royal Park, the trees round the Castle of Ternath have been felled to brace fortifications; 200 infantry protect the general staff.

The colossal Palais de Justice on its elevated plateau looks like a fortress, with machine guns placed to sweep the principal streets and windows blocked by sand bags. The Gare du Midi and the Gare du Nord (railway stations) are now cavalry barracks, the Bourse and the General Post Office infantry casernes with filled kitchens established in their courts, the palace of the king has clothes lines strung across its court yard and cooking cauldrons ranged along its facade.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS MINED.

Every public building except the 13th century cathedral of Ste. Gudule and the historic town hall has been mined to facilitate their speedy destruction. I have been informed by a reliable friend who remains in Brussels for humanity's sake.

Anything may happen. The tension grows daily worse. The bravest hearts are cold with apprehension Every sign indicates that Brussels is falling. The army of occupation declare quite frankly that the city will be defended from the allies at any cost, that they are prepared to burn Brussels "if necessary."



THE ABOVE MAP SHOWS THE TERRITORY AND DISTANCE THE FORCES OF THE ALLIES MUST TRAVEL BEFORE REACHING BRUSSELS NOW HELD BY THE GERMANS. THE HEAVY BLACK LINE SHOWS WHERE THE BATTLE LINE IS TODAY.

The slightest emergency will serve to fire the city. It would be an easy matter for a brigade of incendiaries to set Brussels ablaze in an hour! Already bearers of heavy tubes of petrol have sprayed inflammable liquid on doomed buildings.

So certain are the citizens that the fatal day approaches that they have secretly cut off the gas supply, blocked cellar windows with sacks of earth, filled long abandoned wells against the destruction of the water works. The military governor ordered all fire apparatus to concentrate in the heart of the city and surrender to the garrison. A hundred fire captains refused to obey. They were speedily placed under arrest and their places taken by the Landstrum who discovered that the fire chiefs had taken the precaution to render their heavy engines immovable.

Today the capital is entirely unprotected against fire. Should the retreating Germans re-enter the city and the allies arrive before the gates a few torches will bring the doom of Brussels.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The facts in this story were accumulated by Mary Boyle O'Reilly while practically a prisoner of war in the Belgian capital. On her return to London she wrote the story. Later information was supplied her by messenger from a personal friend, a Red Cross nurse who remained in Brussels. The messenger has since been caught and placed under military arrest.

CANADA COULD BE INVADED

But Monroe Doctrine Would Prevent German Occupation

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The Monroe doctrine was strongly indorsed, its relation to the present European war and its applicability to Canada discussed, and the declaration that interferences by the United States in Mexico and Central American States have had nothing to do with that doctrine was made by former President William Howard Taft in an address at Montclair, N.J., last night.

In taking up the proposition of Great Britain's enemies landing troops in Canada, Mr. Taft said:—

"Canada is already furnishing substantial military aid to Great Britain and the allies. She has sent a body of 30,000 men, of well equipped soldiers, and is preparing more and intending to send them. On what theory, therefore, could we justly object to Germany's taking countermeasures and carrying the war into a country which is waging war upon her? All that the Monroe doctrine would consistently require of us would be to insist that when the war is over, if Germany were successful, she could not take over the territory of Canada and overthrow her Government and establish her own there, or take any oppressive measures which would have a similar effect. But we could not object to her exacting an indemnity if she were the victor."

Peace Not Wanted.

BERLIN, Nov. 28. — The Cologne Gazette, commenting yesterday on a newspaper despatch dealing with the renewed peace talk, says as follows:

"It is premature to talk about peace, and it strikes us as frivolous. No German diplomat and no German soldier thinks of concluding an illusory peace with the powers which we have beaten and confidently hope to continue beating.

"In Germany everybody from the Kaiser to the day laborer is determined to make a clean score this time."

"On the 21st our heavy artillery bombarded the Austrian monitors off Semlin and forced them to withdraw at the same time silencing the enemy's artillery."

JAMES SUTHERLAND AGAIN TO MANAGE THE FRONTENACS

Kingston Has Organized Likewise Whitby — Berlin not to Desert O.H.A

Kingston, Nov. 28. — The Frontenac hockey club organized at a meeting held in the city council chamber, when the following officers were elected for the coming season: Pres., Geo. B. McKay; treasurer, B. Abernethy; secretary, S. E. Trotter; manager, Jas. T. Sutherland; asst. manager, George Van Horne; trainers, Jack Powell and Douglas Pound; Chief Supreme Rooter, Jack Cousins; auditors, James Taber and Jack Cousins.

The captain of the junior team is "Terry" Millan. Two former players of the club are at the front, Geo. Richardson and "Scotty" Davidson. The club finances show a balance. A trip to Cleveland, New York and Detroit is being arranged.

MINORS SHOULD HAVE BIG YEAR

Will Have Fine Assortment to Choose From

No matter what happens to the major leagues, next year is going to be a bright one, for the minors are going to play better baseball and to larger crowds.

The big upheaval in baseball, caused by the entrance of the Federals, was exceedingly painful to the minors. The Feds stole players from them while the major leagues, jealously guarding the stock on hand, refused to send to the minors any player that looked as if he might amount to anything.

Minor leagues are dependent upon the majors for their supply of players, and the minors suffered in the season just ended because each big league club was riding around with five or ten good men that in times of peace would have been sent to the bush.

Now the American League idea is agreed to by the National, McGraw alone will have to turn thirty players back to the minors. Other clubs will have almost as many men to spare.

The result will be that minor league magnates, who already have cut their own limits, will have a fine assortment from which to choose and the prices, owing to the large supply, will be low.

BENNY KAUFF has found that this Federal League fame doesn't get him the privilege of breaking laws in his home town of Danville, Ill. He was recently fined $30 for speeding his auto there.

FAMILIAR NAMES AT WHITBY.

Whitby, Nov. 28.— — The Whitby hockey club has organized for the coming season with the following officers: Hon. Pres., Sheriff Paxton; Pres., A. W. Jackson; Vice-Pres., David Mathison; Sec'y and Manager, F. W. Burns; Treas., R. M. Deverell; Executive, Bert Smith, Arthur Blanchard, Chas. Lavery and A. Butler.

Intermediate and junior teams will be entered in the O. H. A.

BERLIN FOR O. H. A.

Berlin, Nov. 28. — The management of the Berlin O. H. A. intermediate team does not look with favor on the proposal of some of the western Ontario clubs to form an O. H. A. senior group in this section of the province. The grouping of Brantford, Preston, Paris, Berlin, Sarnia and Western University of London in the senior series does not appeal to the locals to the same extent as some former O. H. A. districts. The places are too far apart to make the game a financial success.

Berlin will be represented in the O. H. A. by a stronger team than last year, several players having shown great speed in preliminary practices. All of last season's team is available, too.

Not a Party Man.

"Is your husband a confirmed party man?" asked the smiling candidate.

"Laws, no! He's quit dancin' and don't even attend his lodge reg'lar," answered Mrs. Wayback.—Dallas News.

Greatness.

Genuine greatness is marked by simplicity, unostentatiousness, self forgetfulness, a hearty interest in others, a feeling of brotherhood with the human family.—Channing.

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE PENCIL PUSHER of the Ottawa Free Press has broken into all-star-bugs' tribe with the following "lulu":

Quilty, McGill, flying wing.
McKelvey, Hamilton, left half.
Laing, McGill, centre half.
McKenzie, Varsity, right half.
Dixon, Hamilton, quarter.
Ireland, Hamilton, scrimmage.
Davidson, Argos, scrimmage.
Myers, Hamilton, scrimmage.
Wilson, Hamilton, inside wing.
Foster, Argos, inside wing.
Cassells, Varsity, middle wing.
Burkhart, Argos, middle wing.
McMurray, Argos, outside wing.
Kinglis, Argos, outside wing.

Notice that there's not an Ottawa man among the select.

THREE-QUARTERS of the forward line of "Billie" Nelson's team have practically won their places. They are Kelly, Park and Halpin. Just who the fourth man will be cannot be stated. Kennealley, who subbed last year, will not play at all this winter owing to recent injuries to his left arm.

MR. PRESIDENT, would you mind calling another meeting of the Mercantile Hockey League and let that organization get busy for the winter? The Review is very anxious to enter a team, and watch us land higher than the newspaper represented last season.

WANTED—A goal tender for the Peterboro junior O. H. A. team, if such a team be in existence a month from now. Some dark horse will have to be unearthed, for there is no one in sight. Darling and Dwyer, who performed the duties last year, are over age.

THERE WILL BE a merry old battle between "Skid" Janes and Joe Dwyer for the job between the irons for the intermediates this winter. Last year neither showed much superiority over the other.

CANADIANS IN FRANCE

Hundred Doctors Establishing Hospitals at Hardelot Forest

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Arthur Leech, The Daily News' war correspondent, wires that the advance guard of the Canadian contingent who left here at the beginning of the month, has arrived in northern France. It consists of 100 doctors, who have gone over to establish a Canadian hospital, which, he says, promises to be one of the most magnificently equipped of the many which have come from England, Australia, America and India. The spot chosen by the Canadians is a favorite seaside resort, and their building is the club house of a golf club. Many of the contingent are French-Canadians from Quebec, and this place lies on the edge of the great forest of Hardelot. The medical staff took possession of the building Thursday, he adds, "and we promised the feat of hustling in its speedy equipment in order that at any moment they may be ready for administering to the fine force of men who have come to aid the nation in its hour of need."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 27. — Quite a heavy break occurred in the market this morning. Liverpool cables were 3 1-2d lower, which caused a lower opening on the local market, of 1 3-4c to 1 7-8c on November, December and May months. July opened 1 1-2c down. During the first half hour of business there was heavy liquidation on the break, after which prices steadied at a shade better than the opening. Influences causing the big break were favorable reports from Argentina, and the minister of war's assuring statement as to the progress of the war. Closing prices were 2 1-4c to 2 3-4c down for wheat, oats 7-8c to 1c down and flax 1 1-2c to 2 1-2c lower.

The cash demand for all grades of wheat was fair, with moderate offerings. Oats and barley continue in slow demand, while there is a fair enquiry for cash flax. A few loads of wheat were worked for export. Inspections Thursday were 851 cars, as against 1341 last year, and in sight were 700 cars. Deliveries thru the clearing house were: Wheat, 10,000 bushels; oats, 14,000 bushels, and flax, 9000 bushels.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The export trade in all lines of grain continues very quiet, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers for supplies owing to the further weakness and the sharp decline in prices at both American and Canadian centres. The feeling in oats on spot was weaker, and prices declined 3-4c to 1c per bushel in sympathy with the break in prices in the Winnipeg market during the past two days. At this reduction there was a fair demand for car lots, and a larger volume of business was done.

Demand for Argentine corn is quiet and prices are one-half cent per bushel lower at 83½c to 84c. The export trade in flour was quieter, but there continues to be a steady demand for domestic account. Mill feed is very active and the undertone to the market is stronger and an advance in prices is anticipated in the near future.

There is no change in butter, for which the demand is quiet. Cheese is firm. Eggs fairly active.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 55½c to 57½c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 45c to 45½c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

VON ESSEN'S EXPLOIT.

Russian Admiral's Squadron Crept In Among Germans.

LONDON, Nov. 28. — The Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post makes an interesting disclosure concerning a success which he says was achieved by the Russian Baltic fleet, under command of Admiral von Essen, early in September. His despatch in substance is as follows:

"It appears that German warships had acquired the habit of cruising in the Baltic up to the limit which the Russian fleet had decided to hold. Having received certain information, Admiral von Essen painted several of his cruisers and destroyers with the German colors and under cover of foggy weather contrived to join the German ships, the presence of the Russian warships had not been suspected until it was too late.

"At a convenient moment, the admiral opened fire, sinking one German cruiser and badly damaging another, while the Russian destroyers put in good work on the smaller German craft. Having delivered this blow the Russian vessels sailed home untouched.

"The Germans naturally remained silent regarding the fight and for various reasons the Russians also kept quiet, but a number of the coveted St. George crosses were distributed among those who were responsibl for the success of this venture."

In connection with the above story, it is interesting to note a brief statement which was given by the official news bureau on Sept. 4. The communication was as follows:

"According to information derived from a trustworthy source, seven German destroyers and torpedo boats have arrived at Kiel in a damaged condition, and it is understood that others have been sunk in the vicinity of the Kiel Canal."

Kaiser Visited Kiel.

LONDON, Nov. 28. — The correspondent at The Hague of The Evening News transmits a rumor from well-informed sources that Emperor William during the past week paid a flying visit to Kiel, where he spent several days.

It is suggested at The Hague, the correspondent continues, that this visit foreshadows renewed activity on the part of the German fleet, which, as the Russian ports soon will be icebound will shortly be freed of the necessity of watching the Baltic.

Many local people attended the concert and dance given last night under the auspices of the maids of Havelock. The concert consisted of the presentation of Asa Huycke's show, and the local production made a big hit. Huycke's orchestra rendered the music for the dance which followed the entertainment.

KITCHENER CLUB DANCE.

Over one hundred daintily gowned young ladies and their gallant partners were watched over by Terpsichore for a while last evening at the Conservatory of Music, the occasion being the informal dance given by the local branch of the Canadian Kitchener League. This popular club held a very successful concert a few weeks ago, but their dance last night far surpassed any other social function held this season. From nine o'clock till midnight Miss Gladman, pianist, rendered dance music that endeared her to the hearts of all the gay young set. Every number was enthusiastically encored, and the selection "Something Seems Tingle-ingle-ing," from the musical comedy "High Jinks," was encored repeatedly.

Refreshments were served and thoroughly enjoyed. The patronesses were: Mrs. J. Knox, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. P. Grady, Mrs. Jamieson and Mrs. W. Stocker.

BANQUET IN HONOR OF BRIDE AND GROOM

The regular monthly meeting of Court Chemong 530 Independent Order of Foresters was held on Thursday evening in the W.O.W. Hall, George Street, with Bro. D. Wallace presiding. The business being concluded, the members were invited to a banquet which the ladies had prepared in honour of Brother George Louis Martin and bride. Bro. Martin returned from Kingston and was married to Miss Maude Emily Cole on Wednesday night. Bro. Martin is a reservist having seen service in South Africa and with Kitchener at Khartoum and was honoured with two medals.

Bro. G. W. Powell proposed the health of the bride and groom which was duly pledged by the members along with best wishes.

The members unanimously decided to hold a patriotic concert and social on Thursday evening, Dec. 10 and a committee was appointed to complete arrangements.

Companions Mrs. Bradshaw and Miss Rhodehouse presided very acceptably at the piano and several national selections were the result, including the Soldiers of the King, the Maple Leaf and Rule Britannia, brought a pleasant evening to a close and the members dispersed to the strains of It's a Long Long Way to Tipperary.

The Browning Club

On Thursday, the 26th, 8 p.m., at the Y. W. C. A., some 20 members and visitors gathered as usual at the reading and interpretation of Browning's poems. "Rabbi Ben Ezra" was read and commented on by the Rev. R. Pogue. As the reading proceeded, time was allowed for discussion, and many interesting points were raised. Last week, in the regrettable absence of Miss Weir, Judge Huycke very kindly represented her and read with a running commentary the poem she had chosen—"An Epistle of Karshish." Next week the members purpose going on with the discussion of "Rabbi Ben Ezra," and (if time allows) introducing some points in the interpretation of "Karshish" that may serve to bring it in line with "Cleon," the next poem to be taken up. Both these poems represent, in a manner, how Christianity would strike two quite distinct corners of the pagan world.

In the interests of English poetry and its lovers, the Organizing Committee at the Y. W. C. A. desire once more to welcome visitors and friends to attend the meetings without regard to membership of the Browning Club.

DAN WHETUNG HAS CHARMED LIFE

Took Stage Across on the Ice This Morning

Dan. Whetung, sen., the well-known driver of the Chemong stage, has no fear of thin ice. For the past few days he has been crossing the lake en route to this city, and this morning he brought the stage across from the Indian village to Ennismore, a distance of about three hundred yards, by hand, and drove from this side with his team. For years Dan has been the first to cross the lake.

Pigeon Lake was crusted with ice about the 18th, and on Monday last the 23rd, Bruce Freeburn, who is staying at the Hon. Mr. Kemp's summer cottage at Sandy Point, Mississauga, walked across to the Verulam shore. The ice was strongest on the Harvey shore. On the Verulam side he could stamp his heel through, and it was risky, for he did not take the precaution of carrying a pole. Several Harvey residents crossed the ice on Tuesday.

PATRIOTIC BRIDGE

The most brilliant social event of this season was the patriotic bridge given to raise funds for Christmas presents for our Peterboro soldiers at Salisbury Plain. To help this worthy cause, the elite of Peterboro in their gala attire turned out.

The spacious rooms of the Oddfellows' Hall, which were so kindly loaned by them for the afternoon, were filled to overflowing.

The committee in charge of this large undertaking was composed of Mrs. J. E. L. Goodwill, Mrs. George Burnham, Mrs. Ernest Clarkson, Miss Jean Harstone, secretary, and Miss Helen Davidson, treasurer. These young ladies were untiring in their efforts to make the affair a success, and are to be warmly congratulated on the result of their efforts.

The entertainment was given under the patronage of the following ladies: Mrs. Young, Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, Mrs. A. E. Coulthrad, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Goodwill and Mrs. McLean.

The fortunate winners of the prizes were Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. W. Hall, and Miss Rose McElderry, of Guelph, who won the auction prizes; Miss Perry, the bridge prize, and Mrs. Yenny the five-hundred prize.

Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Hooper, who so kindly donated the tea and coffee urns and looked after everything himself in a most efficient manner; also to Mrs. Head, the popular stewardess of the Golf Club, who gave her services to help in this good cause. The delicious tea served was kindly donated by Mr. John. The card tables were loaned by Messrs. Comstock, Belleghem, Craig and Clegg.

The yellow 'mums, which added so much to the beauty of the tea tables were given by Messrs. Jordan Bros. Mr. Cressman kindly loaned a Victor Victrola, which was placed in the tea room and gave great pleasure. Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons loaned a dozen flags and a flagpole. The cards were loaned by the Daughters of the Empire, and the prizes were donated by Mrs. E. A. Coulthard and the committee. To all those who so appreciably assisted to make this affair a success, the committee wish to offer their grateful thanks.

The lovely bevy of young girls who assisted deserve great credit for their services, and added greatly to the charm of the affair. Amongst these were noticed Misses Cameron, Delafosse, Stevenson, Florence Scott, Ola Cavanagh, Munroe, Pearce, Gladys Cameron, M. Macdonald, Hill Hatton, Cummings, Agnes Eastwood, Marion and Phyllis Denne, Gladman, and Reinhart.

The long table on which refreshments were served was ablaze with candles in silver candlabra and was festooned with flags. As all the refreshments were donated by the ladies of the city, and there were no expenses, the handsome sum of about $150 was realized.

Amongst those present were Mesdames Bletcher, Buchanan, Blewett, Campbell, Coulthard, Misses Collins, Cameron, Dobie, Davidson, Mesdames Devey, Fisk, D. J. Fleming, Gordon, Gillespie, Graham, Hall, Lyle, Lang, Medd, Mulholland, McElderry, McDermid, Perks, Roy, Stevenson, Seawright, Spence, Trebilcock, Tomlins, R. Turner, Yenny, Misses Hurley, Higgins, Stella Knox, Mowry, Revell, M. Roger, Ruth, Leah and Lillian Roger, Jessie Spence, M. Warne, Worth, S. Robinson, Mesdames Adam Hall, Ryerson Ritchie, Benoir, Dowling, Parsons, A. H. Stratton, Benedict, W. H. Hill, W. H. Moore, Dickson Hall, Miss Rush, Mrs. Hewson, Miss Lundy, Mrs. Hatton, W. W. Coulthard and very many others.

"PASS ONE"

When a Montreal health inspector visited the home of Daniel O'Connell, of Laval avenue, in the commercial Canadian metropolis, Daniel apparently felt rising within him the same intolerant hatred of Sassenach-made laws which earned for his great namesake the proud title of "the Irish Emancipator." Daniel disputed the inspector's right to enter, and the official thereupon produced his official badge.

"What's that thing?" asked Daniel.

"This badge entitles me to enter any place I chose," replied the microbe-chaser with dignity.

"Any place at all?" queried Daniel with implied doubt in his tones. "Then you can go to hell with it and try it there," was Daniel's unexpected suggestion, as he slammed his door shut.

Alas, for the evil times upon which the spirit of Liberty has fallen! Daniel was haled into court, and instead of receiving a laurel wreath for his defence of his threshold, was admonished by the magistrate and ordered to pay the costs of his prosecution.

Lots of Work In Spring.

Mr. H. A. Macdonell, Director of Immigration for Ontario, is of the opinion that next spring there will be a larger demand for farm labor than ever known in the province, and that it will be to the advantage of farmers to secure help at the present time. Owing to the facts that immigration from the old country has been practically brought to a standstill, and that so many farm hands have gone with the Canadian contingent, a shortage of labor will be experienced when the spring comes. There is no reason, Mr. Macdonell thinks, why farmers cannot make arrangements now by hiring help on a yearly engagement. In response to the circulars which have been sent out to farmers, it is stated that a good many applications are being received each day for help.

RUSSIANS TAKE 10 MILES OF TRENCHES

Montevideo, Nov. 30.---Recent reports that a German fleet is now in the South Atlantic appear to have been confirmed here to-day. It is also rumored that a powerful British fleet is near by.

GERMAN POSITION AROUND LODZ FAR MORE CRITICAL

Six Hundred Prisoners, Seven Guns and Many Wounded Taken By Russians in Fighting on Sunday — Kaiser's Army One Hundred Miles From It's Base

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Nov. 30. — Six hundred prisoners, seven guns and many wounded fell into Russian hands in yesterday's fighting to the west of Lowicz, where the Russians took ten miles of German trenches between Glovno and Sobota, according to information received today through trustworthy sources.

Glovno is 16 miles northeast of Lodz, and Sobota is twelve miles north of Glovno. The occupation of Glovno, Bielavy and Sobota straightens and strengthens the Russian right wing, which already is said to have widely outflanked the German left, bringing the Russian right from 20 to 25 miles in its advance on Strykow, where the battle now is raging, and puts the German centre under an attack from Glovno and Lodz.

Military experts are of the opinion that the German position around Lodz today is far more critical than it was during the initial reverses around Warsaw a month ago. They point out that the German army is one hundred miles from Thorn, its base, and the fact that the occupation of its present position was so precipitate indicates that the line of retreat was not well organized.

FOE CANNOT OCCUPY PREPARED POSITIONS.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 30. — The Army Messenger's correspondent says that fighting on the Prussian frontier is turning advantageously for our side. Our cavalry has dispersed the enemy, who is retreating, abandoning his munitions of war. Our energetic pursuit prevents the Germans from occupying their prepared positions.

The Army Messenger's correspondent in Galicia says: "We continue to push the Austrian army in the direction of Cracow, and several of our contingents are already abreast of that city."

FRENCH OFFICIAL

PARIS, Nov. 30. — (Afternoon official Communication.)— In Belgium the enemy is remaining on the defensive. Artillery fire has ben feeble and we have made progress at certain points. In the vicinity of Fay we held securely positions we occupied on November 28th.

In the region of Soissons there has been an intermittent artillery fire directed against the town. There has been a heavy fog on the heights of the Meuse.

In the Woevre district the enemy bombarded the forest of Apremont without result.

There is nothing to report in the Vosges.

CASUALTIES IN AUSTRIAN ARMY

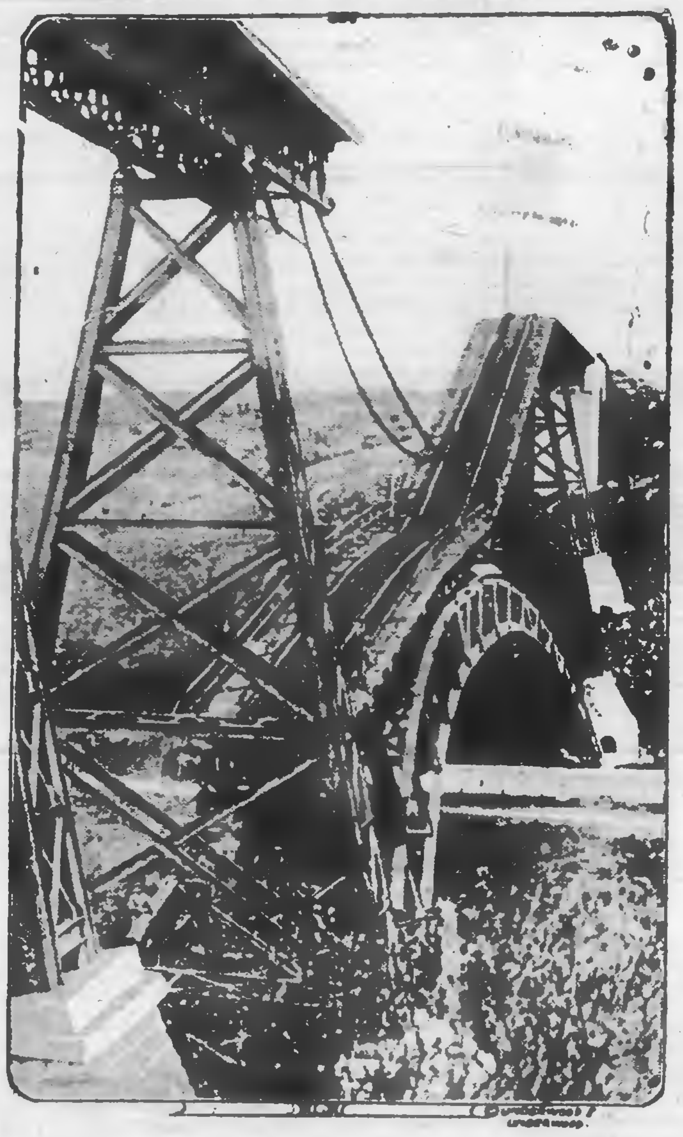
PETROGRAD, Nov. 30. — On the basis of reports received here today from Hungary it is calculated that the casualties of the Austrian army since the beginning of the war amount to nineteen thousand officers and nine hundred thousand men.

MAY BRING SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE TO THIS CITY

With new ideas and good resolutions, the twenty-three boys who went to the Sunday school conference in Belleville, arrived back today, firmly resolved to put some into practice at home. Mr. Garnet Galley, boys' secretary at the "Y," chaperoned the boys on the trip, and said that Peterboro's "yell" enlivened proceedings during the convention more than any other. One idea brought back is to award a badge or bar for standard efficiency; in other words, a boy excelling in athletics, bible study, teaching or debating, etc., will be presented with a prize as a reward.

Mr. Galley has strong hopes of swinging next year's conference to Peterboro, a cordial invitation having been extended. Before the conference broke up, 500 delegates partook of a grand banquet, at which rousing speeches were delivered.

J. L. Alexander, superintendent of the International Sunday School Association, was the principal conference speaker.



To retard the progress of the Russians the Austrians destroyed this magnificent bridge in Poland during the recent fighting when the Czar's forces drove the Austrians before them.

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD WILL APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL

Not Satisfied With Ruling of Judge Lennox, in Regard to Rule 17

Ottawa, Nov. 30. — The French members of the Ottawa Separate School Board intend to take their case to the Privy Council. Judge Lennox declares regulation 17 to be intra vires, said Dr. A. A. Freeland, one of the leaders of the French section. "This judgment will be appealed and go to the Privy Council. The latter part of the judgment referring to the dismissal of the teachers is already under appeal, Judge Meredith having postponed its consideration until after judgment on the original injunction.

"The Government has placed regulation 17 on the statute book to please the Orangemen. It is endeavoring to please the French by promising that it will not be enforced if they will keep quiet. This is a position unjust to both parties. We are determined that if the Government cannot enforce it it must be withdrawn, and we will try every means to prevent its enforcement."

DIED AFTER TAKING DRIVE

Thomas Fitzgerald of Douro Passes Suddenly

Half an hour after returning from a drive yesterday, Thomas Fitzgerald of Douro was taken ill and died. Heart trouble was supposed to have been the cause. He was in his 64th year and was unmarried. Born in Ireland, he came to this country early in life and had been a resident of Douro most of the time. He lived with his sister, Mary Fitzgerald, and one brother, Patrick.

The funeral will proceed to St. Joseph's Church, Douro, tomorrow, at 9.30 a.m., thence to St. Joseph's cemetery.

OFFICIAL REPORTS IN BERLIN DO NOT GIVE THE TRUE SITUATION

General Staff and Kaiser Connive to Allay Apprehension in the Capital --- People Have no Knowledge of the Russian Victories

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 30. — The Daily News' correspondent at Copenhagen says that the German General Staff, with the connivance of the Kaiser, are endeavoring to allay the rapidly-growing apprehension in Berlin by ingeniously mixing up the official reports. Events which the people are at present acclaiming happened more than a week ago, and they have no knowledge of the Russian victories which have happened since.

SIEGE OF CRACOW HAS BEGUN.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — A despatch from a correspondent with the Russian army says that the siege of Cracow has begun. Russians are bombarding forts with their heavy artillery, and one suburb is said to be on fire.

WET CANTEEN TO STAY AT CANADIAN CAMP

Government Says Present Plan at Salisbury Has Worked Well.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—In reply to representations that have been made to the Government regarding the "wet canteen," established in the Canadian camp on Salisbury Plain, an official statement last night said that, while any suggestions from the Canadian Government would no doubt be carefully considered, even though the camp is under the direct control of the War Office, the present arrangement seems the wisest one under the circumstance.

The statement says: "According to official information the complete abolition of the "wet canteen," so-called, resulted in excesses and disorders among a few of the men when they obtained leave of absence, and resorted to neighboring towns and villages, where the opportunity to purchase liquor presented itself.

"After careful consideration, Gen. Alderson determined that it would be better to have a regulated wet canteen, at which beer might be sold at certain hours and under careful supervision.

"The Government is assured by the War Office that the trouble in the neighboring villages, which occasioned much concern at first, has practically ceased since the opening of these regulated and supervised canteens."

A GOLD PIECE FOR TEACHER

Bible Class Makes Presentation to F. A. Conners

Rev. F. A. Conners, pastor of Park Street Baptist Church was presented with a $10 gold piece yesterday afternoon by his Bible class of young men. It was accompanied by an address, read by Mr. George Campbell. Rev. Mr. Conners was shown how solidly he stood in the friendship and esteem of his young men, whom he has taught since he assumed charge of the church. He replied to the good wishes of the class in a few appropriate words, expressing the pleasure it gave him to have ministered in some slight degree to their spiritual needs.

MAGISTRATE HAS YET TO LEARN

Fails to Grasp the Strange Language Heard at Police Court

A POOL ROOM SCRAP

Isaac Dormer Prefers Prison Farm to Hillside Villa

"My, what a strange language that is," remarked the Police Magistrate today. He was questioning a witness in a pool-room brawl and desired him to repeat some conversation that had been exchanged between the combatants.

"Don't be afraid," he urged; "we're not squeamish here."

"Well, but there's a lady over there," said the thoughtful witness, nodding towards Mrs. McElhiney, who withdrew.

Witness repeated the words, but His Worship couldn't catch the drift, so passed it up.

"It's just as well your Worship didn't hear what he said," said Mr. Wearing.

The case was the usual pool-room kind of scrap in which a young man named Martin charged John Dougherty with pummelling him. After sifting considerable evidence, His Worship decided that both parties were equally in the wrong and threw the case out.

He Preferred Guelph.

"Would you make it the Guelph Farm?" timidly asked Isaac Dormer, vagrant, sentenced to six months on the hill. Dormer's plea didn't reach the Magistrate's ear. Dormer fell asleep last night in the power house. Evidence showed that he liked the idle life best, and was on bad terms with work of any kind.

Back From Kingston.

"I've just come back from the soldiers at Kingston," said William Fallon, charged with being drunk while blacklisted. He secured his liquor, so he said, from Frank Burke, on Saturday afternoon. A $10 fine was levied, while a second charge of disorderly conduct was dismissed. His Worship advised Fallon to go away in the dark for half an hour and take an inventory of himself. He might then decide to cut out the booze. Fallon promised.

ASSESSMENT APPEALS.

The appeals against the decisions of the Court of Revision in regard to the assessment of properties on George Street will be heard by Judge Huycke on Wednesday. The hour will be announced later.

Training Has Wrought Many Changes on Peterboro Boys at Salisbury Plain

SOME PROMOTIONS

One of the Peterborough volunteers at Salisbury Plain sends the following letter under date of November 14:—

We have been busy preparing for the final series with the Sausage Boys. Mud! Good Heavens! we have been sleeping and eating in a foot of English mud since our arrival here. The camp parade is one huge slippery mud hole. Outside of that Salisbury Plain presents possibilities unheard of for training troops. We certainly have no reason to grouch. One important feature of the camp is the cheerfulness the men show, in spite of the inclement weather. The popular cure for wet feet and soaked clothing is: "Well, that's the kind of fellows we are." Just imagine some of them crawling out of their blankets at six o'clock these cold, dark, damp mornings, with the ground covered with frost and frozen hard. Well, they are doing it, and thinking in the meantime of what they would be doing if in old Canada. This last week or so the cold in the mornings has almost equalled that of Canada, owing to the dampness. After thirty minutes' physical exercise we hurriedly indulge in our breakfast of tea, jam, bread and cold meat. We've been eating this grub ever since we opened camp here. By the time we finish our ablutions—for it's very seldom one has the courage to break ice without some grub—and the tent is fixed up, we fall in for the morning parade, dismissing at 11.30, and parading again at 2.30 until retreat at 4.30, with a few night manoeuvres. Of couse our training now is the final touch, thank goodness. Yesterday we received a bunch of Peterboro papers, and certainly had a pleasant time perusing the same. By the way, Charlie Hastings of the Examiner is here with the Strathcona Horse. I met him a couple of weeks ago and was rather surprised to see him, as when we left Canada he was with the Cobourg Battery in British Columbia. "Bab" Kendry, the famous old Strathcona shortstop, is still showing the old pep, and will likely bat .1000 when he hits the trenches. Bill Alphick, formerly of the Toronto Bank staff, is famous for his cooking ability, generally assisting in this capacity on Sundays. Bill Gibson, whose reputation for horsemanship has already reached town, is the former's able assistant. Bill refuses to ride anything but a donkey hereafter, owing to, well, several reasons. Speaking of real work, Jimmie English has assumed charge of the Pioneer Brigade, and is some general, at that. "Quicksilver" Minorgan, the Bankers' speedy shortstop, is the company's press agent. "Golden Hair" is responsible for detecting all false information regarding the whereabouts of a good bed and good grub.

Induced Reserves to Sign With New League

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Art Ross, captain of the Wanderers hockey team, has been expelled from the National Hockey Association by Manager Quinn for having induced men on the reserve list of the National Hockey Association to sign with a proposed new hockey league which never materialised.

This is equivalent to his expulsion from organized hockey.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

THE COMMITTEES in charge of this fund are busily engaged in their preparations for a whirlwind campaign to raise a good substantial fund for patriotic purposes. It is the duty of all who can afford to give to this fund to do so, not as a casual subscription giver, but in an amount that involves some sacrifice. A few have tried to shelve the question by saying the dependents of volunteers are well enough provided for, but actually their condition is not in accordance with that statement. Even suppose they did receive a little more than their needs were considered to necessitate, how many would be willing to sacrifice the life of some member of the family for what those left by the volunteers receive? Those who are left behind by volunteers who may never return, should be not only provided for, but well provided for. This city has not done yet what it can, and in a few days a call will be made to its patriotic devotion that, we trust, will be responded to in a manner worthy its dignity and importance.

THE TESTIMONY OF EXPERIENCE.

ADVERTISING is an essential part of successful, progressive business. Without advertising, many a business can, however, carry itself along like the corner store, but they seldom, if ever, become anything more than a "little old corner store." Every now and then there is made public a testimony to the power of advertising that is weighty and convincing because it is based on the successful results of a long experience. The A. & F. Pears Co. was one we drew attention to a short time ago. Now, the Literary Digest says:

> "Every intelligent man knows that advertising is the life-blood of any business, and with all modesty, we admit that legitimate and judicious advertising has always been our custom, and has been, in fact, a potent factor in achieving any commercial success which we may now enjoy."

Of course, there are various kinds of advertising. Of this we will not speak here, but as to the power of the press, the newspapers of Canada, the advertising campaign of the Literary Digest in Canadian newspapers is a witness. That paper felt injured by certain pro-German allegations in a few Canadian newspapers as to its editorial policy, and seeks to combat at once the bad effects of such allegations by denying them publicly in the press. Cause and result in this case form a true testimony to the power of newspapers as advertising mediums.

WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED.

THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH from La Patrie is suggestive of what public bodies can do to relieve unemployment throughout the whole country by attending to the needs of their own individual localities:

> "If the city of Montreal would undertake road works and construction during the winter, it would be able to assure to all the unemployed of the city (not of the whole country) work which would permit them to make ends meet."

The township council of North Monaghan is to be commended for the step it has taken, along with other municipal bodies, in proceeding with improvements, such as highways, streets, or sewers. When employment is so scarce, it is not only proper, but the duty of municipal authorities to provide as much work as possible. It may not be possible to maintain as high a rate of wages as was formerly maintained in prosperous times, when there was no difficulty in procuring money for public improvements at 4½ per cent. to 5 per cent., but now, when municipal bonds have to bear 6 per cent. and 6½ per cent. to get buyers, and sometimes fail to sell at that, the same advantages as of yore cannot be expected. What is important is that work be provided for those that want to work, and everybody can be assured that the rate of wages will be as high as the state of the country will permit. If a municipal corporation can see its way to pay the same wages as it did when money was cheaper, it should do so, but, at all odds, let there be work for the workers.

A NEW USE FOR TITLES.

A NUMBER of people in Peterborough will recall a movement in the House of Commons last session to abolish titles. The war has brought out a new use for titles which may be of considerable benefit. The London Chronicle has a paragraph on the subject:

> "Mr. Cunninghame Graham's suggestion that a tax should be levied on hereditary titles has already been adopted in Spain, where the privilege of being a duke costs £1,200, and other grades of the nobility pay in proportion to their grade. Each separate title is taxed, so that it has become customary for members of old families who have accumulated a number of titles to abandon some of these sooner than pay for them. Titles do not fall extinct so easily in Spain as in other countries, for Spanish women transmit their titles not only to their children, but to their husbands, and thus a plebeian on marrying a duchess becomes a duke"

SEVEN YEARS PENAL SERVITUDE.

THERE HAVE BEEN some charges against a few persons in Canada of treasonable conduct, such as assisting enemy reservists to get to their own country to fight against our forces. In view of these charges, it is well to note what is being done in England with those who are found guilty of treasonable conduct. One English paper says that the sentence of seven years' penal servitude passed by Mr. Justice Coleridge upon Karl Gustav Ernst recently is none too severe. This man pleaded in his defence that he was an Englishman. That does not take from, but adds to the weight of his offence. For years he had acted in England as a go-between in the pay of the German spy bureau. Fortunately the authorities knew what was going on, and all his correspondence was under close supervision. By the opening of his letters several spies have been brought to book, and the police probably found it paid better to let the man have his rope, and to take their own opportunity for bringing him to book. Ernst was a poor, mercenary creature, who imagined he was taking little risk in betraying his country. He arouses none of the sympathy which is extorted by the spy who takes his life in his hand because he believes he can do his own country a service. Ernst is well punished, and deserves every year of his sentence.

For a good many years there have been no trials for treason in Canada. In fact, in the whole history of Canada they have been few and far between. The War of 1812, the Rebellion of 1837, the Reil Rebellion in 1885, were the outstanding instances that gave cause to trials for treason, in all of which the death penalty was given and carried out. At the present time, if people persist in treasonable conduct, they must expect to receive the extreme sentence of the law. War is the most serious and uncertain state in which a country can be, and violations of the measures and regulations taken for its safety justly require the heaviest penalties for their infraction.

My Land.

(By Thomas Osborne Davis.)

She is a rich and rare land;
Oh! she's a fresh and fair land,
She is a dear and rare land—
This native land of mine.

No men than hers are braver—
Her women's hearts ne'er waver;
I'd freely die to save her,
And think my lot divine.

She's not a dull or cold land,
No! She's a warm and bold land;
Oh! she's a true and old land—
This native land of mine.

Could beauty ever guard her,
And virtue still reward her,
No foe would cross her border—
No friend within it pine.

Oh! she's a fresh and fair land,
Oh! she's a true and rare land!
Yes, she's a rare and fair land—
This native land of mine.

At Valcartier.

(Beck's Weekly, Montreal.)

During a sham fight at Valcartier, an English soldier, well known as a musician and for his unusual politeness, was badly let in. He had been stalking a stalwart Scotchman for some time who was in the ranks of the enemy for the time being. Waiting until he was separated from his companions and, as he thought, at a disadvantage, the Englishman suddenly appeared before him with the remark:

"Excuse me, are you not one of the enemy?"

"Yes," said the Scotchman, as he relieved the unwary Sassenach of his rifle and his lunch.

A Test of Sobriety.

(Kincardine Review.)

When a man may be considered drunk is a point often argued in court, but if any one can recite this short poem articulately we are willing to vouch for his sobriety:

Sister Susie's sewing shirts for soldiers—
Such skill at sewing shirts our shy young sister Susie shows!
Some soldiers send epistles—say they'd rather sleep on thistles
Than the saucy soft shirts for soldiers sister Susie sews.

Turkey's Crime.

The fortunate truth is that it is one thing to proclaim a holy war and altogether another thing to rouse Islam today to the requisite pitch of fanatical insanity. If, however, the call should go out from the walls and command of the muezzin be obeyed, civilization would be called upon to protect itself against the greatest danger it has faced since the decisive struggle at Chalons.

SOUND ADVICE TO MANUFACTURERS

Protect Interest of Employes --Best Quality and Workmanship in War Supplies.

A few weeks ago the General Secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association addressed an open letter to all the members urging them to make every sacrifice to protect the interests of those dependent on them for a livelihood. Owing chiefly to the war, but also to other causes it is probable that the coming winter will see considerable distress by reason of unemployment. In fulfilling their responsibilities under the unusual conditions that prevail, two courses are recommended to manufacturers in the circular in question.

Employment

"On the principle that half a loaf is better than none try as far as possible to keep all your staff working part time rather than a partial staff working full time. Next remember that business which under normal conditions you would forego, because it promised either no profit at all or an insufficient profit, is business which under existing conditions you should accept because of the wages it will enable you to pay to those who might otherwise go hungry. Use every effort to keep the wheels turning. Lose no business in competition with an importer until you have exhausted every effort to beat him. If need be, take your workmen into your confidence. Your interests are their interests, and they may be found willing to help in ways you would not suppose.

Dependents

"The dependents of those who have gone to the front will in most cases be provided for out of the Patriotic Funds now in process of collection. See to it that none whom your employes have left behind are in present want. Report their cases to the local directors of the fund, and if you are caring for them personally, report that fact too. The families of men on active service, who are receiving full or partial pay from you should not be charges upon the fund to the same extent as those not similarly provided for. Besides that, anything you may do in this direction should rank as a contribution to the fund, and will no doubt be so regarded."

Canada First

Another paragraph appeals to the manufacturers to be consistent in their "Made-in-Canada" policy. Manufacturers are urged to make Canada, as far as possible, self-sustaining, and with this end in view to buy all their supplies for manufacturing in Canada from Canadian producers, and failing that, within the Empire.

"The small saving on manufacturing cost that might in some cases be effected by importing from a neutral country will be an insignificant sacrifice compared to the good you will do by ensuring employment for Canadian or British bread winners. The consumer in Canada will no doubt act in sympathy; he will buy your goods in preference to goods that are imported. The press is constantly reminding him of his duty and he is patriotic enough to respond. All that is expected of you is that you will be consistent, and as the larger buyer set the example."

Give Full Value

Many manufacturers have been called on to supply war materials to the Government. In this connection the Association asks its members to remember always that the highest quality of material and workmanship is none too good. If our soldiers are to be shod with shoes of your making, see to it that they are good shoes, for a footsore fighter is a poor fighter. Forget too that a Government order is an opportunity for an additional profit. Canada's battle is your battle, and you can assist her in no surer way than by seeing that she receives full value for every cent of money she pays you.

DEHORNING CATTLE

The cruelty connected with cutting off the horns of cattle is the more to be condemned because it is wholly unnecessary. The time to take off the horns is before there are any horns to take off.

Many have an exaggerated notion of the trouble involved in stopping the growth of the horn. Take the calf anywhere under two weeks of age, preferably from three to eight days old, moisten the finger in a cup of water and wet well the hair about the little nub where the horn is to start, then rub with a pencil of caustic potash till the place looks quite red. That is all that is necessary. There is no need of clipping off the hair, and to rub till blood comes is wholly needless.

"Made in Calgary"

A few weeks ago there was inaugurated in Calgary probably the most important campaign that city has yet undertaken. In brief, Calgary's best organizers united in a huge effort to promote prosperity and create employment in their own city by making every Calgary citizen realize that a dollar spent in his own city would do more to help Calgary and Calgarians than a dollar sent away from Calgary.

In commenting on the campaign the Calgary "News-Telegram" offers the following timely suggestions:

"Let us all boost for Made-in-Calgary products, and let those of us who are willing to pledge ourselves to give the preference to Made-in-Calgary products, when buying, wear a Made-in-Calgary button that will indicate to all the world that we are active members of an aggressive Made-in-Calgary society. The News-Telegram believes that this simple device will be a means to both advertise the campaign and to develop a feeling of loyalty to home products; also to keep our good intentions before our eyes so that they can by no chance be overlooked.

"It is also suggested that a house-to-house canvass be made and signatures to a Made-in-Calgary pledge secured. After all, it is our wives, our mothers and our daughters who do the major portion of our household buying, and if we can enlist their support, the rest will be easy, for they will simply force the retailers to handle the goods they want, and, contrary to a too-general opinion, the women are not easy marks when it comes to buying, as witness this Consumers' league of ours.

"Again, let us secure the pledges of the retailers that they will patronize home industries, and that they will feature and advertise Calgary-made goods.

"Let us have a permanent Made-in-Calgary exhibit that will serve to educate the purchasing public.

"Let us have a Made-in-Calgary week, with Calgary-made goods exhibited exclusively by the merchants."

The letter also deals with the question of advertising, which is, of course, essential if the movement is to be of permanent value.

What is good in Calgary is good in every other Western city and town. If you have not had a "Made-in-your-own-town" campaign, coupled up with the broader "Made-in-Canada" idea begin now to organize one. The money spent over the counters of your local merchants will do more for your own town than a dollar sent abroad, and what is most valuable of all, a dollar spent for a product manufactured in your own town will create work for your own people, who will, in turn, spend their money in your own town. Thus you will create an endless chain of influences favorable to increased activity and prosperity in your own community.

Not all your requirements can be filled by products made in your own town, and where you have to go outside of these limits remember the products of your nearest neighbor, and lastly do not send your money outside of Canada until you have exhausted every source of supply within the Dominion.

Long ago silence was said to be golden, and since phonographs, player pianos and honk wagons came in it is rarer than ever.

The ancients represented Victory as a winged goddess probably because of her little way of flying back and forth between the opposing lines.

A GREAT SERVICE

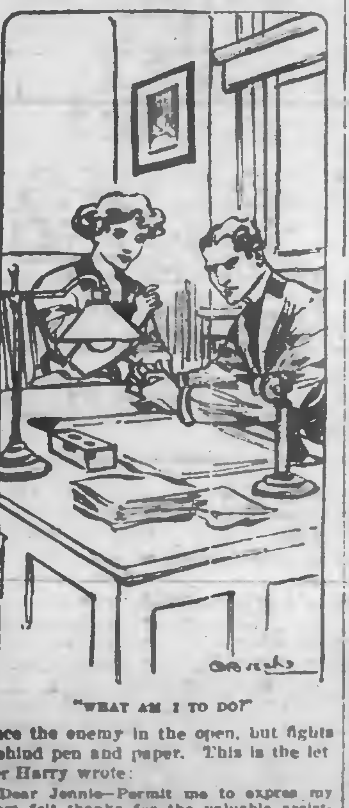
It Was Rendered b a Typist

By F. A. MITCHEL

Harry Beale and Jennie MacArthur had the same advantage as to education—that is, they both went to the same public school. Harry was a poor scholar, and Jenny was a good one. Harry would be out with the boys, playing marbles for keeps or plugging tops, winning all the marbles and the tops, while Jennie was getting her lessons and Harry's too. She wrote his compositions for him, made his grammar diagrams—indeed filled the gap of his deficiencies so far as those deficiencies could be filled by another.

In this way she dragged her boy lover through the grammar school. He was considered by his teachers weak in spots, they not knowing that the spots were parts of his school work in which Jennie could not do for him. The two children went to the high school together, and there it was the same, only, the work being more difficult, Jennie failed to get him on as before, and he had a harder time of it every year till the fourth and last, when his record was so bad that it was decided by his parents to take him out of school.

By this time both he and his sweetheart had outgrown childhood, and something of formality had come between them. On dropping out of school Harry considered that it behooved him to thank his coach for the assistance she had given him, but how to do this was a question. He was neither apt as a speaker nor as a writer. He chose the latter course, however, because he shrank from the ordeal. Many a letter makes a breach wider because the writer has not the courage to stand up and face the enemy in the open, but fights behind pen and paper. This is the letter Harry wrote:



"WHAT AM I TO DO?"

> Dear Jennie—Permit me to expres my hart felt thanks for the valuable assistance you have so long given me in my studys. I am confident that had all the work been written exersises you could have pulled me threw. It was the orals that downed me. I am going to work. If you could have got me a diploma I mite have been a lawyer or a doctor or something of that sort. As it is I can only grub in the durt. Eny way I shall try to make monny so I may some day be of benefit to you. Yours sinserely,
>
> HENRY BEALE.

Jennie's eyes moistened on reading this letter. She had hoped for Harry's sake that she might pull him along far enough to get him into college and that there he might scrape through by himself. Now, as he had put it, he must grub in the dirt. She put his letter in a little Japanese box some one had given her for Christmas and went about her own work with her usual steadiness of purpose.

Having graduated at the high school, Jennie, being expected to make her own living, entered upon a career of teaching. She could not afford to go to college, but while she taught the lower grades prepared herself by home study for the higher ones. Being naturally bright, she made good progress and, being gifted in imparting knowledge, advanced steadily. Nevertheless the pay of most teachers is not great, and $600 is as high a salary as Jennie ever received.

Harry obtained a position in a feed store, with the prospect of lifting bags, thereby getting his clothes covered with a white dust instead of wearing the neat apparel of a doctor or a lawyer. One day Jennie went past the store where he was employed and, seeing him roll a barrel across the floor, sighed at the failure of her efforts to lift him to something better. But Harry, if not gifted to learn from books, had a natural faculty for making a bargain. As a boy he had a faculty, as has been mentioned, for gathering unto himself all the tops and marbles of the other boys, and as a youth he continued to show the same trait in making a profit out of everything he touched. He soon left the feed store and bought out with a handful of cash and a bushel of credit a business for himself. But before he had got settled down to it he sold it at a profit and bought something else. Every one said: "Harry Beale will never get on in the world. He is a rolling stone and will gather no moss." At one time he would be a contractor, at another a farmer, though he never kept a farm long enough to prove that he knew anything about farming.

He did not forget the sweetheart of his school days, but it seemed to him that one of such inferior intellectual capacity as himself should not aspire to a woman so far above him in brain power. Or rather it occurred to him that, he and Jennie having passed out of childhood, this difference in them would separate them farther and farther as they grew older. A woman, he argued, must look up to her husband; the moment she looks down upon him she ceases to love him.

But Henry Beale is not the first person who has attempted to analyze the female human heart to find that it is not to be analyzed. At any rate, there is a multitude of exceptions to all rules that can be laid down concerning it.

Miss MacArthur continued to teach on a salary that was no more than she required to live on. She had no especial faculty for making a dollar serve for two—indeed, it was all she could do to make it serve for one. Though she possessed high intellectual capacity, the demand for it was not great. She lived in a small place where only mediocrity was required. What use therefore were her attainments?

Meanwhile Henry Beale, engaged in groveling pursuits, was extending them. His bank account was all the while growing and his operations all the while enlarging. He was not quite thirty years old when he had a small army of employees about him. He did not need to send out misspelled letters, for he had a dozen typists at his command, any one of whom could put in excellent English whatever he chose to say, and, being systematic, he had made Webster's Dictionary the rule of his office. He had no occasion to regret not having learned to spell, for he could hire spellers for a song. When he wrote his communications, instead of dictating them he felt sure that "business" would not be spelled "bizness" or "excellent "exselent."

One day Beale met a friend of his old sweetheart, who told him that Jennie was wearing herself out teaching. Harry wondered if she would not in her poverty consider such a stupid man as himself for a husband. Unfortunately his old distaste for facing a superior intellectual being again stood in his way. He could not write the English language or spell any better than he had done a dozen years before. If he proposed to his old sweetheart he must either do so verbally or by means of a dictated letter, for he had never had time to learn to use a typewriter himself, and if he had had time it would not have helped his spelling. Since he could not muster courage to propose to one he considered so far above him he was forced to use the latter plan. He wrote out his proposal—it seemed altogether too sacred to dictate—and gave it to a typist to put in proper shape on paper.

Miss MacArthur received a beautifully printed document from her schoolboy lover declaring that his love was as strong as ever; that he was aware he was her inferior and if she married him she would look down upon him; that he wished to serve her, and the only condition under which he could do so was as her husband. Would she marry him? Not a word was spelled incorrectly; not a sentence was bungled.

The day after this letter was sent Mr. Beale called his typist into his office. She carried her implements with her, supposing she was to take down a dictation. On entering she saw at once that her chief had received a setback of some sort. He handed her a letter from Jennie MacArthur addressed to him stating that she had no reply to make to a typewritten letter on such a subject as a proposition of marriage.

"What do you think of that?" he said woefully.

"I think that it is a very proper statement of the case."

"What am I to do?"

"If I were you, Mr. Beale, I would send the letter you gave me to put in type."

"Corrected by you?"

"Corrected by no one."

Mr. Beale groaned. "And that is your advice?" he said.

"It is. If this lady will accept you she will accept you as you are and not as what you are not."

"But her reply shows how she regards me. She will decline my proposition."

"She will not."

"Why do you say that so confidently?"

"Because her reply indicates that what is between you and her is too sacred to be transmitted by a third person. Had she intended to decline your proposition she would doubtless have not been particular about who wrote it."

"Very well, Miss Morton; please send her the original letter."

The letter was sent and a reply was received written on the back of the letter Beale had written his sweetheart when he left school. Miss MacArthur began by saying that she had treasured his letter for a dozen years as the nearest to her heart of anything she possessed. His proposition was accepted, and it was evident from the tone of the reply that the hand bestowed was accompanied by the heart.

On the receipt of this epistle Mr. Beale called his typist into his office and handed her a check for $1,000. Astonished, the lady asked what it was for.

"For the greatest service you have ever done me," was the reply.

DIET AND DIGESTION.

Length of Time Different Foods Remain In the Stomach.

Few people could make an accurate guess as to the length of time different foods remain in the stomach. The popular ideas as to what are the most digestible foods are all wrong, or nearly so. In eating chicken, for instance, one imagines that he is sure of a rapid digestion, and yet chicken meat remains in the stomach, under normal conditions, for four hours. Duck, which is generally supposed to be much more difficult to digest than chicken, remains for only two hours.

A hard boiled egg lasts for four hours, which is much longer than the average, whereas boiled fish remains for only an hour and a half.

It is a very common mistake to suppose that well boiled beef is very easily digested, while as a matter of fact it remains in the stomach for six hours, which is longer than any other common article of food. Tripe, on the other hand, remains for only one hour in the stomach and is one of the easiest of all foods to digest.

A period of one and a half hours is required for apples, celery, cheese and oysters, while twice this time is required by rye bread, onions, sausage or raw milk.—Boston Herald.

Something Suitable.

"When a statesman has something to say, let him say it," said a congressman. "But this continual getting up and talking on every subject under the sun just for the sake of getting one's name in the papers—well, that sort of thing gives statesmanship a bad name.

"A deputation visited a jeweler's.

"'We want to buy a solid silver coffeepot,' the spokesman said.

"'Yes, sir; yes, sir.' And the jeweler rubbed his hands.

"'It's for a senator.'

"'In that case, sir,' said the jeweler, 'you will want something with a long spout.'"—Chicago Herald.

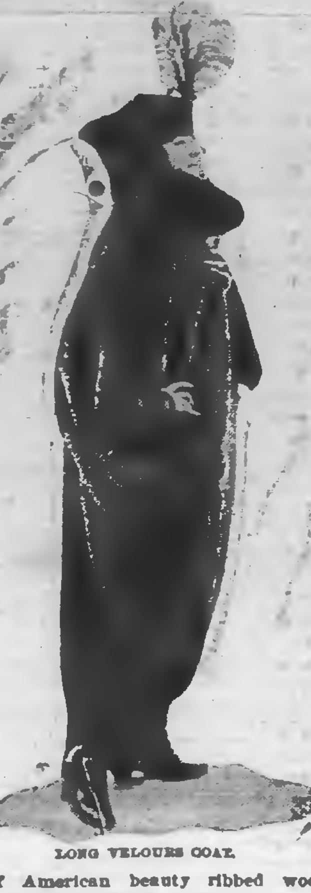
DASHING NEW COAT.

Veloure Model That Is Suitable For Street or Motoring.



LONG VELOURS COAT.

Of American beauty ribbed wool velours is this voluminous wrap. A skunk collar and self covered buttons are applied to it.

Many girls are selecting cape coats for college wear, but the cape coat will not prove as practical and as comfortable as a mannish style of coat built of warm, rough surfaced worsted.

An excellent coat is a model of frieze, cut exactly like a man's topcoat except that the lower edge has a smart ripple flare. Deep cuffs and enormous patch pockets make this coat smart and knowing.

Another good looking campus coat is of black and yellow check woolen fabric with a wide belt around back and sides. Across the double breasted front is stitched a similar belt with extending tabs that button to the loose belt at back and sides. This coat has raglan sleeves gathered into wide cuffs and a flare collar that may be turned up or down.

SCHOOL SHOES.

The College Girl Must Be Well Shod and Supplied With Ample Footwear.

For footwear the college girl will require heavy soled tramping boots of tan calf, two pairs of buttoned boots, one pair having tops of contrasting material in dressy style, one pair of evening slippers to match her evening frock and a pair of smart black pumps for wear on ordinary evenings with the dinner costume.

It is better to provide buttoned boots than pumps for day wear with all costumes, for the little freshman will be apt to dash out of doors in all sorts of weather, perfectly regardless of her foot covering.

Sometimes the uncarpeted floors and the halls of a large school or college building are drafty also, and the buttoned boots offer more protection to the ankles. Besides these items of footwear, the various shoes for athletic sports must be included in the list.

Cossack Coats.

Some of the new models shown from Paris are of the Cossack coat effects, resembling closely in cut those long coats the Russian cavalrymen wear. They are strikingly attractive. Many women are ordering these for walking and riding or shopping and luncheon effects.

A three-quarter walking coat with large fur collar is another model from Paris.

Loofah Mops.

Loofahs make splendid mops for cleaning saucepans or bottles. The rough surface of the loofah is just what one needs to remove obstinate stains, and, being in the form of a mop, one can push it into corners so easily. These mops may be made from any scraps of loofah. Simply stitch the pieces together, tie them firmly to a notched stick, and your mop is made.

HIS IDEA OF CARDS.

A married lady had just acquired a new brougham and a new footman to match.

"John," she said one day, "we will drive out to make a few calls. But I shan't get out of the carriage. You will, therefore, take the cards that are on my dressing table and leave one of them at each house we stop at."

"Very good, ma'am," said John, and he fetched the cards. After the cards had been left at several houses the lady said, "Now we must call on some other people." "We can't, ma'am," was the reply. "I've only the ace of spades and the ten of clubs left."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.—Liverpool cables were 1d lower again today, which caused a weaker opening locally, wheat being ½c to ⅝c lower; oats unchanged and flax ½c higher for November and unchanged for December and May. Liquidation was not resumed this morning, and prices held steady for some time, firming up later on good buying by exporting houses.

Export demand was good at steady prices. Cash demand for all grades of wheat was active and fair offerings. Exporters were the principal buyers. Oats were in better demand, while barley was quiet.

Inspections Friday numbered 719 cars, as against 1343 last year and in sight were 425 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—There was no improvement in the volume of business in grain over the cable today, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers for supplies, and the market in this respect is dull. There is a fair demand from local dealers for coarse grains and sales of some round lots of extra No. 1 feed oats on passage from Fort William were made at 57¼c and No. 1 feed at 56¼c per bushel, c.i.f. Montreal, and in addition to this sales of ten cars of American No. 3 yellow corn were made at 73c per bushel ex-track, while Argentina corn in car lots on spot sold at 83c to 84c per bushel, ex-store. The tone of the market for flour is firm, with a fair amount of business doing for domestic account, but the export trade was quiet. Demand for mill feed is very active and the undertone to the market is stronger, with prices tending towards a higher level. An easy feeling prevails in the market for butter owing to the continued limited demand from outside sources, but there is no actual change in prices as yet to note. Receipts for the week were 3273 packages, as compared with 4351 for the same week last year.

There is a fair enquiry for cheese from over the cable, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight space little business is doing. Receipts for the week, 12,699 boxes, as against 7891 boxes for the like week last year.

Eggs are fairly active and firm. Receipts for the week were 15,630 cases, as compared with 4830 a year ago.

Stocks: Wheat, 2,729,361; corn, 22,113; oats, 1,256,784; barley, 152,688; flax, 139,211; flour, 124,560 sacks.

THE MILITARY INFLUENCE.

Predominates Even In Children's Fall and Winter Fashion.

Military capes, having taken the adult world by storm, have crept insidiously into nursery regions, several fascinating little models being seen lately. A long, circular cape, after the style of a Belgian cloak, is likely to become popular, although for children's wear a coat finished off with a cape is perhaps more practical.

A little Inverness boasts decided claims for recognition, built in some lightweight frieze or homespun, the sleeveless undercoat buttoning from neck to hem and supplemented by an attached cape completed by a smart little collar and revers.

A cape coat that is at one and the same time picturesque and serviceable was seen the other day. It would look well carried out in one of those reversible tweeds—say old rose on one side and russet brown on the other, the rose shade used uppermost.

Changing Floor Coverings.

Rugs and carpets should have been carefully beaten, cleansed, treated with turpentine or camphor and rolled on a wooden pole in the spring. Then, with careful airing and sunning, they will be ready for use in the fall.

The cotton and grass rugs which have been in use all summer may take their place in the attic, first being rolled on the wooden poles made vacant by their predecessors of heavier fabric.

Before laying away furniture covers they should be carefully gone over and mended, and they, too, should have all spots removed.

Fashionable Colors.

Brilliant tango colors in material are not now in good style. The soft, almost dull shades are to be featured for street and evening wear, and the beauty of the costumes is to be centered in the rich trimming with which they are adorned.

ADDRESS AND GIFT OF PURSE TO DEAN McCOLL

Leaves St. Peter's Cathedral to Take Charge of New Church in East City

DEAN McCOLL.

The strong bonds of affection so evident between the laity and clergy of the Catholic Church was more fully exemplified at Vespers at St. Peter's Cathedral last evening when the congregation presented an address and purse of gold to Very Rev. Dean McColl, who after performing the pastoral duties of the cathedral for the past thirteen years assumes the rectorship of the new Church of the Immaculate Conception, to be dedicated next Sunday. The edifice was crowded with parishioners and visitors.

Dr. F. P. McNulty read the following impressive address:—

Very Rev. W. J. McColl,
Dean of Peterborough.

Very Reverend and dear Father:

It is with feelings of the deepest regret and sorrow that we address to you words of farewell upon the occasion of your transference from this cathedral church. So intimately have you become associated and intertwined with the varied interests of the parish and so deeply have you manifested your concern for all that pertains to our religious and social life that your departure comes to each of us as a personal bereavement.

During the thirteen years that you have exercised in so fatherly a way the functions of your priestly office we have come to recognize the intensity of your zeal, the depth of your devotion, the sincerity of your affection and now that these bonds of attachment are about to be severed, a great sorrow stirs our emotions. The sense of reality that surrounds us on this occasion dims for the time the more happy memories of the past. It is on such occasions as this that the notable incidents in a cycle of a life's work, stand out in relief. To enumerate the varied fields in which your energy has manifested itself, fields wherein your individuality is stamped, would be merely to record the results of that spirit of progressiveness, so apparent during your regime as pastor. Your scholarly attainments early directed your thoughts and energies to educational matters and the high state of efficiency of our schools at the present time is due in no small degree to your untiring zeal and unerring judgment. In the erection of churches in the enlargement and embellishment of our charitable institutions wherein the sick, the orphaned and the aged find a place of refuge, in the advancement of the noble cause of total abstinence, in the fostering of all that pertains to athletic and intellectual culture, you have taken an active and energetic part.

As the pastor of the new Church of the Immaculate Conception we wish you every success and our one consolation at your departure from St. Peter's Cathedral is that you will still be near us and that we will be frequently comforted by your genial presence.

"The joys of meeting pay the pangs of absence." We ask of you now to accept this purse of gold as a small token of our affection and esteem.

Signed on behalf of St. Peter's congregation.

The presentation was made by John Corkery, Sr.

It was with difficulty that Dean McColl could put his thanks into expression. He was touched, not only by the gift but by the thoughts expressed in the address. The progress made by the Catholic Church in this city is but evidence of the natural progress of the Catholic Church under normal conditions. The fact that the Catholic Church is a perfect organization means that that church will progress. Peterboro Diocese has been blessed by good, zealous and prudent bishops, the priests having such superiors are willing workers and are performing their duty but there must also be the co-operation of the people. That progress has been made in St. Peter's parish, the speaker remarked, is due to the fact that co-operation was to be found between the clergy and laity.

The fact that churches have been erected or homes provided for the poor, the aged, the sick and the orphaned, is due to the assistance of the people. As to the spiritual side, that is a priest's duty. The fact that schools are made efficient, shows that the Catholic Church endeavors to have the child retain his or her baptismal innocence. It is the duty of all Catholics to preserve the children. That is why the Catholic Church takes the moral training hand in hand with the intellectual training. It is to give the child higher ideals and the parents who do not work with that aim in view are not doing their duty.

Before closing Dean McColl briefly referred to the various societies flourishing in the parish and again placed the reason in the co-operation between the clergy and laity. His concluding remarks were voicing his appreciation of the words of the address and the feeling revealed by the presentation.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien also made a few remarks endorsing the words of the address and remarking how the man or priest should be happy who undertakes new work under such conditions. Bishop O'Brien also spoke of the unity of the clergy and laity and noted how it was to be found only in the Catholic Church. The reason lies in the fact that the priest is as St. Paul said, "An ambassador of Christ." The world often looks on it as a weakness but at the present the same respect for authority is to be found in the armies engaged in Europe. The soldier respects his officer because the officer has authority. How much more should the priest be respected, he having power, not to destroy fellowmen but to build up the world.

Bishop O'Brien also referred to the work of Dean McColl stating how greatly he has assisted him in all undertakings. When he was out of the city on other duties throughout the diocese he knew full well that the city was well taken care of by Dean McColl. The citizens had co-operated with him and Bishop O'Brien hoped that his new parishioners in East City would continue to co-operate with him and if so success would be inevitable.

Vespers was sung by Rev. J. V. McAuley while Rev. Father Phelan, the new rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, and Rev. Father Leonard were present in the sanctuary.

SHORTHAND BLUNDERS

Misplaced or Wrong Vowels Lead to Queer Translations

A volume could be filled with amusing stories of shorthand mistakes, the greater number of them due to mistaken vowels. For instance, "This day is big with fate" was transcribed "This day is big with fat," while "Do not indulge in spite" came out "Do not indulge in spit," and "A house of many gables" was transcribed into "A house of many gabbles."

The use of the wrong vowel may have the most amusing result, as in the phrase "Man, know thyself," which was once converted in the report of a sermon into "Man, gnaw thyself." To misplace a vowel is in shorthand the easiet thing in the world. T. A. Reed, the well known reporter, tells of a pupil who by this means turned "mighty acts" into "mighty cats," and another report of a sermon was spoiled by the advice "Return a blow with an ax," instead of "a kiss."

The "reporting style," in which the vowels are omitted altogether for the sake of rapidity, is responsible for the famous American story of the shorthand clerk who took down a note of his wife's instruction to "be sure to remember to bring home some castile soap" and, as a result, returned home with a tin of oxtail soup!—London Strand Magazine.

No Airs About Her.

"Airs!" exclaimed the proud mother and shook her head vigorously. "My Elsie, for all her learning, hasn't any more airs, so to speak, than her poor old dad."

"Then she won't turn up her nose at her old friends?" queried the visitor.

"La, no!"

"How refreshing! Most girls who go through college nowadays will hardly look at you after they're graduated."

"Well, they ain't like my Elsie, that's all I can say," retorted Elsie's ma. "She's become a carnivorous reader, of course, and she frequently importunates music, but stuck up—my Elsie? Not a bit! She's unanimous to everybody, has a most infantile vocabulary and, what's more, never keeps a caller waiting while she dresses up. No, she just runs down, nom de plume, as she is."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Dainty Speech.

There was one young woman in the box party at the theater who took no part in the noisy clatter and giggle. With her gaze fixed upon the stage she watched the progress of the play, indifferent to the gayety around her except that her delicate, aristocratic, finely chiseled features bore a look of weariness and a scornful smile curled her lips. At last, however, she turned her head slowly and looked at the other members of the party. Then she spoke to the elderly matron sitting by her side. "That chicken in the blue kimono," she said, "thinks she is the whole custard!"—Argonaut.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON TALKS ON PROTECTION

At St. Paul's Bible Class, where they are now considering the ethics of Christian citizenship and contrasting the laws of today with those of Moses and with those outlined in the scriptures generally, Mr. Burnham, M.P., proceeded with his address yesterday. Questions arising from his remarks of the previous Sunday were put and answered. The future of Oriental and foreign cheaper competition engaged the attention of the class. The questions asked contained the statement that if it was true as alleged that foreign cheap labour was a danger how is it that it has not been so in the past and is not the fact that it is inefficient the real reason that is cheap and unable to compete with western labour? Mr. Burnham replied that the east was just awakening from its long sleep of prejudice against the west and its chains of caste. The west which had only recently developed itself, the U. S. wholly since the Civil war and Germany since 1865, had by virtue of enterprise and capital acquired a long lead but China had begun to ship the finest steel rails made to the U. S. paying the high tariff and making a handsome profit. The writers on eastern peoples, the missionaries and travellers without exception praised the newly awakened intelligence and enterprise of the east and prophesied that as the only lack was capital when it arrived the east would rival the west. The magnificent opportunities there and the new readiness to admit foreigners (heretofore an impossibility) was attracting capital. There were already arising immense factories in both India and China. Those who refused to see a menace to highly-paid western labour and the comfort and civilization of the masses of the western peoples would wake up to it before long. In western Canada and the U. S. unrestricted immigration aroused the intense hostility of the people. Why? Because the foreigners worked for low wages, were capable and clever and displaced Canadian and American labour. As it was with foreign cheap labour so is it with foreign labour's goods. They would swamp the Canadian and the U. S. market if not held back. The whole centre of gravity in the manufacturing and producing world might now with the awakening of the east and the advent of capital, be changed. Now too when properly trained and led eastern troops are second to none, as shown at the allies' battle front, the east may strive for a complete independence of the denomination and control of western powers. They have the labour. We have the capital. Put them both together either in the west by immigration or in the east by the introduction of capital and where will the masses of the western world be in a quarter of a century? The brotherhood of man he said meant not intellectual equality but kind treatment.

PLEASURES OF READING

For the past few weeks the articles appearing under this heading have been devoted to subjects somewhat removed from the well-trodden paths of the ordinary reader. It was necessary that they should be written, however, in order to give as comprehensive a view as possible of what is to be obtained in the Library. This week we can turn to something lighter, which, while not possessing the deeper value of the subjects alluded to, has still a peculiar interest of its own, and not one to be despised by the student or the lover of literary trifles.

Magazines, particularly old magazines, are of the greatest use in reference work, but it is not from this standpoint that we shall regard them in this article. There are, in the Public Library, roughly speaking, about 500 bound volumes of magazines. Some of these bear date as far back as 18[illegible], and it would be hard to overrate the value that attaches to them. Quite at haphazard I have taken a volume from the shelf. It turns out to be a copy of Cassell's magazine, bearing no date, but, judging from the illustrations that adorn its pages, published some time during the early sixties. Let us turn over together its time-stained pages and see if we can come upon anything that will repay our search.

Almost at the commencement of the volume is an article on Mrs. Brownrigg. Now, it would probably puzzle ninety-nine out of a hundred readers to know who Mrs. Brownrigg was, and, even if they did know, to discover the reason for singling her out for notice in an article of this description. Truth to tell, Mrs. Brownrigg was not a very savoury character. She lived in the great epoch that produced Johnson, Goldsmith and half a hundred notabilities in the literary world, but, although Goldsmith somewhere refers to her in one of his recorded conversations, there was nothing of the literary nature about Mrs. Brownrigg. She was in fact a very miserable specimen of a murderess whose specialty was taking little children to nurse and then doing away with them. Having been found guilty on one of these counts, she was condemned to be hanged at Tyburn. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that she was strongly suspected of having made away with fourteen other infants who at various times had ben committed to her charge. That she richly deserved her fate goes without saying, but there were hundreds of others who suffered death in those days for crimes that at the present time would be looked upon as amply expiated by a month's detention in jail, and my reason for referring to Mrs. Brownrigg is to show how very far we have advanced in our ideas of justice and moderation in the last 150 years. The account of this unfortunate woman's journey to Tyburn shows most clearly the crude customs of the time and that it was not without reason that Horace Walpole called the country "a shambles." As regularly as Monday came around there would be a public execution, and on one occasion no less than fifteen souls were launched into eternity in this manner. Men of light and leading, like George Selwyn, the famous wit, delighted in being present at such spectacles, and Boswell records having had a special suit of black made for himself in order to present a decent appearance near the scaffold.

Turning from this gruesome subject in search of something more cheerful, we have only to pass over a few pages till we come to an article on the steam-engine. Here we are brought face to face with some industrial heroes of our school days, Savory, Watt, Calley and Newcomen. The article is worth reading if only for the purpose of refreshing our memories in regard to an invention which has helped mankind forward with such leaps and bounds in the scale of civilization.

Shortly afterwards we reach an article on Woolwich Arsenal, a subject of particular interest at the present time, when we hear and read so much of the great German factory owned by Krupp, who has manufactured such death-dealing weapons for use in the present war. It will startle some of my readers to be told that Woolwich Arsenal also owes its origin to a German. It was a young metal worker by the name of Schalch who, in the year 1706, laid the foundations of what is now one of the greatest arsenals of the world. What is more, he continued as director of the works for fully sixty years, and during his whole management there was not one explosion or accident recorded in connection with the institution.

On one of the pages devoted to "Fugitive Notes" we light upon Sir Henry Wotton's definition of an ambassador—"An honest man appointed to lye abroad for the benefit of his country." This little pleasantry caused Sir Henry the loss of his position, as his monarch, James I., thought it a reflection on himself, seeing that such appointments were in his gift. But it seems particularly applicable at the present time to certain zealous gentlemen doing duty as spokesmen for their country at Washington and elsewhere.

We do not need to linger long meditating on this point, as we can journey on together, and in the course of a very short peregrination we shall light on a note concerning the "Breeches Bible." Strangely enough, it was only a few days ago that a friend of mine informed me that he had seen in the house of a gentleman living in the West a genuine copy of the "Breeches Bible."

Here is what the editor of Cassell's had to say about it: "A person writes to me that he judges that I am a bookworm and would I like to buy a Breeches Bible, because he has one which he would not mind parting with for a £5 note. I daresay not. The value of the volume is somewhere about 30s. As there are many other people in my unknown friend's predicament, and as some are actually saving their suppositious treasure in the vain hope that when the worst comes to the worst it will sell for a good round sum, it may be as well to state that this bible passed through at least a hundred and thirty editions, and that probably each edition consisted of 1,000 copies, so that there is far too large a number in existence to render any single copy extraordinarily valuable."

The Breeches Bible, which was printed in 1560, gained its title owing to a peculiar rendering of Gen. iii. 7.

Eggs For The Officer

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., whose book, "When Valmond Came to Pontiac," is being dramatized, tells a story of how he and a certain British officer managed to secure fresh eggs at a small military post in Egypt. The only other food to be had was tinned roast, so the eggs were an important item of diet. Day after day, however, the eggs were obviously not fresh, and one morning they were simply uneatable.

The officer, who held the power of life and death in the district, was determined to put a stop to this sort of thing, so he ordered the egg merchant to be brought before him. In a short time the merchant arrived, conducted by two sentries.

"Are you the man who sold us those eggs?" demanded the officer.

In fear and trembling the other admitted that he was indeed the man.

"Then open your mouth," commanded the officer, picking up a dish containing two bad eggs.

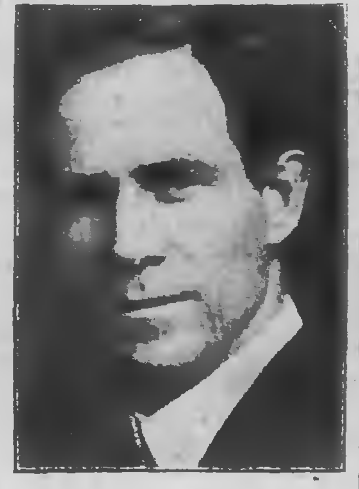
The trembling merchant obeyed, and before he realized what was going to happen to him the officer had slipped one of the evil-smelling eggs into his open mouth.

With horrible grimaces the merchant was forced to swallow it, but his troubles were not ended.

"Now open your mouth again," commanded the officer, and the second egg followed the first.

"After that," says Sir Gilbert, "the officer could always depend on having fresh eggs."

REV. F. A. CONNERS' FINAL MESSAGE AT PARK STREET



REV. F. A. CONNERS.

Used the Same Text as on the Occasion of His First Sermon Less Than Two Years Ago

Using the text, he took for his first sermon as pastor at Park Street Baptist Church, Rev. F. A. Conners, last night, gave his farewell message to a large congregation. He has been pastor at Park Street Church for about two years. He said the scriptural message was important then, and it was just as important in the closing of his work. He was well aware he had not ministered to all with equal satisfaction. It would be a wonder if he had done so. But this was not true, even with the Prince of Peace. He had at all times endeavored to be true to his Master and he intended to be true, regardless of what man might say against him.

Taking the opening verses of the sixth chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Galatians, the preacher said that it was a message and a truth, that we all needed to learn. It showed the practical duty of the Christian. Christianity embraced God, ourselves and our fellowmen.

With these thoughts before the mind of his congregation, Rev. Mr. Conners pointed to the necessity of being practical in our Christianity.

Miss Eva Saunders took the offertory solo.

At the close of the service, Rev. Mr. Conners gave each attendant at the service a cordial hand shake.

This evening, in the church hall, there will be a congregational social, at which clergy and laymen will be present. J. H. Burnham, M.P., will also speak.

The New Life of India

A lecture will be given by the Rev. John Sharrard, M. A., Principal of the Presbyterian College at Indore, Central India, in Knox Church on Tuesday evening, December 1st, at 8 o'clock. The subject of the lecture will be "The New Life of India," and refers particularly to the rapid and surprising development, industrially, of this portion of the East. The lecture is expected to be especially instructive to wage-earners and to all those who take an interest in the religious and industrial progress of India and China. A silver collection will be taken at the door. Everybody welcome.

GERMANY HAS GRASPED FOR THE SHADOW AND LOST THE SUBSTANCE

WHAT IS CANADA'S NEED?

Tingling with the spirit of patriotism, the sermon preached last night by Rev. It. G. Peever contained a message that should be inspiring for Canadians. He claimed that small nations had ever contributed most to the uplift of mankind, and that Canada though only a country of eight millions was capable of great things in the years to come. It was not population that constituted the greatness of a people. It was a nation's soul life, her fixed ideals, her regard for the Sabbath Day, national greatness and permanency sprang from them.

Rev. Mr. Peever took the words found in Mark, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall be given in exchange for his soul." However he altered the text to read "What shall it profit a (nation) to gain the whole world," etc. He used the present struggle with Germany to illustrate his meaning. Across the bleeding body of Belgium the tyrant Germany was rushing its ruthless engines of war. Would the German empire retain its soul. History alone could give the answer to such a question and be able to write whether she would lose her boasted culture and high ideals that make a nation strong.

Turning to Canada he asked "What is our great need in this young land?" Was Canada giving anything in exchange for her soul. Canada, the land of vast dimensions, rich resources of mines, fields, and forests, a land so big that the island of Ireland could be placed in one of the great lakes and the Irish question settled for ever for not a single man could swim ashore. Small nations had ever contributed most to the uplift of the race. Holland, Denmark, Greece, England, and many more were outstanding examples. Ambassador Grant once said, "It is not acreage, population or capital that make a nation great." Capital was needed all right but Canada must not make the mistake of bartering her life for gold. "When the history of Germany comes to be written," said Mr. Peever, "we shall find that Germany has grasped for the shadow and lost the substance of life."

It was for Canadians to make their name stand for something. Scotland for industry and thrift, England for trade and patriotism, Ireland for politicians and policemen. What was the name Canadian to stand for now and in the days to come. Canada should above everything stand for brotherhood, a brotherhood within herself. When that was, Canada would have achieved success.

Before the congregation dismissed everyone joined in heartily and made the church resound with the singing of "O Canada."

MAKE BENEVOLENCE MORE PRACTICAL

Making Balaclava caps, socks and shirts for Canadian soldiers is all very well in its way. Many kind-hearted women in this country have gone into this movement as a matter of patriotism or benevolence. But there are a number of women in Canada who have let the sentimental view of the case crowd out the tremendously practical side of it. Of course, no one pretends that making these articles is not a practical business. It is a thousand times ahead of passing resolutions and engrossing memorials to governments and municipalities.

But once you begin to make benevolence practical, you naturally want to make it as practical as possible. The fact is that there are in Canada hundreds and thousands of expert workers who are able to make these articles for Canadian soldiers. There are factories in Canada which turn these things out as a matter of business. They make them by the most economical modern methods at the lowest possible cost. The time spent by Canadian women in making these things by hand at a high cost could perhaps be devoted to better effect in using their higher talents in raising money for the cause, or in a thousand matters of practical benevolence right at home. The cost of these articles could as easily be paid to Canadian labor which would reduce the present big problem of unemployment and keep Canadian homes comfortable. Instead of society women making these articles, the soldiers' wives and sweethearts can be employed to make them along with hundreds of other unemployed who at a time like this need work.

Let the women of Canada who are concerned about these useful benevolent deeds make them ten times more practically benevolent by seeing what they can do to increase the amount of employment to Canadian women who are out of work and whose employment means the prosperity of Canada.

French women have been offered the right of suffrage if they will allow their sixteen-year-old sons to go to war.

The following lines were written by a lady in Guelph, a niece of Mrs. G. A. Smith of this city:

JIM'S ENLISTMENT.

Up to Guelph's fair city came a farmer lad one day,
Reading "Herald" Bulletin's, he passed the time away;
Learning all the dreadful war news fairly turned his head,
And up to Captain Simpson then he boldly stepped and said:

"It's a long way to where they're fighting
It's a long way to France;
But I'll join the next contingent,
If I only get the chance!
Good-bye Royal City! Farewell St. George's Square,
It's a long way to where they're fighting,
But—I'll be right there!"

II.

Captain Simpson answered, "You're a patriotic lad!
If there were a few more like you I should be right glad,
Off to drill at once you go, and learn to use a gun."
Said Jim, "You bet when I get there, I'll make the Germans run!"
Chorus.

III.

In the ranks that night he dreamt a foremost place he held;
Thousands of the enemy his mighty arm had felled.
He had shot and killed the Kaiser—peace had been proclaimed,
But the breakfast bell awoke him and he suddenly exclaimed—
Chorus.

FOE'S FLEET MUST STAY IN HIDING

Time to Act, not Yet Ripe Says Berlin Naval Expert

LONDON, Nov. 30. — The Daily Telegraph special correspondent at Rotterdam reports:

"Captain Persius, naval critic of The Berliner Tageblatt, in an article on the German naval position, says: Many German hopes at the beginning of the war were built on somewhat fantastic foundations. The British fleet was under-estimated, and it was considered that there was absolutely no reason why Britain should continue to rule the seas. The results had forced Germany in a great measure to withdraw this view. Even the greatest British losses must not be regarded as decisive events, he suggests.

"An English newspaper statement that Britain is satisfied with what her fleet has done proves in a negative way that such complete satisfaction does not exist. He contradicts the claim that there is evidence that German submarines have been more successful than British submarines, but admits that after four months the German scheme for wearing down the British fleet has not yet succeeded. The psychological moment has not yet arrived for the use of German battleships and large cruisers.

"We must be careful," Captain Persius concludes, "not to buoy ourselves up with false estimates about the position of affairs. We must not forget that in spite of the glorious success of our submarines, there has not yet occurred any significant weakening of the sea power of Britain as the result of the war."

VON HINDENBURG GETS DECORATION

Kaiser Awards Him Marshal's Baton for Early Success

BERLIN, Nov. 30. — (Via The Hague to London.)—The field marshal's baton of the present war has been awarded to Gen. von Hindenburg. His chief of staff and collaborator, Gen. von Lunendorg, has been promoted to a lieutenant-generalship for his share in the successes. The award to Von Hindenburg comes with the great eastern battle still undecided, as a reward for the preliminary victories at Wloclawck and Lodz, which, it is said, have thrown the Russians on the defensive with a loss of 60,000 prisoners and 150 guns. It is taken here to indicate that the Emperor has confidence that Von Hindenburg will completely defeat the Russian army.

The honor of receiving the grand cross of the Iron Cross, the emblem given a field marshal, is the highest military distinction a German commander can receive, and was won by Von Hindenburg, as in the cases of the first Von Moltke, Crown Prince Friedrich and the Prussian "Red Prince" Friedrich Karl, on the field of battle.

FRENCH OPTIMISTIC

Armentieres-Ypres Battle Nearly Over Says Field Marshal.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Field Marshal Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British forces in the field, speaks in an optimistic vein concerning the position of the allies in a report issued yesterday by the official bureau. The report covers, in a general way, the activities of the British troops from Nov. 11 to Nov. 20, with extensive reference to fighting preceding these dates.

Summing up the situation in concluding his report, Field Marshal French says:—

"As I close this despatch, signs are in evidence that we are possibly in the last stages of the battle from Ypres to Armentieres. For several days past, the artillery fire of the enemy has slackened considerably, and his infantry attacks have practically ceased.

"The role our armies in the west have been called upon to fill, has been to occupy strong defensive positions, holding ground gained and inviting the enemy's attack, and to throw back these attacks, causing the enemy heavy losses in his retreat and following him up with powerful and successful counter-attacks to complete his discomfiture.

"The value and significance of operations of this nature since the commencement of hostilities by the allies' forces in the west, lie in the fact that at the moment when the eastern provinces of Germany are in imminent danger of being over-run by the numerous and powerful armies of Russia, nearly the whole active army of Germany is tied down to a line of trenches extending from Verdun on the Alsatian frontier to the sea at Nieuport, east of Dunkirk, (a distance of 260 miles) where they are held, with much reduced numbers and impaired morale, by the successful action of our troops in the west."

TURNKEY IS BATTERED TO DEATH BY INDIANS

Jailer William Brown is in a Critical Condition and His Subordinate Dead as the Result of a Brutal Attack.

Peter White Duck and Anthony Jocko, Escape and Are Still at Large.

PEMBROKE, Nov. 30.—Under circumstances of the utmost brutality, Turnkey James Coxford was yesterday evening battered to death in the local jail by two renegade Indians, and his assistant, Jailer William Brown, subjected to a beating that has left him at death's door. The assailants escaped into the open and are at large, while armed posses and volunteer searchers are scouring the countryside for them. At 8.45 an armed party left on a special G. T. R. train for Golden Lake hoping to head off the fugitives from reaching the Indian reserve maintained in that district. The town and surrounding neighborhood are stirred into a fever of excitement, and every available man is being pressed into the search. Feeling runs very high because of the obvious treachery of the attack, and the gruesome nature of the beating administered.

Immediately after the supper hour when the two Indians, Peter White Duck and Anthony Jocko, were being conducted into the cell, and when the turnkey was making affairs comfortable for the night, the two sprang on him from behind. From some unknown source they had acquired a heavy club fashioned from a piece of boarding, and with this they proceeded to beat him to death.

Hearing the noise of the conflict Jailer Brown ran in but by this time Coxford was dead, and the two prisoners sprang at him. Before he could lift a hand he was felled with a blow which fractured his skull. The Indians then dragged the body of the murdered man to a lavatory at the end of the corridor and escaped into the open air.

The only person who saw their escape was a little girl who reported seeing two men running across the fields towards Golden Lake. The alarm was quickly spread and the search began.

White Duck and Jocko were recently remanded on a charge of stealing from G.T.R. freight cars at Golden Lake, and had been in the jail nearly two weeks. To all intents they were harmless men.

The turnkey had no opportunity of defending himself beyond wielding his heavy bunch of keys. Jocko has appeared on a similar charge in the past.

The Pembroke jail is a strong, well-built structure, capable of confining 25 men. At the present time there are a dozen prisoners there.

Since the fugitives are understood to have run in a southerly direction it is feared that they may reach the Golden Lake reserve and persuade some of their friends to conceal them. An armed guard will patrol this place until word of the murderers is received.

Sheriff Morris has assumed charge of operations, and every road from the town is placed under surveillance.

To Winter in Berlin.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 30. — The last word in German mendacity is found in a proclamation which has been placarded in three languages in this city. It runs:

"Paris being infected by cholera, the Kaiser has withdrawn his troops, and has permitted them to winter in Berlin, where they will enjoy the repose they have so nobly earned."

RUSSIA HAS ADVANTAGE

But Great Battle in Northern Poland is Not Ended.

The Germans Are Offering a Stubborn Resistance, Say Petrograd Bulletins, and General Staff Deprecates the Exaggerations of the Past Few Days---Russians Victorious in Carpathians.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—While deprecating the exaggerated reports of Russian successes in the battle in northern Poland, where the German Emperor has joined Field Marshal von Hindenburg to offer his advice and to encourage his troops, the latest available official reports from Russian headquarters state that the advantage in the fighting still lies with the Russian army. It is also officially said that enormous losses have been inflicted on the Germans, but no mention is made of the capture of German divisions, which has been so freely claimed by the Petrograd correspondents of London and Paris papers.

In the battle before Cracow the Russians do claim decisive success. During the last week they took 30,000 Austrian and German prisoners in this region, and a large number of guns. This victory is taken in Petrograd to mean that Cracow will not bar the Russian advance in Silesia from the south, but that, with the Austrian army beaten, it will be necessary only to mask the fortress.

The Russians likewise announce success on the Austrian side of the Carpathians, and against the Turks in the Caucasus, although in both regions bad weather has prevailed.

Some days must elapse before this battle, which promises to prove the most decisive of the war, is concluded. So far, all that is definitely known is that the German advance has been brought to a standstill. Some of the German troops have been partly or wholly surrounded, but they are still fighting stubbornly to break through the Rusisan lines apparently to the northward, where they hope to join reinforcements sent from Thorn.

The following official communication was issued from General Headquarters yesterday:

"Between the Vistula and the Warta the enemy continues to maintain the position fortified by him at Strykow, Zgierz, Szadek and Zdunska Wola (Russian Poland). The fighting has been very stubborn in the regions of Strykow and Zgiera. We captured at these points cannon, rapid-firers and several hundred prisoners.

"Our troops have taken part in an engagement along the front comprising Glowno, Bielawy and Sobota. Along the left bank of the Vistula the Germans carried out a counter-attack.

"According to prisoners, the German losses were enormous, many battalions losing all of their officers, and the companies being reduced to from sixty to eighty men.

"On the Czenstochowa-Cracow front there have been no important engagements. The Austrian army, which defended the approaches east of Cracow, on the Schrenlava and Raba, were defeated Nov. 26, being driven back to the region of the fortress.

"In the Carpathians on Nov. 27 we took as many as 1,200 Austrians. The troops of the enemy have retired precipitately from Bukowina. We have occupied Czernowitz.

"In the region of the Mazurian Lakes (East Prussia) and the Angerap river our troops have thrown back the Germans in several districts from their fortified positions."

The Russian official report adds:—

"Undoubtedly the German plan to pierce our front on the left bank of the Vistula and surround part of the Russian army has completely failed. It appears from the communications of the Staff Commander-in-Chief that the Germans have been compelled to fall back from Rzgow and Tuszyn through Brzeziny on Strykow under conditions most disadvantageous to them. The Germans suffered enormous losses during the retreat.

"The fighting, however, is not yet finished. The battle on the whole front is developing very favorably for us.

"The enemy, however, continues to offer a stubborn resistance. It is impossible, therefore, to consider the operations ended, and it is necessary to await the revelation of its final results in the firm assurance that the Russian troops are fully conscious of the necessity of successfully concluding their heroic efforts in orders finally to shatter the enemy's resistance."

PERLEY TO STAY DURING THE WAR

Rumors of Appointment of High Commissioner Disposed of

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—It was definitely stated last night that Hon. George H. Perley, the Ministerial representative of the Canadian Government in London, will remain there in that capacity until the end of the war. This disposes of constant rumors that this or that prominent individual is to be appointed High Commissioner. Sir Robert Borden has said that a successor to Lord Strathcona would not be considered until Mr. Perley's return.

TWENTY-THREE KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE

Also Caused Strange Convolutions of the Earth's Surface

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Twenty-three persons were killed and a number of others were injured in the earthquake which occurred on Friday in western Greece and the Ionian Islands, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Athens.

On the Island of Santa Maura the earthquake caused strange convolutions of the earth's surface. The mountain of Pefkoulia collapsed and crumbled away for a distance of nearly two miles, and the waters of the Ionian Sea penetrated the valley to the extent of about 125 acres. New small mountains appeared at different points on the island.

Cossacks Saved Prisoners.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 30.—The following story has been received from Petrograd:—

"In the region north of Lodz 500 Russians were caught in a village, after they had expended all their ammunition in a sharp fight with the Germans, and were taken prisoners.

"A captain of a Cossack force who had been watching his chance seized a favorable opportunity, and, when the prisoners were under convoy on their way to the German rear, attacked and killed the guards and brought the Russians back safely to their own lines."

Body Identified.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 30.—Relatives on Saturday identified the body which was found in a creek near this city Friday afternoon as J. Mills, a resident of Norwich, twenty miles from Woodstock. Mills had been an inmate of the House of Refuge for about a week, but wandered away a few days ago, eluding the authorities of the institution. His dead body was found in a creek face downwards by a rural mail carrier. Coroner Mearns yesterday opened an inquest.

Kaiser Back In the East.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—(Via Amsterdam and London.)—It was announced at military headquarters yesterday that Emperor William was now with the German army in the east.

GERMANS HAVE 700,000 MEN TO HURL AT ALLIES

ARRAS IS BOMBARDED

Conflicting Reports From Western Battle Front Indicate That Ypres May be Object of Another Desperate German Attack—Other Signs Point to Abandonment by Enemy of Offensive.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Press reports from Belgium and France yesterday speak of renewed fighting around Arras, but conflict in respect to Ypres. Some say that the Germans are bent on renewing their attempts to take Ypres, and others that signs point to an abandonment of the German offensive, with the offensive of the allies already under way. The French official report (published to-day) tells of the capture of some German positions in the Ypres district.

The Daily News correspondent says that a most destructive bombardment of Arras, is under way, and that a great deal of hand-to-hand fighting has taken place in the vicinity.

The Boulogne correspondent of The Weekly Despatch, in a message published yesterday, says:—

"The Germans have concentrated 700,000 men in the neighborhood of Arras, where they are preparing for a determined effort to break through the allies' line.

"Heavy fighting has already begun."

The Daily News has a despatch from western Flanders, dated Sunday, saying that during the past few days the situation along the Yser and around Ypres has undergone a very significant change. The offensive has passed from the Kaiser's army to the allies. When and how the allies will make use of the new situation cannot at present be stated. Generals Joffre and French have a magnificent mobile force at their disposal ready for the day when the Germans will need some encouragement to leave Belgian soil.

The Daily Express has a "frontier despatch," saying that the allies are taking the offensive south of Ypres, occupying the German trenches. When the latter returned the advance of the allies was supported by a deadly artillery fire.

William Maxwell, in a despatch to The Telegraph, which is given prominence to-day, says in part: German prisoners declare their officers are under oath to drive the British from Ypres or die in the attempt. It is certain that another effort is about to be made to reach the coast, and that the point of attack has been decided upon. The Aisne is the barometer by which to gauge the weather in the western region of the war, and the quietness in the region presages the rushing of reinforcements and another attempt to break through elsewhere.

Heavy firing on the northwest coast of Belgium is reported from Oostburg, and there can be little doubt from the direction and nature of the cannonading that the British fleet has again been bombarding the defences erected by the Germans on the coast. Communication by rail between Holland and Antwerp has to-day been indefinitely suspended. Military movements of the utmost importance are in full swing on the south of the frontier, and frontier guards are exercising the greatest vigilance to prevent the leakage of news.

Small Indemnity For Luxemburg.

PARIS, Nov. 30. — Germany has paid an indemnity of 150,000 marks ($37,500) to the Duchy of Luxemburg, according to a despatch to The Temps from Bordeaux.

One of the first acts of Germany after the outbreak of the war was to invade, on August 2, the Duchy of Luxemburg. This action was criticized by the allies as a violation of the neutrality. The payment of an indemnity, if made as reported, presumably would be intended to recompense Luxemburg for Germany's act.

ARGOS FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP

This is the Opinion of Local Spectator

Mr. Howard Morwick, the local solicitor, was one of the spectators at the Argo-Tiger game on Saturday. In speaking of the conflict between the two great teams Mr. Morwick stated today that there was certainly very little difference between them and if they were to play again next Saturday the chances are that the Tigers would win. The Argo wing line in his opinion was superior to any wing line of recent years and that fact coupled with the work of Smith and O'Connor should enable them to win the Dominion Championship. Mr. Morwick performed on the gridiron in Hamilton a few years ago and knows the ability of the Hamilton Rowing Club. According to him there are possibilities of them repeating the Alert trick of 1912 but the Argos are the better team.

TWO WORDS TO SAVE GUELPH

Picture a thriving city of 15,000 prosperous, busy, intelligent Canadians—such a city, say, as Guelph. Think of this city's busy stores, its thriving trade; figure up how much food and clothes, and furniture, and carpets, and gloves, and drugs, and hardware its people buy; consider the demand of its factories for machinery, supplies and raw materials, and of its residents for all the luxuries and raw materials—

In a word—disregard entirely, if you will, what such a community means to Canada in terms of contented, happy, prosperous, patriotic people and consider it only as an additional market for the goods you sell—count its actual dollars and cents value to you as a customer who buys your goods—

If Guelph were menaced by a frightful disaster—tornado, flood, or fire—that would wipe it off the face of the earth—and if it were in your power to save Guelph from destruction, merely by remembering to say two words—would you say them?

Would it be worth your while as a patriotic Canadian to save such a city to Canada? Would it be worth your while as a keen business man to save such a market for your goods?

Save Your Own City

Well, it is in your power to save a city the size of Guelph for Canada and a market the size of Guelph for yourself by remembering and saying two words—nothing else, not a dollar's cost nor a moment's inconvenience.

A moment—to explain how and why.

Then commences one of the most ingenious and compelling arguments for "Made-in-Canada" goods. The statistics of the paper making industry in Canada, with a general description of the industry and its possibilities in Canada is worked out, which shows that there is $6,000,000 worth of foreign paper that Canadian business men are buying in preference to Canadian paper every year.

It is in varieties and grades that can be and are being produced to better advantage by Canadian mills than by those in other countries.

This is not due to any superiority in the foreign product—and certainly not to any lower price, because a duty is paid on every pound. It is simply due to the fact that Canadian business men have not taken the trouble to ask for paper made in Canada, or to acquaint themselves with the fact that Canadian paper is better, quality for quality, and cheaper, price for price, than imported brands.

By the time paper gets to the ultimate consumer, in the form of letterheads, blank forms, booklets, etc., it represents only a small percentage of the whole cost of these articles. In consequence, the consumer has, for years, been in the habit of asking for or accepting certain long-established and well-known brands—or water marks—of foreign make. He continues to use these brands, without troubling to think either if the paper is Canadian-made, or if it is the best paper that the same money will buy. In many cases, he does not specify at all, but accepts whatever his printer, book-binder or lithographer offers him.

Express the six million a year in human terms. It means 50,000 tons of paper—the product of 17 mills, employing 3,000 workmen, each supporting a family of from two to four persons. It means the purchase of $3,000,000 worth of raw materials, machinery, belting, oils, fuel and manufacturing supplies; the production of these materials gives jobs to 1,500 additional men, each of whom has a family to eat and drink and wear things. It means the active employment of 10 millions in capital—

A Lesson For All

In a word, it means the creation of a thriving city the size of Guelph—the addition of 15,000 prosperous citizens to those who buy your goods and contribute to the general welfare of your country. It makes no difference that all these people would not be concentrated in one town. They would be in Canada and their money would be spent for Canadian goods.

And that is how, by remembering to say two words, you can help to save a Canadian city the size of Guelph from a destruction more complete than any wrought by flood, fire or tornado.

The words are the brand name of the paper made by the firm.

There is a lesson in this for every Canadian citizen who wishes to see his own home town advance. Buy from your local merchants; use the factory products of your own town wherever possible, and where what what you want is not made in your own town buy what is made in Canada before you send your money abroad.

Natural Antagonists

The autocracy and militarism of Germany, modified though they are by parliamentary forms, constitute a challenge and a menace to American constitutions; against them the American mind instinctively revolts. Militaristic monarchism and democracy are incurably antagonistic. Both systems cannot endure. The triumph of one means the extinction of the other.—Philadelphia North American.

Strange Mourning Custom

When Arabian women go into mourning they stain their hands and feet with indigo for eight days, and during that time they will drink no milk, on the ground that its white hue does not harmonize with the mental gloom.

Amateur Paper Hanging

A good hint for those who do their own paperhanging is to apply the paste to the wall instead of the paper. Amateurs will find it much easier to match the pattern, and the paper is less liable to tear by following this method, besides saving time and trouble.

A Toronto negro slipped and fell, and in doing so a revolver in his hip pocket exploded, and tore the seat out of his trousers. In these war times the event would be referred to as firing in the rear.—Guelph Mercury.

SWITZERS MUST WORK.

There is No Place For the Loafer In the Little Republic.

Switzerland is a country that has a short and easy method of dealing with the lazy man who is work-shy. The Swiss act upon the theory that a man who is unemployed is, if left to himself, prone to become unemployable, and that for a community to allow any one of its members who is capable of work to remain unemployed is a public waste. In industrial Switzerland there is no place for the idle. It is considered the duty of the authorities to assist in every way possible persons honestly seeking employment, and it is also held to be their duty to punish the work shirker and to force him to earn his bread before he may eat it. No toleration is shown to the loafer, begging is prohibited by law, and vagrancy is classified as a crime in the legal code of the Confederation.

In Switzerland a man may not deliberately join the army of the unemployed and remain indefinitely in the ranks without even making an effort to secure employment and in the interval be constantly deteriorating into an unemployable. There is no resorting to charitable institutions as hotels, no wandering about the country extorting alms from honest people while pretending to be in search of employment.

An unemployed person must make a serious effort to find work. If he does not the authorities will find it for him, and of a kind that may not be to his liking, and he is compelled to perform the work assigned to him. If he refuses he is placed in the workhouse, where military discipline is maintained and where every inmate is required to work to the full capacity of his strength, for which he receives as compensation his board and lodging, with wages ranging from three to ten cents per day. His stay in the institution depends upon his conduct, and during his forced employment the state make a profit on his labor, as most of the institutions of this character are so well managed that they are sources of income instead of expense to the cantons to which they belong.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS

PARIS, Nov. 30. — Comparative quiet prevailed along the western front Sunday except in the Argonne, where the French repelled several attacks.

The following communication was issued by the War Office Sunday night:—

"Quiet prevails along the front, except in the Argonne region, where the German attacks have not been more successful than preceding attacks."

The official statement issued by the War Office yesterday afternoon says:

"Yesterday the enemy's cannonading was more active, but carried on chiefly with 77 millimetre pieces; his heavy artillery has made itself felt very little. Under these conditions the artillery struggle has turned particularly to our advantage.

"In Belgium, our infantry captured several supporting positions to the north and to the south of Ypres. In the country to the north of Arras, one of the enemy's attacks, undertaken by nearly three regiments has definitely failed after several counter-attacks carried out in all directions.

"Between the Somme and Chaulnes we have made perceptible progress. In the neighborhood of the village of Fay, our troops came into immediate contact with the wire entanglements of the defence.

"In the region of the Aisne between Vailly and Berry-au-Bac, a group of machine guns and emplacement for 20 centimetre pieces were destroyed by our shells, one of which caused an explosion in one of the enemy's batteries.

"In the Vosges three counter-attacks, undertaken by the Germans for the purpose of recapturing ground previously taken by us in the Ban-de-Sap region, were repulsed."

OLD PAP PINKHAM

Jericho's Patriots Subject of a Letter to the President

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT—Your letter askin' me to forward to the secretary of war a list of the men of Jericho who are willin' to die for their country at $13 per month and board and lodging is at hand.

Mr. President, we are ready. We have always been ready. That the secretary of war may realize what sort of redhot patriots we are I wish to relate a little incident.

I was gittin' the mail ready when Bill Lapham comes in.

"Look here, pap!" he whispers, though we was all alone, "I've struck the biggest, broadest, tallest, heftiest idea ever thought out by mortal man, but I want to keep it to hit the crowd with tonight. Give every man notice as he drops in today, and along about 7 o'clock I'll hev the firebells rung. Tell 'em it's a big thing, pap."

"THE COUNTRY NEEDS US."

Deacon Spooner called the meetin' to order and said:

"Sons of freedom, we hev gathered here tonight to hear some remarks from our esteemed fellow townsman, William Lapham. Make your p'int, Bill."

"My p'int is this," says Bill as he draws a long breath and steps out to git room. "The golden opportunity fur which Jericho has sighed is at hand. The country needs us, and why not organize the Jericho guards?"

"It's a p'int, gentlemen," said Deacon Spooner. "Let's hear from Abner Jones."

"I s'pose it's known in this town that my great-grandfather was killed at the battle of Monmouth," says Abner as he gets off the counter, "though I ain't braggin' about it. I'll jest say that I'm jest willin' to die fur my country any time I'm called upon, and if I'm elected captain of the Jericho guards I'll promise that no invader shall set foot on these shores."

"How is it with you, Moses Plumber?" asks the deacon.

"Does any man here doubt that I'm willin' to die fur America? As captain of the Jericho guards you'll find me at the front."

"In the fust place," says Bill Lapham, "I'd like to know if everybody wants to be captain."

Everybody said that he did.

"But everybody can't be," protested Bill. "I'm tellin' you this idea is mine and that I'm the man to boss the Jericho guards. I believe I'm the only man in this town who wanted to enlist to fight the Spaniards."

"Bill makes a p'int, and we can't deny it," says Deacon Spooner, "but when I offer to lead them guards to victory or death I don't want to crowd Bill Lapham out of place, but"—

"Neither do we!" yells forty men.

Then thar was a great uproar. Deacon Spooner hammered on the stove and then he said:

"It appears as if we all want to lead the Jericho guards and die fur our country, and it further appears as if this meetin' was gittin' mad about sunthin'. I notice Lish Billings over by the 'lasses bar'ls. What do you think about things? D'yer want to be captain, same as the rest?"

"Noep," replies Lish in his keerless way.

"Ain't you willin' to die fur our country?"

"Not by a jugful, but if I was thar wouldn't be any Jericho guards to die with. You've all bin wastin' your breath."

"How's that?"

"Thar's ninety-six men in this town," continues Lish, "and when the last war was goin' on and thar was talk that it might come to a draft the hull crowd of us went to the doctor's to be examined. We had busts and raptures and short legs and sprung knees. We was deaf and nigh sighted and toothless. Thar wasn't one blessed critter in the hull ninety-six who was fit to jump over a tow string or chaw peanuts, and I kinder reckon we'd better git sunthin' soft to eat fur breakfast and carry each other home."

When seven or eight millions of men armed to the teeth fro killing one another and destroying property can get away with fifty million dollars a day outside of the property they destroy, remember what eight millions of Canadians using goods made by Canadians can do to keep the old ship head up to the storm.

The Severest Strain.

A Canadian school teacher who happened to be in Berlin when the war broke out was detained there for almost two months because she told the German authorities that Canada was her home. This little miss is known in her home circle as a suffragette who almost inclines to militancy, so when she came home safe and sound the other day one of her friends inquired kindly about her trials and experiences in the German capital.

"Oh, pshaw! They didn't amount to much," said the little teacher. "The severest strain was in having to keep silent for seven weeks."

ARGOS ARE CHAMPS OF THE BIG FOUR

Defeated the Tigers at Toronto on Saturday by 11-4 --- O'Connor and Smith Shone

Toronto, Nov. 30. — At last Argos are winners of the Big Four. It took two play-offs to finally land the title for Captain Murphy's team, but no person who was at the Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon could help but admit that the Argos were the better team. Did the Argos buck up during the last quarter? Perhaps the double blue didn't buck up during the last half of the struggle. From merely holding their own against the Bengali the Oarsmen took the aggressive, and from then on there was nothing to it but Argos. The Tigers died hard, and occasionally took a notion to win out by means of blows instead of rugby. They lacked the right punch, however. The officials checked every tendency towards rough work.

The Jungle Kings tried some of their bluff tactics before the game started, but the Big Four executive would not stand for it, and the Hamilton team was given the alternative of taking the field with Percy Roberts as umpire or else giving the championship to the Argos by default. The Hamiltonians finally decided that it was the best policy to take the field, and in justice to Mr. Roberts, it must be admitted that the game was handled with almost perfect satisfaction. The rough work was discouraged at all stages, and the game was lost and won on its merits.

On the play shown on Saturday, Argos are clearly the better team. In that second half they were on the aggressive, and try as the Tigers would, the Argos could not be stopped. Argos played straight rugby all the way.

There was no desperate and hair-raising finish. The Argos simply showed the better class all through the last two quarters, and the game was never in doubt after Argos forged ahead in the third period. When O'Connor kicked a goal from the field 45 yards out, the superiority of the scullers' machine became evident. With the score 6 to 4, Captain Murphy's team strengthened for the final moments. Bickle had to retire, and Smirlie Lawson came on slightly after half-time to bolster up the back division of the Oarsmen. He did his full share of the work, and the shocks which the Hamilton tacklers experienced when they hit Lawson may account for the lack of pep in the last fifteen minutes. Then in the last quarter with the Argos on their toes they held the Tigers helpless. Once again O'Connor booted for a rouge, and Argonauts were another point to the good. Still another goal from the field was notched by Jack the relentless, and there the final score stood 11 to 4.

PIRATES EASY FOR BANKERS

Bartlett of Winners Was a Heavy Scorer

Honors fell to Claude Bartlett on Saturday night in a league basketball game at the "Y." when he scored 16 of the goals which gave the Bankers victory over the Pirates. The score was 53 to 27, the Bankers piling up the biggest list of points recorded so far in the league. The game was fast and clean. Another veteran basketball player in the person of Jack Laing refereed the game.

The Dreadnot-Excelsior fixture was postponed, several members of the former being out of the city.

A postponed game between Cressman's and St. Paul's will be played Tuesday night. The game scheduled for tonight between Excelsiors and Cressman's will be played on Thursday next.

Mails Safe Says Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Turkey has assured the United States that mails between the embassy at Constantinople and the consulates scattered throughout the country will be safe-guarded. Inasmuch as despatches have been coming through in code to Ambassador Morgenthau and other attaches in the Ottoman empire, it appears that the vigorous protests of the United States against the proposal of the Porte to restrict code communication between neutrals, has been effective.

ARMY WON FROM NAVY

West Point Cadets Conquer Annapolis Midshipmen

Philadelphia, Nov. 30. — The West Point Cadets defeated the Annapolis Midshipmen in their annual game at Franklin Field on Saturday by a score of 20 to 0. The score was represented by three touchdowns and a safety. The game was one-sided, the Army showing superior power in carrying the ball and defending their goal.

There was much slackness of play during the game, and the forward passage by both sides was poor. The Navy appeared very weak on the defence, and rarely held the Army when it tried to penetrate the Sailors' line or go round the ends. The Army's victory makes the record of the two teams a tie, each now having won nine games, with one game a tie.

COMMENT As You Like it

THIS IS THE final week for Ontario Rugby. Tomorrow afternoon at the Toronto Stadium St. Michael's College, winners of the Intercollegiate intermediate honors, will meet the Tiger Seconds, winners of the Intermediate Interprovincial. On Wednesday the Hamilton Rowing Club will meet the Argos at Rosedale and the winner will tackle Varsity at the Stadium next Saturday.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that the Indoor Baseball League among various teams from the 57th Regiment has not been very successful, no games having been played for a couple of weeks. Three teams are tied for first honors, and the winner of the league should at least be decided.

A splendid musical program was rendered, the following taking part: Miss Simons, Miss Crough and Messrs. Legendre and Picard, the accompanists being Misses Doherty and Pierce.

The evening was brought to a close with a very pleasing presentation to the Very Rev. Dean McColl, who for five years has been honorary president of the society. The address, read by Mrs. L. B. Treacy, was accompanied by a beautiful leather chair, the gift of the ladies. The Dean spoke feelingly at the conclusion, thanking the ladies for their gift and also for their co-operation in the past, and extending his good wishes for the future welfare of this flourishing society.

INDUCTION OF REV. H. J. KEITH AT EDMONTON

Rev. Dr. Lyde of Robertson College One of the Speakers

Rev. Henry J. Keith, M. A., B. D., formerly of Knox Church, Peterboro, Ont., was formally inducted as pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church last night with an impressive service that will long be remembered in local church circles.

Rev. Dr. Lyde of Robertson College was one of the principal speakers, and he referred to the terrible toll of the European war. He said there were some who pointed to the war as proof that Christianity is ineffective as a world force. His arguments in favor of Christianity put to rout all disbelievers and served to strengthen the cause of Christians.

"If the war, terrible and devastating as it is, proves the means of arousing the careless and indifferent; if it causes us to be gentler and kinder in the home, more just and honest in business, more diligent and fervent regarding our spiritual life—though it causes the crepe to be hung on some of our doors and dashes to pieces our fondest hopes—it will not be too great a price to pay for a newer and holier life and more noble national ideals." Dr. Dyde spoke thus as a father who has given a son to the empire to help fight its battles.

Rev. E. McGougan, moderator pro tem of the church, proceeded with the induction ceremony, and expressed to Rev. Mr. Keith that every blessing might be his in his new work. Other speakers included Rev. C. D. Campbell and Rev. R. G. Stewart.

Mrs. Keith was presented with a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums by little Miss Edgar, and Rev. Mr Keith replied briefly to the message of welcome, after which the new pastor was introduced to the members of the congregation by Aubrey Fullerton and Mr. Yuill.

The above is a report from an Edmonton exchange of the induction of the Rev. Mr. Keith, formerly of this city, as pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

ADDRESS ON DUTY TO YOUNG MEN

J. J. Turner Speaks to Life Problem Club

Basing his remarks upon the ten commandments and a passage in Daniel, Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., spoke to young men Sunday afternoon on the subject of duty. His address was delivered before the Life Problem Club of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Turner emphasized the duty a man owed to himself and to his municipality. A man should be public spirited enough to serve his city from the position of mayor down. It was the duty of every man to be at the polls when voting day came round. Lastly there was the duty man owed to God; the highest form of service. Mr. Turner's address was accorded close attention and the club would be glad to have him talk to them again.

Private Gray is a member of the cycle corps and with several others is going to Toronto to undergo special training. He likes the life in camp fine and is in good health. All the Peterborough boys are in fine spirits.

APPEAL OF PORT HOPE DISMISSED

Town Has to Pay Costs of Nearly $3000

(Port Hope Guide.)

The case of E. B. Neal vs. the Town of Port Hope re the closing of Hope street for the benefit of the C.N.R. has been finally disposed of. It will be remembered that this case came before the three arbitrators Judge Huycke, of Peterboro, Judge Harding, of Lindsay and Mr. T. B. Chalk, of this town and they awarded Mr. Neal $900.00 with costs. The town appealed this decision and the case came up before Justice Kelly in Toronto, but he dismissed the appeal. The town then carried it to the court of appeal, but again the case was dismissed, leaving the award of the arbitrators standing. In each case the town has to pay the costs and this will amount to about $3,000.

WOULD NOT KNOW THE LOCAL LADS

The local bunch received a high standing for their work at Valcartier, and have certainly made more than good here. It would be impossible to recognize them as the crew who paraded to the station a few months ago. Corporal, or rather Lance Sergeant Arthur Field, who was injured, is getting along fine and will rejoin the company in the course of a few weeks. Field, who left Peterboro as a private, has made a hit and gained rapid promotion. Shortly after his accident he was made lance sergeant. Col. Sergt. Howarth has been appointed battalion sergeant major.. Major Bennett, who is counted one of the crack officers, is in charge of our company and is highly esteemed by his men. His heart to heart talks with the boys are greatly responsible for his being so well liked. Col. Alderson is also extremely popular with the men. One of the noticeable features is the reception tendered the Canucks from the people here. The majority of them thought we were wild Indians and Eskimos. The London papers credited us with breaking ice every morning to take our daily dips and thinking nothing of sleeping in snowdrifts. Every man was a sharpshooter and a regular Indian.

As far as money is concerned, the English system "got our goats." Now we are so proficient in the art of handling ha'pennies and twopence that we can bewilder the best of them.

The Princess Pats have left Bustard and will go quietly to the front shortly. Our turn is next, and it may be soon.

GERMANS CHANGE BASE.

Cruisers Which Had Been Off South America Now at Aleutians.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 30. — That three German cruisers which had been operating off the coast of South America had changed their base to the Aleutian Islands, and were patrolling the trade route between Puget Sound and the Orient, was the report brought yesterday by the Japanese liner Tacoma Maru, in port from Yokohama.

While crossing the Pacific the Tacoma Maru received a wireless despatch from the Chicago Maru, west-bound, stating that German warships were in the area between the 180th and 190th meridians. The Chicago Maru reported that she had altered her course to avoid capture. Precautions were taken aboard the Tacoma Maru, which for three nights proceeded without a light showing. Local shipping men are skeptical regarding to truth of the rumor.

CHEQUE FROM STATES IS WORTH MORE HERE

A cheque from Rochester, Detroit or any other American city is worth one-sixteenth of one per cent. more than its face value in Peterboro. The Review learned today from a local banker that this is due to the fact that the Canadian banks have drawn on their American agents to a greater extent than they wanted to. The premium of one-sixteenth is paid by the Canadian bank. But, on the other hand, it costs a little more to send money to American cities than before the war, about one-eighth of one per cent.

Soon after the war began, the rate of discount in Canada on American cheques and currency was two per cent. This rate did not prevail for many days, and it soon fell down to about one-quarter of one per cent, which is normal.

ADOLF JENSEN

The short biographical account of Sir Edward Elgar, the composer of the "Banner of St. George," now preparing by the Peterboro Choral Society, was very interesting, and as Adolf Jensen's cantata, "The Feast of Adonis," is being prepared by the Orpheus Society, a few words about Jensen's works may be acceptable.

Adolf Jensen was born in 1837 in the royal city of Konigsburg, now part of the German Empire, a city which may soon be strongly invested by the Russians. He may be styled a self-taught musician, having only two years' study under Ehlert, Sobelewski and Kiohler. A passionate admirer of Schumann, he went into Russia as a teacher to earn money to study under that master. Returning, he found Schumann dead, and became chapel master of Posen. In 1860 he went home to Konigsburg, thence to Berlin, Dresden, and finally to Baden-Baden, where he died in 1879. He was a gifted song writer, composing one hundred and sixty vocal pieces. Best known among these are "Chorus of Nuns," "Jephtha's Daughter," "Journey to Emmaus," "Murmuring Breezes," "Six Love Songs," "Feast of Adonis," and "Donald Caird ist Weider Da," from Scott. The song, "Mutter, O Sing Mich zurRuh," is set as one of the numbers to be studied for vocal examination this year by the University of Toronto. The data of above is taken from the biographical section of the Imperial Encyclopaedia of Music, page 421, volume 1. A complete life of Jensen was published by Niggli of Berlin in 1900, copies of which are still on sale.

Every Evening (Sundays and Holidays excepted.) at 4 O'Clock

London, Dec. 1, (C.P.)---British officers back from the front on few days' leave bring a message from Sir John French that "the danger is over but there is still plenty of hard fighting to be done." $50,000 AS GOAL OF CAMPAIGN FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

Nine Teams of Business Men Will be Busy for Three Days of Next Week

Can the citizens of Peterborough raise $50,000 for patriotic and relief purposes? The question is asked in all seriousness because that sum was the objective set last night as the amount this city must contribute, and if enthusiasm counts for success the goal of their ambition is already achieved. Bankers, business men, professional men, and men from all walks of life convened in the city council chamber and decided that nothing less than $50,000 would do for Peterborough, and they intend going after the money systematically and with intense determination. Every man present last night fairly oozed enthusiasm. He looked it, talked it and acted it.

Will Start Big Canvass.

Plans were perfected for a campaign to be inaugurated early next week conducted by nine teams of business men captained by able leaders. Something like 2000 citizens will be called upon to contribute, the compilation of lists of prospects now being carried on. The teams are composed of the pick of the city's business and professional men who will be ready for action by next Tuesday night it is hoped.

The meeting opened with the reception of reports and closed with God Save the King.

In deciding to raise $50,000 the discussion that ensued served to supply information that enlightened the minds of most of those present with facts concerning the purposes behind the raising of the money. Whether the money should be part of the Canadian Patriotic Fund seemed to be the biggest point of discussion, but finally it was unanimously agreed to divide whatever amount was obtained in the ratio of 75 per cent. for the Canadian Fund and the remaining 25 per cent. for contingent local relief. This arrangement was eminently satisfactory to all present judging by the many expressions of approval heard. When the matter comes to a head there should be no excuse for any misunderstanding of this arrangement as ample opportunity was afforded all present to express approval or disapproval.

As the situation now stands, it is the intention to launch the campaign early next week. A dinner will be held next Tuesday night in one of the hotels, where tables to the number of ten will be spread. On each table will be a list containing 200 or more names of prospects to be canvassed. Each of the ten captains with his nine men will arrange to canvass the men named in the lists.

Will Open Office.

It is proposed to conduct the campaign on a large scale. Enthusiasm must be kept up during the three days it will run. An office on George Street near the Toronto Loan and Savings Company's office has been donated by Mr. George Morrow as headquarters for the canvassers and campaigners and Alderman F. H. Dobbin agreed to move into the place and keep it open as a general rendezvous throughout the campaign. Mr. Dobbin moreover in his report of proposed publicity plans has arranged to have the boy scouts undertake to distribute appeals for the fund throughout the city while big flaring posters will be placed in prominent spots containing a brief concise explanation of the campaign and a terse appeal for subscriptions. Lantern slides showing scenes from the war and facts concerning the progress of the campaign from hour to hour will be provided. Mr. Dobbin facetiously suggested having the home guard parade.

Mr. Frank Matthews was the unanimous choice of the gathering for a chairman of the finance committee, it being felt that this committee should have at its head some citizen who possessed the confidence and trust of the public.

Impromptu Speeches.

During the evening speeches of more or less impromptu nature many of them bristling with patriotism, were made. Mr. S. R. Armstrong very clearly explained what the Canadian Patriotic Fund was for, stating it was raised by the contributions from cities all over the Dominion for the purpose of providing assistance for the wives and families of the soldiers who were the sole means of support to their families, oftentimes for such families and dependents who lived in small communities where no local relief fund was available to their small population. Where such dependants were provided for the money from the Canadian fund was not disbursed.

Mr. F. D. Kerr.

Mr. F. D. Kerr stirred the gathering in a rousing patriotic address in which he called for a fuller realization of duty on the part of the citizens in the matter. He declared it was impossible to discharge a $50 obligation with a $2 bill, as so many citizens were doing. They must rise to the occasion until it hurt them. If they would sacrifice a little he had not the slightest fear that the sum of $40,000 could easily be raised. He showed how other cities were responding; Ottawa with $200,000, Hamilton with $100,000, Kingston, a city smaller than Peterborough, with $50,000 and Lindsay with $26,000. He moved that the sum set for this city to raise be $40,000, but after a speech by Judge Huycke urging that it be made $50,000, Mr. Kerr agreed to raise it that much the money to apportioned as stated, and the sum already contributed for relief included in the $50,000. Mr. Kerr called for expressions of opinion on the motion and no voice was heard.

Mr. D. O'Conell occupied the chair and aided greatly in giving every one present a clearer insight into the undertaking by some earnest and illuminating remarks.

Nearly all the city's aggressive and public spirited men are putting their shoulders to the movement. The city council will be approached for assistance to the extent of $5,000.

Some of those present were John Crane, J. A. Aylmer, F. D. Kerr, F. H. Dobbin, W. H. Dunsford, J. J. Turner, Jr., C. H. Pennefather, Dr. Greer, T. F. Matthews, Harry Rush, Adjutant McElhiney, J. A. Harstone, Walter Stocker, Rev. Mr. Pogue, Mr. Walker, E. A. Peck, W. Galbraith, S. A. Oke, F. M. Delafosse and H. B. Cowan.

BARBER "CUTS" A GERMAN.

Paris, — A Swiss newspaper says that a German officer who went to a barber shop in Brussels was asked to pay 50 centimes for a shave.

The German complained, saying: "But yesterday I paid only 30 centimes."

"I know," the barber is said to have replied, "but today your face is much longer."

PROLONGED FIGHTING IS LIKELY

Russians Against Von Hindenburg Between Vistula and Warthe

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 1. — The Times' correspondent at Petrograd says the battle with Von Hindenburg between the Vistula and the Warthe is likely to be prolonged, but its effect will hardly be hoped for by the Germans, who are compelled to employ more and more of their troops in order to save those divisions whose position is compromised. The majority of their eastern force is now involved and they are bound to suffer irreparable loss, even if a portion of their army is extricated. It is realized, however, that serious work is ahead of the Russians before they capture the strong and elaborate trenches of the enemy.

NO DECISION IN REGARD TO DISPOSAL PLANT

Inspection of the Proposed Site Will be Made by Officials

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Dec. 1. — Dr. McCullough, of the Provincial Board of Health, this morning heard two deputations, one headed by Mayor Buller of Peterboro, Solicitor Gordon and City Engineer Parsons, and the other headed by Reeve Anderson, for the township council, with Mr. E. A. Peck as the representative of Otonabee township.

The burden of the complaint was that Peterboro wants to establish a sewer system and disposal plant across a river in Otonabee township some distance from the city. The township people protested as well as many residents.

Dr. McCullough will take the whole matter up with the provincial engineers and health authorities, making a personal inspection of the place.

Cobourg will send a special Christmas greeting card and $5 to every man from that town in the two contingents.

H. O. FISK MANAGER OF UTILITIES

Takes New Position Latter Part of This Month

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon, Manager C. L. Howse handed in his resignation, which was accepted. Mr. Howse has been in charge of the local branch of the Hydro-Electric since June 1st, and will sever his connection not later than January 1.

The Commission appointed Mr. H. O. Fisk as successor to Mr. Howse, and his duties will commence toward the latter part of the month. The appointment of Mr. Fisk as manager will meet with public approval. His long connection with electrical work in this city has won for him a reputation which fully qualifies him for the position.

TO RESTRICT SALE OF LIQUOR THROUGHOUT MANITOBA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1. — Manitoba leads the way in war temperance legislation. Premier Roblin announced this morning that the government proposes, through inviting co-operation from license holders, to secure the closing of bars and clubs at 7 p.m., and wholesale places at 6 during the war.

A cabinet meeting will be held shortly and an order-in-council passed inviting license holders to acquiesce in this exceptionally early closing, which sentiment the community demands on the grounds that it is a time for the exercise of exceptional prudence and economy and because of the young soldiers training here at present.

Next session, legislation will be introduced providing that the governor-in-council may in times of stress or necessity vary the hours during which liquor may be sold.

NO ATTACKS MADE BY INFANTRY OF FOE

Enemy Show Considerable Activity About Arras --- Correspondent Says General Retirement From Dixmude Has Been Begun by Germans

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 1. — The official communication this afternoon says:

"In Belgium there was a rather spirited artillery fire yesterday, but no attack was made by the German infantry.

"The enemy continued to show considerable activity to the north of Arras.

"In the region of the Aisne there was an intermittent artillery fire along the front. In the Argonne the fighting continues, but without bringing any change in the situation.

"In the Woevre district and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

LONDON, Dec. 1. — It seems clear now that while the German army in Russian Poland, or that part of it which the Russians have surrounded at Lodz, narrowly escaped annihilation, the Germans fought with such fury that the cordon encircling them was broken, and as German reinforcements are coming up, the issue is not yet decided.

The British press, in interpreting the news despatches from Petrograd, contends that Russian success on a colossal scale still is possible, but in all quarters it is admitted that the recent claims of a complete Russian victory were premature.

Throughout Belgium the Germans are remaining, generally speaking, on the defensive, and signs of renewal of attempts to hack their way to the French coast are lacking. Some despatches say the Germans already have begun to fall back from their rear entrenchments, but as official statements make no mention of this, it is assumed that it is only the guess of a correspondent working on the theory that the Russian success has been overwhelming and final.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — The Central News' Amsterdam correspondent says that the German front before Dixmude has begun a general retirement.

G.T.R. TRAINS IN COLLISION

Three Victims of Wreck Four Miles From Campbellford Are Brought to Nicholls Hospital

The Injured:

Engineer Ambrose Smith, Lindsay

Engineer St. Ours, of Toronto.

Fireman Stanley Weatherup, of Lindsay, arm broken.

Two men seriously injured and one with a fractured arm, comprise the casualty list in a rear-end collision on the Grand Trunk, four miles east of Campbellford, at ten o'clock this morning, when a double-header grain train crashed into a standing G.T.R. work train, owing to the dense fog that almost hid it from sight.

Whether all the injured will recover is unknown. Two were unconscious when brought to Peterboro on a special. They are now in Nicholls Hospital. Traffic is completely blocked in the vicinity of the disaster with box cars and grain and wreckage heaped in the utmost confusion. Both engines were demolished and cars on both trains derailed. An auxiliary from Lindsay is working with a large crew endeavoring to open the line for traffic.

Particulars of the wreck are to the effect that a double-header from Midland loaded with grain passed through the city at 6 o'clock this morning en route east. They had orders concerning the presence of the work train, which was busy picking up rail near Campbellford, and were on the lookout. The dense pall that enveloped everything all morning made it doubly difficult. It appears that they picked up a flagman near the scene and were proceeding at a moderate speed when the rear of the work train loomed up. Although the engineers of the grain train instantly applied the emergency brakes, it was

FIGHTING ALONG THE YSER CANAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 1.—Violent fighting is in progress today along the Yser Canal, according to a telegram from Reuter's correspondent at Sluis. The roaring of heavy guns has been heard all day and houses as far away as Sluis are shaken. Inhabitants of all villages within one hour's march of the Yser battle front have been sent away.

Amsterdam, Dec. 1.—Lieut. General Count Von Moltke, says a despatch from Berlin, has recovered his health and is returning to the front.

CONGRATULATIONS.

THE CANADIAN is the name of the paper printed at Belleville at the School for the Deaf. It is published to teach printing to some of the pupils, and is a bright weekly that is very neatly printed and well composed. The last issue was an enlarged edition, specially published to commemorate the opening of the new residences for the pupils. Premier Hearst and Hon. Dr. Pyne opened the boys' and girls' residences, respectively, each using a golden key. Dr. C. B. Coughlin, a native of Peterborough, who is superintendent of the school, then delivered an address to the distinguished visitors. Both Premier Hearst and Dr. Pyne delivered encouraging speeches. A number of illustrations of ministers and their wives, of classes, and of the two new buildings, were well displayed, and add to the attractiveness of the issue. The new buildings are handsome two-storey structures, airy, with verandah spaces and pleasing architectural appearance. They will add much to the efficiency of the school, and, under Dr. Coughlin's able management, a larger measure of success than it has yet experienced should follow. The Canadian's last issue is a great credit to the institution, especially when it is remembered that the typography and press work were entirely done by the deaf.

ANOTHER MINISTER WITHDRAWS.

MINISTERS change their place of residence and labour just like other men. Circumstances usually make such changes beneficial, for new faces have different minds. Personal contact with different parts of a great country give larger viewpoints and greater knowledge of its needs. Promotion is natural and only a recognition of ability and service, and in losing Mr. Conners, the Park Street Baptist Church loses a man who has earned a title to capacity and service. His new field, wherever it should be, will receive a good man to minister to its needs. He has made many friends here, and it is with deep regret that Peterborough loses another minister who has been a good citizen and a good worker in his church.

"SECOND BATTALION BULLETIN."

WE HAVE RECEIVED from Major G. W. Bennett, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force now on Salisbury Plain, a copy of the Second Battalion Bulletin, published to commemorate the voyage across the ocean of the Canadians in answer to the call to duty. It is a cheery, breezy brochure that, while it doesn't mince matters as to stew and boiled dinners, accepts any hardship or inconvenience with the usual stoicism of a true British soldier. The following item shows how the Canadians either play jokes on one another or accept their lot philosophically. It is under the caption of Lost, Stolen, or Strayed, and runs: "Will de person who take mattress from cebin No. —, F Section, be tind inough to return or cume and take de spring?" If we mistake not, some French-Canadian was the author of this notice.

GENERAL HUGHES' SPEECH AT HAMILTON.

THE NEWSPAPERS of Toronto have lately been devoting some attention to Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes. In fact, two of them, the Telegram and Saturday Night, have been so riled up that it amounts to an obsession or a nightmare, and the readers of those papers so upset, hardly know what General Hughes did say, so much have they put in his mouth that he never uttered. If they had any desire to be fair, they would read General Hughes' speech at Hamilton, delivered last Thursday, when he addressed a representative assembly in that city at a military dinner. Here are some excerpts from his speech which show the general trend of what the minister said:

> "All of you have realized for years that Great Britain, France and Russia were being forced into a war with Germany. The manner in which she was building her navy, with ships of extra speed and armament, so that it rivalled Britain's navy, and the manner in which she was filling her arsenals with mines, etc., all pointed to this fact. Yet a large percentage of the people thought that this preparation was nothing but a peaceful one.
>
> "Germany planned taking Holland and Belgium in order to have free access to the North Sea. It was planned that Austria-Hungary should take land that would give it free access to the Adriatic, Aegean and Mediterranean Seas. Then, when the aged emperor of Austria-Hungary passed away, the Germans expected to unite and have the one great state of the medieval age, running from the North and Baltic Seas, including perhaps Denmark, Sweden and Norway, right down to the Adriatic, Aegean and Mediterranean Seas. Lord Roberts and many others predicted the war, and even the Germans themselves said so. They said that when the Kiel canal was finished they would be able to go to war. This shows that the prediction was true. Germany needed colonies, and the only way to get them was from Britain. There is no need to reason now, as all can see that Germany meant to dismember Britain, humiliate France and complete her aims in Europe.
>
> "Canada, under the leadership of Sir Robert L. Borden, tendered a brigade at the earliest date, and on the night of August 7 it was accepted. Six weeks later we had mobilized 33,000 men. We had clothed them, equipped them, built boats for them, built six miles of rifle ranges for them, including 1,500 targets, and they had fired between six and seven million rounds of ammunition, making them the highest trained rifle men in the world. The boys are now on Salisbury Plain. They were not ruined by the fall rains; the only trouble over there is that the English are too kind to them, but they have settled down now to hard work, and will shortly cross the channel to face the enemy. His Royal Highness, the Duke Connaught, deserves much credit for the gathering of that contingent. He visited it weekly and assisted it in every way possible. Sir Robert Borden also assisted and did all that was in his power in organizing the brigade. I simply acted as overseer. The men of the Canadian militia also deserve great credit. They did not seek rank that they did not deserve, and if they did not get their right rank they were willing to take any in order to join the contingent. Your own city of Hamilton has sent a fine contingent, and it is just typical of every part of Canada. The feeling is that the old tyranny of Germany should be broken and that the Union Jack should triumph again in the cause of truth and justice."

We have felt constrained to quote most of the minister's speech as it was reported, in view of the manner in which some newspapers have been criticizing General Hughes. An obvious conclusion, from reading this speech, is that there is a total want of the bombast, conceit and self-assertiveness that Toronto papers have been saying to be characteristic of the minister's speeches. It was essentially a modest speech, and, although everybody knows that the success of the mobilization of the first contingent is due principally to the Minister of Militia and Defence, yet he took little or no credit for doing so. That should silence Toronto.

THAT MAN GAMEY.

WHEN the Ontario Legislature assembles, Premier Hearst will have as big a list of problems to deal with as any man that ever presided there as first minister. One of those problems will be to deal with the charges that relate to R. R. Gamey, who should not be condemned until he is given an opportunity to defend himself. That opportunity will arrive when he takes his seat in the House. In the meantime, it is well to do no more than keep the matter in mind, for the Opposition will not likely allow the charges to sleep. The Toronto News says in this regard:

> "Whatever may be said about Mr. Gamey's land and mining speculations, he is a member of the Legislature. To the Legislature he is responsible for his political actions. Mr. Hearst has no power to remove Mr. Gamey from his seat and he cannot finally be condemned until he has made his defence in the Legislature, or the things of which he is accused have been investigated by a committee. It is undesirable that any member of the Legislature should have extensive business relations with those who depend upon legislative consideration or favour. To suggest, however, that Mr. Foy, Attorney General, or Mr. R. H. Greer, County Crown Attorney, should not buy lots from Mr. Gamey is absurd."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BEFORE THE JAPANESE bombarded Chiao Chow they notified the Germans to send their families out of the city, and when they were sent to Pekin, the Japanese acted as a medium of communication between the Germans and their families. That's the way a heathen country treats its foes. Civilized Germany cannot say as much by a long way. Its culture is really barbarism.

FARM BUILDINGS should be ventilated. Animals need fresh air as much as human beings, and, besides, gases from hay, etc., sometimes form, that attract lightning, and are causes of disastrous fires. Farmers should write to the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa for the pamphlet on the subject of ventilation for farm buildings.

DR. BELAND'S brave conduct in the field will prove an incentive to enlistment amongst French-Canadians.—Toronto News. Yes, and amongst English Canadians, too, may we add.

A Brotherly Explanation.

(Fort William Times-Journal.)

Port Arthur is claiming credit in outside papers for the back-to-the-land movement, which was really first initiated by the Fort William board of trade, proof positive that Berlin wireless, via Sayville, has little on the sister city's press agent when it comes to resourceful effort.

Another Case of "Big Eyes."

(Toronto News.)

Dr. Van Dyke, the American Ambassador at The Hague, has returned to America to rest his eyes. For a man whose chief delight is to play a three-pound trout in a stream a hundred miles from anywhere the sights of Holland must have made his eyes "bug out."

PASSING THE RECRUITS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I was much interested in your remarks about the lack of seriousness in the doctors passing recruits. It reminds me of the aslyum scandals exposed by "Truth," when it was found that the prisons and workhouses were used to certify the inmates as lunatics to get the certification fees.

Making Progress in Mixed Farming

The Winnipeg "Free Press" a few weeks ago presented the following figures showing the rapid increase of hogs in the Western province.

"The very best evidence of the growth of live stock production in the Canadian West are the shipments of hogs. Returns are complete for the months of January, February, March and April, and these returns show that during the month of January—

Manitoba shipped........	15,700
Saskatchewan shipped....	15,258
Alberta shipped.........	60,278
Total	91,236
In February—
Manitoba shipped........	10,067
Saskatchewan shipped....	16,910
Alberta shipped.........	60,160
Total	87,137
In March—
Manitoba shipped........	9,634
Saskatchewan shipped....	18,337
Alberta shipped.........	45,214
Total	73,214
In April—
Manitoba shipped........	7,422
Saskatchewan shipped....	15,167
Alberta shipped.........	59,806
Total	82,395
Making a grand total for the four months of....	333,963

Although the exact returns are not yet available for May and June, the evidence of weekly shipments is such as to indicate that the total shipments for the first six months of 1914 will be at least 500,000, or only 46,000 less than the total shipments for the twelve months of 1913."

A very conservative estimate of the value of these hogs to the farmer is $12.00 per head, or $6,000,000 for the six months, or $1,000,000 a month for hog products alone. The very great bulk of these hogs were marketed when they were from seven to eight months old.

Effect on Business

With this enormous amount of money coming in, it is not surprising that the wholesale trade reports that collections, particularly during April, May and June were better than anticipated. More than one manager of a wholesale house stated that formerly when accounts were not paid before May, they had small hope of their being paid before the next crop moved, but this year there has been a steady reduction of accounts every month, and they attributed it to the increased amount of cash in circulation from the sales of hogs and other live stock. It must be borne in mind that not only has there been an unusual movement of hogs, but the amount of cattle offered for sale has been larger than anticipated, and the increase was not from the ranches, but from the smaller stock farms.

These who commenced advocating mixed farming for the West a few years ago, when every one was grain crazy, may well point with pride to this wonderful record in hog production. They may also take credit to themselves for the increase in cattle, sheep, poultry, etc., which is also very great, although not perhaps so spectacular as what has been done in hogs. The influence of this enormous live stock development is already apparent in sounder business conditions in districts in which live stock production centres.

That the movement may long continue is the wish of every one who has the true interests of the West at heart. Mixed farming and mixed manufacturing is a sounder policy to-day than ever before.

Mascot of Hull Firemen

The Hull firemen at number one station have a mascot in a small kitten, which they found while attending a fire on Willoughby street. The kitten climbed into one of the hose wagons while the firemen were fighting the blaze and its presence was not discovered until the apparatus arrived back at the station when it fell out of the wagon all bedraggled when the hose was being unloaded.

THE FLAG OF RUSSIA

No Double-headed Eagle Except on Imperial Standard.

Not a few people make the mistake of flying in Russia's honor the picturesque yellow flag with the double eagle, under the impression that it is our ally's national flag. This flag, however, is really the Imperial Standard, while the white flag with the blue St. Andrew's cross is the Russian naval ensign. The latter is used only by the navy and is not allowed to be flown by private individuals.

The Russian national flag, which should be used by people who wish to show their admiration for Russia, is a tri-color, white, blue, and red stripes, placed longitudinally.

There is indeed a remarkable similarity between the flags of the Allies. France, Russia, and Servia all employ the same three colors, only the arrangement differing. In regard to the flags of Russia and Servia, it may be pointed out that, as the colors are the same, a Servian flag upside down would be the Russian and vice versa. Belgium flies a tri-color with the colors vertically, as in the case of the French flag. The Belgian colors, black, gold, and red, are said to symbolize the emergence of the country from darkness into light through blood and fire—a most appropriate device.

Every Man a Hero

Driver Herbert Gilleland, of the Royal Field Artillery, who arrived at Burton from Woolwich Hospital, told his experience in the fierce fighting at Compiegne.

"Most of our boys were at the bottom of a hill, when looking up we saw the enemy at the top getting their guns into line. They commenced banging away, and fifty of our men were picked off before you could look around. We dashed under a haystack for cover, but we had not been long there before our captain—he was a hero—shouted, 'Now, you men who are not wounded, let us give them some of this before we go.' 'This' was a British gun lying seven or eight yards away from the haystack.

"A wounded lieutenant was there, and although he was dying he insisted on bandaging my arm. As soon as he had put me right he turned over and died. The sergeant, who had been very good to me, was torn to pieces by a shell a few minutes later. The captain and sergeant-major were now firing the gun. Suddenly a shell cut the captain's legs clean off, and one of the bravest men who ever stepped left us. We were just giving up all hope when a squadron of our cavalry came along and charged the German guns. Many of the poor chaps were mowed down. What was left of our cavalry cut the German gunners to pieces. It was a magnificent, if terrible, charge, and there is not a man of the squadron but deserves a Victoria Cross."

THE DIVORCEES

Disappointed Once, They Hoped For Happiness In a Second Marriage.

By EDITH V. ROSS

Two ladies met at a western town where there was a divorce colony.

"Why, Margaret!" exclaimed one of them to the other.

"Why, Gertrude!"

"You're not changed in the least since we parted on commencement day ten years ago."

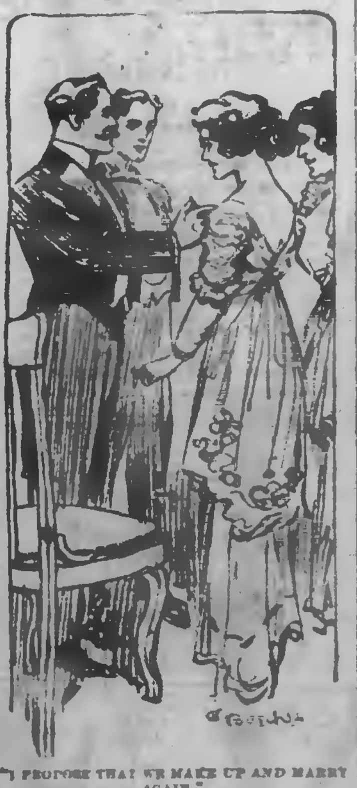
"Nor you."

"But—I am sorry to see you here. I presume you have been unfortunate in marriage, as I have been?"

"I have certainly been unfortunate."

Mrs. Gertrude Smith and Mrs. Margaret Jones were at least fortunate in possessing very common names—in this that they were better able to lose themselves in a place where all transient residents were known to be acquiring citizenship that would enable them to get divorces. The two women compared notes as follows:

Mrs. Smith had soon after leaving college met a man who seemed to her to be perfection. He was affable, intelligent and prominent as a man. He had deferred to her in everything until they were married; then he had changed. Where before he had assured her that her will was law with him, no sooner had they returned from the honeymoon than he opposed her in everything. Unreasonable was no word for it. She had studied his comfort in every way she could think of. If there was any dainty food he liked she had taken pains to provide it for the table. If he came home worn with business she would get him out to a theater.



"I PROPOSE THAT WE MAKE UP AND MARRY AGAIN."

For these attentions she expected some return. Her sister, Mabel, poor girl, had no home, and the wife wished to have her with her. But Mabel irritated the husband, and he had declared that she should not come there again when he was at home. Then there was—

At this point Mrs. Jones broke in: "You have described my husband exactly, only with us it is a case of mother-in-law, and my husband is as unreasonable as yours, though our difficulty is the reverse of yours. He insists on having his mother live with us. True, she has no home and is very lonely, and my husband is her only child living. I will give her credit for being cheerful, and she doesn't interfere with me at all. But I married her son—and not her, and I will not be imposed upon by having her with me day in and day out."

Thus did these much abused women pour their troubles into each other's ears, neither of them realizing that she was telling a story as old as the rite of marriage itself. But neither of them confessed the real reason why she had given up trying to get on under the matrimonial yoke. The reasons why that yoke was unpleasant were plentiful, but the one main reason why they had decided to throw it off was not mentioned by either. When Mrs. Smith had asked Mrs. Jones if she thought she would ever marry again after having secured her divorce she had thrown up her hands exclaiming:

"Heavens, no! Once is enough for me."

And Mrs. Jones declared that if she was ever freed from her present husband she would never take another.

But as time passed a constant companionship brought confidences. Mrs. Smith one day, while cataloguing her husband's different methods of making her miserable, incidentally spoke of a man who was his very opposite in his treatment of women. She had been thrown with him intimately and had always found him ready to give way to her in all those little matters in which a woman expects a man to humor her. Indeed, though this gentleman was middle aged, he was as deferential as one of twenty, and when an older man gave way to a woman it was to be assumed that he would keep up his deference in the married state.

"It is singular," said Mrs. Jones, "how our cases agree. I, too, have met just such a man as you describe—not one of those men whose deference is accompanied by a flourish that reveals its insincerity, but there is something genuine that speaks for itself. You have asked me, dear, if I will marry again in case I get my divorce. I will make one exception among all the men of the world. If the one I speak of should ask me I will not say that I would refuse him."

Upon this confession Mrs. Smith let out a little more that she had not yet revealed. She confessed that her own particular friend had dared to make love to her before her separation and that she had repelled him, whereupon he seemed broken hearted. If her present bonds were severed and she could listen to this other love without shame she was not sure but that she might yield.

Beyond this the confidence did not extend. Perhaps had the ladies been a dozen years younger each might have told the other the name and home of her admirer and as much else about him as she could call up. But at thirty-two one is not so confidential as at twenty. Besides, there was a special reason why neither cared to tell too much. Each of these men, so deferential to the wishes of the woman he admired, had a wife of whom he was trying to get rid, or, if this is stating the case too strongly, his wife was trying to get rid of him.

There was one comfort in this heart matter which pertained to both of these ladies. Neither had any children. There were no innocents to be wrung by parental infelicities. The law being elastic, each was on the way to prove that she had married a bad man and had been made unhappy and she would be able to marry a good man, who would be a blessing to her. What was to become of these two unworthy men neither wife considered.

It is a long road that has no end, and both these ladies at last found themselves free from one matrimonial yoke and delighted at the prospect of taking on another. Mrs. Smith's residence in the west became unnecessary a month earlier than Mrs. Jones', and she departed for the east. By this time the bosom friendship of their younger days had blossomed again, and each had admitted to the other that as soon as the knot was untied she proposed to have a clergyman—if one could be found—to tie another one. Before Mrs. Smith's departure it had been agreed between the two that she should wait for her friend and that they should be married at the same time.

During the next month's separation letters passed between them, Mrs. Smith writing of the subjection of her fiance to her slightest whim and Mrs. Jones chafing under the delay in her own coming to the same happiness. And it is worthy of mention that the two men who were casting off their partners to step into a blessed felicity with these two women were also looking forward to their own weddings.

A few days after Mrs. Jones obtained her decree she arrived in the city of New York and the same evening met her friend Mrs. Smith in a private room at a fashionable restaurant. The ladies met for the purpose of dining together, and each had invited her fiance to be of the party.

The ladies met some time before the dinner hour and had a good, long chat, each congratulating the other on her freedom from a brute and her approaching marriage with a prince of chivalry. The princes arrived simultaneously, were taken up to the dinner room in the same elevator and were ushered into the presence of their fiancees at the same moment, the attendant announcing:

"Mr. Smith and Mr. Jones!"

There was consternation on the face of each and every one of the four. Mrs. Smith's fiance was Mr. Jones, and Mrs. Jones' fiance was Mr. Smith. It seemed for a time that the embarrassment would be unconquerable and that the only way out of the contretemps was for the party to scatter. Mr. Smith, addressing his recent wife, finally said:

"My dear, please explain."

Mrs. Smith pointed to Mrs. Jones for the desired explanation, but Mrs. Jones was unequal to the task. Mr. Jones came to the front.

"My friends," he said, "it is evident that we men have swapped wives and you wives have swapped husbands. Mr. Smith, I have heard what a terrible fellow you are to live with, and I have no doubt you have heard what a terrible fellow I am to live with. My opinion is that none of us are going to better ourselves by the change. Madge, I propose that we make up and get married again."

"I concur," said Mr. Smith, "with the gentleman's statement, and I make you, Gertrude, a similar offer."

The two divorced women looked at each other. A suspicion of a smile came upon Mrs. Jones' lips. Mrs. Smith's lips caught it, and it broadened into a laugh.

"Come, ladies," said Mr. Jones; "let us have dinner. I have been hungry for a new love. I am now hungry for lobster."

"And I," said Mr. Smith, "for terrapin."

The party sat down to dinner and consumed many choice viands, washed down with several bottles of champagne. At the end of it a clergyman was called in, who remarried each woman to her own husband, and each couple departed for its own home, satisfied that all is not gold that glitters and that it is better to bear the ills we have than to fly to others we know not of.

DON'T THROW THE ASHES AWAY.

Ashes should be sifted every morning when they are taken out of the grate. There are often quite good pieces of coal which can be burned again.

If you have a heavy, chalky soil in your garden you can improve it very much by digging ashes thoroughly into it during the winter. They will break it up and make it lighter, so that next spring you will be able to grow flowers you have not been able to before.

If you keep fowls give them a good pile of ashes in the corner of their run so that they can have dust baths whenever they please. This helps to keep them healthy and in nice condition.

It is an excellent plan to put a layer of ashes at the bottom of your dustbin. They help to soak up any moisture that may get thrown in and make the bin easy to empty in a cleanly way.

Dividend and interest disbursements for December, according to the Journal of Commerce, will total $101,463,889, as against $113,947,895 a year ago, a decrease of $12,204,009.

Cookery Notes

Appetizing Vegetable Salads.

In addition to potatoes, cucumbers and tomatoes, the usual salad vegetables, let us remember how good are cold peas and especially haricot beans if served this way; then French beans, runner beans and especially those delicate white varieties of haricot beans with the yellow pod and white bean; young carrots boiled and left till cold, cold asparagus, sprigs of cauliflower and crisp celery—all these may be served singly or in company with each other.

A very appetizing salad, excellent as a digestive, is of small capsicums, taken rather unripe. They should be split lengthwise and laid in cold water for some hours to reduce the pungency, then drained and torn into pieces. Shred some crisp lettuce leaves, chop a small onion and slice one or two tomatoes. Lay the lettuce within the bowl first, then the tomatoes, next the capsicums, and sprinkle the onion over. Finally pour over one of the above sauces or ordinary mayonnaise.

A vegetable salad where a mayonnaise sauce is used for the dressing should have this poured over on the minute before it is brought to table; otherwise it may separate and the vegetables get sodden. Any kind of garnishing that is suitable may be used—rings of hard boiled egg, nasturtium flowers or leaves and especially chopped nasturtium seeds, sprigs of fennel, parsley, etc.

Salad Dressings Minus Oil.

The success of vegetable salads depends entirely upon the sauce or dressing. The ordinary salad dressing of oil and vinegar, pepper and salt is not sufficient for a vegetable salad.

The cook who finds mayonnaise a difficulty will be helped by following an old recipe for salad dressing the foundation of which is two boiled potatoes, passed through a kitchen sieve, and also the addition of the pounded yolks of two hard boiled eggs.

If these ingredients are mixed gradually and slowly with two, three or four spoonfuls of oil, one or two of vinegar and made mustard, salt and pepper at discretion the result cannot fail to be a smooth, rich, creamy sauce that will offend no one, as badly made mayonnaise must always do.

Another sauce for a salad dressing which will appeal to those who cannot take oil is the following: A yolk of egg taken raw and beaten with a teaspoonful of mustard, a saltspoonful of salt, one-half of a saltspoonful of pepper and a whole teaspoonful of white sugar. Mix in gradually sufficient thick cream to make enough dressing, and, lastly, work in a tablespoonful of vinegar drop by drop.

For Tough Steaks.

If your steak seems tough lay it on a chopping board and beat it well with a rolling pin. This will break up the fibers and do away with the toughness.

Another way of softening it is to soak it in vinegar for a few minutes. The vinegar flavors it deliciously as well as making it tender.

It is a good plan to keep steak for a few days before cooking it, but you must remember that it is no use trying to do so after it has been cut into pieces, or the juice will trickle out and escape. If it is not whole you had better cook it at once and risk the toughness.

Chuck steak is good and reasonable in price. Undercut and fillet are more expensive and delicate.

For the Children

A Little Water Girl Posing at the Well.

When the little girl shown in the picture went on her vacation last summer she was just a little over two years old. She lives in New York city and her visit to a Connecticut farm was the first time in her life that she saw the country. She was greatly interested in everything she saw, because chickens and pigs and lambs do not grow in New York city—that is, they are seldom seen. Miss Ernestine Lindner, that is the little girl's name, couldn't quite get it through her mind that water came out of a well in buckets. At her home it always splashed out when the faucet was opened. But on the farm it was entirely different. When the people wanted a fresh drink they went to the well and hoisted it up from the hole. That strange way of getting water is a great mystery to Ernestine.

Opportunity Described.

Once there stood on a public highway in Greece a statue. The statue was hewn of marble, and it had the power of speech. The story has it that a foot traveler addressed the statue thus:

"Oh, statue, what is thy name?"

"I am called Opportunity," it answered.

"Who made thee?"

"Lysippus was my master."

"Why are thou standing on thy toes?"

"To show that I stay but a moment."

"Why hast thou wings to thy feet?"

"To show how quickly I pass."

"But why is thy hair so long on thy forehead?"

"That men may seize me when they meet me."

"Why is thy head so bald behind?"

"To show that when I have once passed I cannot be caught."

Is not this a wonderful description of Opportunity?

Strange Businesses.

In certain parts of England $5 a hundredweight is paid for green snail shells. They are used for inlaid work by furniture makers and are also turned into buttons.

A great many of the so called pearl buttons we wear on our clothes are made from certain mussels. The mussel shells upon reaching the button factories are sawed into rough blanks, and then turned on a small lathe to the proper shape of the buttons, including the depression in the center. After this two or four holes are bored for the thread. The buttons are polished by means of a chemical fluid.

A Good Card Trick.

Take two aces of spades, split them carefully and paste them on the backs of the king of hearts. Your cards being thus prepared, take your stand on the opposite side of the table to the company, and, holding up in one hand a king of hearts and in the other an ace of spades, announce that you will make them change places with each other. Let each of your hands be covered with a hat. While they are so covered turn the cards, and upon the removal of the hat the transformation will be shown, much to the surprise of your friends.

Lost Rimes.

Resolved that he'd no favors ——,
With courage brave he met the ——,

The Humorous Egg.

In a quill place a small quantity of quicksilver, and, having fastened it well in, insert the quill through the end of a newly boiled egg (while still heated), which egg, being placed on the table, will dance about till cold.

The Tiger's Magic.

Said a tiger, with a curl of his tail:
"I've a magic that never will fail.
If outside I could be
For a moment you'd see
How I'd make all these spectators quail."

A BACHELOR'S REVERIE.

THE light that lies in woman's eyes
Is faithless, so they say.
To my distress, I must confess
I've found it oft that way.
The hours I spent, the bills I rent,
The many days I tarried,
Were used by me quite fruitlessly,
For I am still unmarried.

What did they do? The girls I knew?
There's Jane, she's fat and forty—
But married, yes. And little Bess
Wed a horse jockey sporty.
E'en Ann, the staid'n, not an old maid,
While Rose, who turned the table
On me when I once passed her by,
Espoused the town constable.

There's Clara, Lou and Mabel, too,
All scattered and disbanded.
Sue settled down in some far town,
Marie, the actress, stranded.
So, as I pine to call them mine
Their pictures are imbedded
Within my heart—but we must part,
For they have all been wedded.

The light that lies in woman's eyes
Has kept me very busy,
And if the world by love is whirled
Long since I'll have been dizzy.
But here I plod at thirty-odd
Heart whole and free as ever,
While still those eyes tell lies and lies
Forever and forever.

HOW CANADA HAS HELPED EMPIRE

Efficiency of Her Transport Organization Has Been Demonstrated

When on the declaration of war the Canadian Government was asked by the Imperial Government to supervise the purchase and transport of commissariat supplies which Canada could provide for the Expeditionary Force in France, the Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, was the Minister selected to take charge of this responsible work. It was obvious to so practical a man as Mr. Rogers that the handling of such large orders as were in sight must be done by experienced transport officials, and, among others, he consulted Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Sir Thomas considered it a patriotic duty to place at Mr. Roger's disposal, without cost to the Canadian government, the services of Mr. A. H. Harris, Special Traffic representative of the C.P.R., together with such of the company's staff as Mr. Harris might select for purposes of administration. As this staff eventually numbered nearly twenty picked men, the value of the offer was considerable, and its acceptance by the Canadian Government had given the British War Office an efficient service and saved a large sum of money. Owing to Mr. Harris' initiative and untiring energy, aided by an efficient and loyal staff, a phenomenal tonnage has been moved to the seaboard and thence overseas to French ports of call.

The value of expert handling was demonstrated by the prompt chartering of vessels on a minimum charter rate, enabling the administration to maintain an average freight on oats during the past three months of 25 cents per hundred lbs., and $7.50 per gross ton on hay. Although, owing to the scarcity of tonnage, freight rates have risen rapidly since September, five vessels have cleared from Montreal for a French port during the past ten days, the charter parties averaging 20 cents per 100 lbs. on oats and $8.00 on hay, a saving of close on 50 per cent. on current commercial rates. In addition to this the C.P.R. has made no charge for use of its docks by the chartered vessels and has warehoused everything free—being helped in this generous treatment by the Allan Line, which also placed portions of its sheds at the disposal of the Government. Over 600,000 sacks have been stored in and passed through C.P.R. sheds, and in addition, vast quantities of sacked oats were piled in the upper sections of the C.P.R. dock warehouses and subsequently loaded into chartered vessels consigned to French ports of call.

The Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta Governments received the same generous treatment in connection with the forwarding of their gifts.

The shipments handled by this administration under Mr. Harris' supervision September 1st to date, including flour, War Office supplies, and French army blankets, total the enormous figure of 120,000 tons of freight, free of storage, dockage, or steamship demurrage charges. The rapidity with which supplies went forward was shown in a cable from England to "go slow" as they were arriving too fast to be properly handled. In fact, a record has been established which it will take a long time to beat, and those concerned have come in for well merited congratulation.

The season of St. Lawrence navigation having closed, War Office supplies will continue to be forwarded during the winter months via the Maritime Province ports under Mr. Harris' supervision.

PLANS FOR NEW ASSAULT OR PROVIDING FOR RETREAT KAISER SHIFTS HIS FORCES

Indian Troops Are Said to Have Come Upon Deserted Trenches in Belgium and German Defence Guns Are Reported to be Taking up a Position From Ostend to Courtrai.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — Behind their battle front in Belgium the Germans are said to be engaged in shifting their forces, but whether these movements presage another onslaught or whether the Kaiser has ordered a retirement, has not been ascertained, by the aeroplane scouts of the allies.

From Germany comes an official report to the effect that new attacks may be expected against the allies in the near future.

Despatches from northern France say that the bombardments by the Germans in that region have slackened, and that it is believed that many of the heavy guns have been removed to a new defence line, probably along the line of Ostend, Roulers and Courtrai.

Another indication that the Germans are making preparations to fall back to positions which they have had time to prepare is seen in the fact that in a number of cases the Indian troops with the allies have advanced and found the front rank trenches of the Germans unoccupied and nearly filled with water.

The following official communication was issued last evening in Paris:

"There is nothing of importance to report, beyond some attacks from the enemy to the north of Arras; which were without result."

The official communique, given out yesterday afternoon is as follows:

"In Belgium the enemy is remaining on defensive. The artillery fire has been feeble and we have made progress at certain points. In the vicinity of Fay, we hold securely the positions we occupied Nov. 28.

"In the region of Soissons there has been an intermittent artillery fire directed against the town.

"In the Argonne, several attacks on the town of Bagatelle were repulsed by our troops.

"There has been a heavy fog on the heights of the Meuse.

"In the Woevre district the enemy bombarded the forest of Apremont, but without result.

"There is nothing to report in the Vosges."

The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent in France sends the following despatch:—

The armies that Germany now has in France to oppose the French and British troops are six in number.

The first is under command of Gen. von Kluk, who is still making vain endeavors to break through the allies' line from a point southeast of Amiens to Soissons. The second, which was under command of Gen. von Buelow, is trying to force a passage in Somme and to the north of Arras. The third, under Gen. von Einam, is held in reserve. The fourth, under command of the Duke of Wurtemburg, is operating between Ostend and Armentieres. We know what it lost in its vain and furious attacks along the Yser and the Lys, when it tried to break through the French, British and Belgian lines, and what remains of it now is partly immobilized in the midst of the canals, ditches and overflowing rivers.

The fifth army, which extends from St. Emenhould to Metz, with which fortress it co-operates, suffered enormous losses in its attempts to storm the almost impregnable heights of the Meuse while undertaking what is called the "siege of Verdun." The fact of the matter is that Verdun is so far from being besieged that its big fortress guns have not yet been brought into action since the beginning of the war, and during the past few weeks the French line of battle has been forwarded in that region, so that the French field guns are now bombarding the German positions within sixteen kilometres of the fortifications of Metz. It is Metz, therefore, which seems more likely to be threatened before long than is Verdun.

The sixth German army, under command of the Crown Prince of Bavaria, is drawn between Armentieres and Arras, and it has made no greater progress than any of the other five.

KING GEORGE VISITS FRONT

His Majesty Goes to France to See His Troops

LONDON, Dec. 1.—England was surprised yesterday at the announcement that King George had left Sunday night on a visit to the headquarters of the British forces in France, where he has received an enthusiastic reception from the soldiers.

The King was accompanied by his private secretary, Baron Stamfordham, and his equerry, Major Wigram, and the other members of his suite.

The party left Buckingham Palace Sunday night and proceeded across the channel.

A Reuter despatch from the north of France says that King George arrived yesterday after a very rough passage. The King was received by the Prince of Wales and paid a visit to the hospitals.

Yesterday was the fortieth birthday of Winston Spencer Churchill First Lord of the Admiralty, and the papers, except a few of those antagonistic to him, pay a tribute to his remarkable career.

The 70th birthday of the Queen Mother Alexandra is being celebrated to-day.

After the capture of Czernowitz, following the siege and bombardment of the capital of the Austrian crown land, the Russian army spread over the entire area, clear to the borders of Roumania.

"During the retirement," he says, "with the Germans rapidly advancing and shells bursting less than 100 yards from him, Prince Alexander stood calmly by smoking as though nothing was happening. Whilst we were mounting to get away, His Serene Highness and Col. Ferguson, who accompanied him, were last to leave. In another instance, the prince was standing near a farm house when a shell burst within about ten yards of him. He merely looked round and took in the situation with remarkable coolness, exhibiting not the slightest fear."

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The French Ministry of Foreign Affairs yesterday made public a Yellow Book bearing on the causes of the present war. This French volume is much more complete than the publications of this nature given out up to the present time by other Governments. The French report comprises no fewer than one hundred and sixty documents.

"It was first in the spring of 1913," says the yellow book, "that we noted this colossal and expensive military effort which alone can explain the desire to impose the Germanic superiority and hegemony of the necessity of an offensive war against France; prepare uprisings in Russia and in north Africa; provide for, in case of hostilities, the immediate absorption of Belgium and Holland.

"We declare that Emperor William, who up to that time had posed as a champion of peace, admitted in the course of a conversation with the King of Belgium that he had finally come to share the ideas of his military advisers. He had placed himself among the partisans of a war which he thought would not be long delayed, and the overpowering success of which seemed to him certain. Public opinion, in its turn, permitted itself to be won over by the passions of the military party, and came to consider the affair of Agadir as a defeat for Germany. It regarded the existence of a strong France as a danger to Germany, and the breaking out of a European war as the only remedy for all difficulties and all uncertainties."

From a perusal of the six other chapters of the yellow book there is to be deduced and supported by evidence the fact that the combination between Austria and Germany had decided upon war, and that on four successive occasions this combination endeavored to precipitate war by violent proceedings, the purpose of which was to prevent or to insure the failure of all efforts at conciliation.

The most interesting human document in the yellow book is a letter written by M. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador at Berlin, to Foreign Minister Pichon, in November, 1913, warning the Foreign Office that German hostility to France was increasing and that the Kaiser had ceased to be a partisan of peace. The Ambassador added:

"The King of the Belgians had the same impression after a conversation with the Emperor in the presence of Von Moltke. The reason is, perhaps, that the Kaiser is jealous of the growing popularity of the Crown Prince, who is flattering pan-Germanic passions."

FALL OF CRACOW MAY BE EXPECTED ANY MOMENT

Reports From Great Battle in Poland Are Conflicting and Final Issue Has Not Been Reached—Germans Fighting Desperately to Extricate Themselves From Disastrous feat.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The fall of Cracow may be expected at any time, according to advices received here from Petrograd. Since Saturday the Russians have been shelling the outer fortifications and the fire of their howitzers has reached the citadel of the city. One suburb is already burning, and the entire city has been devastated.

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters at Petrograd last night:—

"Stubborn engagments continue in the direction of Lowicz. An attempt by the Germans to advance in the region of Rzeszow has been repulsed with great losses to the Germans.

"On the rest of the front along the left bank of the Vistula an artillery engagement took place on Nov. 29.

"The Russian troops, after a fight lasting ten days, captured on Nov. 28 the Austrian positions which protected the passes in the Carpathians, extending about 33 miles from Koneczna, which is situated north of Bartfeld, as far as Sczuko, situated south of Mezo Laborcz. The Russians in this district captured cannon, machine guns and many prisoners.

"During the first half of November we captured in all 50,000 Austro-Hungarian soldiers and 600 officers.

"At Plock, Poland, the Russian troops seized four ships laden with machine guns and munitions.

"In East Prussia, minor engagements continue.

"No Turkish warship has been seen in the Black Sea since Nov. 21."

Reference in London to the Russian success in Poland has been somewhat toned down since the cautionary report of Grand Duke Nicholas. Military critics are convinced, however, that the Germans have suffered a check which only the most strenuous efforts of their commanders can save from degenerating into defeat.

From Poland the reports as to the situation between the German and the Russian armies are conflicting. Both Berlin and Petrograd, however, agree that the final issue has not yet been reached. Petrograd reports that the Germans are energetically resisting the Russian advance in the vicinity of Strykow, and the situation is said to be favorable for the Russians.

The Berlin claim is that the Russian offensive movement has been effectually checked, but the final outcome is yet to be disclosed.

The violent battle in Poland is still raging in the region of Strykow and Lodz, says a despatch to The Matin from its Petrograd correspondent.

The Russian pressure is steadily tightening about the three German army corps which were enveloped between Strykow and Brzeziny, and fresh forces have been despatched to the front to meet the Germans' reinforcements, which are advancing from the vicinity of Lenczyca.

The Germans have hastily sent a force of 30,000 men to strengthen the garrison at Breslau, in evident anticipation of a Russian success at Cracow.

It is now definitely known here that at least two army corps have been recalled from Belgium and France to the eastern arena of war.

The Austrian army west of Cracow and Prygreck has been dismembered.

'TWAS KITCHENER'S FEAT.

Retreat of Belgians From Antwerp Assisted By Britain.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — There is one point in Sir John French's despatch upon which the London papers do not make any comment, although it throws a strong light upon what has been a subject of heated controversy. Sir John's reference to Gen. Rawlinson shows plainly that Great Britain's attempt to relieve Antwerp was not confined to the landing of a naval brigade. Evidently a strong British force assisted in the retreat of the Belgian army from Antwerp, and Gen. Rawlinson, who commanded it, was not under the orders of Marshal French, but of Lord Kitchener, from whom he received instructions direct. Rawlinson's force was not placed under French's orders until about Oct. 15. These facts dispose entirely of the theory that Winston Churchill was solely responsible for the measures taken to assist Antwerp.

Shackelton Party Delayed.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Sydney, N.S.W., states that a strike in the dockyards has delayed the departure of the Antarctic ship Aurora, which is to carry a section of Sir Ernest Shackleton's Antarctic expedition, and that the indications are that Shackleton will not start on his trans-Antarctic journey until next year.

Hard to Locate.

Mr. F. B. Carvell, the New Brunswick M.P., a leading spirit in the timber charges recently investigated in that province, tells a story of a constituent of his who bought an auto and proceeded to look it over, and with the aid of the instruction book located the different parts of the machine, says Toronto Saturday Night.

Finally, however, he became puzzled and applied to a neighbor who had owned an auto for several years.

"I can locate everything about the machine," said the new owner, "but one part that I can't seem to find."

"What is that?"

"The momentum."

QUEEN'S MAN GOES TO WAR OFFICE

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Capt. Guttman of Queen's University, Kingston, has been summoned to the War Office to assist the authorities with his knowledge of explosives.

Private Webb, formerly a bank clerk in Ottawa, has been promoted from sergeant to paymaster.

Lieut. Strathy, 9th Horse, Toronto, has been in the hospital for a week owing to a strain, but is expected to rejoin in a few days.

War Office Wants Clothes.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The War Office is giving further orders for clothing. A military representative has left for Canada to supervise the fulfilment of these orders. Canadian manufacturers would doubtless receive larger orders if they were able to guarantee immediate delivery of goods like boots. Clothing must be had right away in view of the present bad weather in the war [illegible].

DISCHARGED HIS TASK FAITHFULLY AND WELL

Appreciative Address and a Presentation for Retiring Pastor

The congregation of the Park Street Baptist Church bade farewell to their pastor, Rev. F. A. Conners, last evening at a congregational social held in the church. Senior Deacon Kemp presided at the meeting, and by way of a few introductory remarks voiced the thoughts of the congregation in their sorrow occasioned by their spiritual leader's departure.

Rev. R. G. Peever, representing the Ministerial Association in the absence of the president, Rev. James Rollins, opened his remarks by referring to the necessary habit of life's law of adjustment to circumstances. A minister often has to substitute for another, and he was happy to represent the Ministerial Association on this occasion, but sorry for the departure of one of its members in the person of Rev. Mr. Conners, who is held in high esteem by all other members. Though his stay in the city was somewhat brief, he nevertheless possessed the confidence of the association, and the members had been deeply impressed by the intensity of his spirit and devotion of his life to his chosen calling.

Rev. Mr. Peever remarked that as he was representing the association he was quite in his province in conveying the kindly interest to the congregation of Park Street Baptist Church in this transition period, due to the departure of Rev. Mr. Conners. No man can live unto himself, neither can a church live unto itself. We are denominational in choice, preference and effort, but in the strongest essentials of religion we are one. Mr. Peever was sure that the Ministerial Association desires that the best for the church's interests may be conserved in this their time without a pastor.

The speaker urged that they have in mind two prominent essentials—the fireside and the altar—the first standing for kindly sympathy, precious memories and strong unity and co-operation, and the second standing for sense of God and purpose of God in their church life and Sabbath worship. If they are common to these essentials, whatever changes may be made, the purpose of God shall be conserved concerning them as a congregation, and their future shall be assured.

Rev. J. R. Webb and J. H. Burnham, M. P., also spoke. A musical program was rendered by Miss Boyle, Miss Calendar, Mr. Thornton and Mr. Lighthart.

Previous to adjourning to the Sunday school room for refreshments Miss M. Mann read the following address to the departing pastor, while Mr. W. G. Barrie presented him with a purse of gold:

To Rev. F. A. Conners,
Pastor, Park St. Baptist Church,
Peterborough.

On behalf of the Park Street Church we, the undersigned, earnestly desire to express to you, our esteemed pastor and beloved brother, on the occasion of your departure from our midst, the deep and sincere appreciation which we feel of the invaluable service which you have rendered to our church and our city since you entered upon your duties as pastor. You have discharged the onerous task which was put upon you at your induction with the utmost credit to yourself and the greatest profit to the church. As a preacher you have been without a peer in the city, at all times expounding the unassailable truths of the Word with powers, and eloquence, "not as pleasing men, but God," and as a pastor you have been at all times most assiduous in your ministrations among all classes, both members and adherents of the church, "with love toward all and favor toward none."

We also wish to express the affection which has been engendered in our hearts for your helpmate. Her tact, her patience, her cordiality and her fervent and pious activity have endeared her to all. As the wife of the pastor, she has been an example and leader not only to the women of the church but also of the whole community.

It is our most earnest wish that your future fields of endeavor may prove fruitful beyond all hope or expectation, and that the God in Whom you have put your trust may continue to use you as a living evangel surcharged with the message that Christ has died and risen again for our eternal salvation.

Signed on behalf of Park Street Church, this 30th day of November, 1914.

C. LUFFMAN,

Address of Class.

The following address was read to Rev. Mr. Conners, when his Bible Class made the presentation of a purse of gold, and said farewell to their teacher, Sunday afternoon:

Dear (Rev.) Mr. Conners: —

It is with a sharp sense of impending loss, tempered by countless happy memories, that we choose this opportunity to say a few words of appreciation of your service to our organization. From Sunday to Sunday you have given of your time and thought and energy for our benefit. Your faithfulness, sincerity and comradeship has placed you high in our esteem. Your unselfishness and devoted efforts to faithfully interpret the great principles of Christ have not been in vain. Conscientious labor is its own record, and is never wasted and wherever your lot is cast you may rest assured of the admiration and genuine respect of the young men of this body to whom the example of your noble life has been an inspiration and a blessing.

You go from our midst perhaps to another field of activity. If so you carry from the young men's class of Park Street Church, the heartiest wishes for success and prosperity in the promulgation of the gospel.

While it is beyond our power to picture the assistance you have been to us, we would appreciate your acceptance of this little purse of gold, as a silent recognition of our admiration and our love.

Again regretfully and reluctantly bidding you good-bye and with the best wishes of the whole class to your devoted helpmate, Mrs. Conners, we say farewell.

Tipperary Banned

Washington, Dec. 1.—Singing It's a Long Way to Tipperary in the navy will be banned, Secretary of the Navy Daniels indicated today in declaring his approval of an order forbidding it among the naval apprentices at the Newport training school.

"While the song does not appear to have been formally adopted by the British Government as a national air, yet it seems to be universally recognized as the marching song of the British army," said Daniels, "and therefore it is doubtful whether it is proper to sing it in the navy."

Picks up Comrade

Corporal James Iles, of the 2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays) has returned to his home at Hurst, Berks, wounded. Among other engagements, he was in the great battle now raging. In an interview he said:

At one time I was firing between a major and a captain, both of whom were shot through the head and killed. Subsequently we were reinforced by a battery of Royal Horse Artillery and the Coldstreams. We then charged through the enemy and wrought terrible havoc. We captured 11 guns and made 500 prisoners.

One magnificent piece of bravery I witnessed was performed by Sergt.-Major Smith of the B Squadron, 2nd Dragoons. One of our men had his horse shot from under him and was himself wounded. We had gone some distance, having been driven out of our position by the Germans, when Sgt.-Major Smith, seeing what had happened, returned, and under heavy fire, with shells bursting all around him, picked up my comrade, placed him across his horse, and brought him back to safety.

ELOQUENT SERMONS BY REV. DR. SMITH OF CHINA

His Discourses on the Religious Life in China Were Heard by Large Congregations

(Special to The Review.)

Millbrook, Dec. 1.—Rev. Dr. Smith a missionary in China for eighteen years, preached both morning and evening, in the Methodist Church on Sunday and two large congregations enjoyed his excellent discourses. Special music given by the choir added to the enjoyment of the services.

For his morning message, Dr. Smith's text was St. Paul's declaration: I am not ashamed of the gospel.

"It is our duty to bring before you the missionary problem," said the preacher.

"I trust this will be a real message from the Master Himself, and I believe it will come to each of our souls. We look out on this beautiful day and we are led to praise God as we have never praised Him before.

At this time many hearts are sore all over the world. We know of course what is going on all over the earth, and for that reason we are able to understand the great strife and struggle this is going on. We can scarcely think of anything else. There is another mighty war going on in heathen lands. If you will view it carefully you will agree that we are not ashamed of the gospel and its work. Christ is the great proof of the success of the gospel.

Out of this great war of today, there will come something better than has ever been in the past. War will cease when men learn the real principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

I am not ashamed of the gospel, it is the power that causes men to be bigger than themselves. You say a man cannot be bigger than himself. I claim he can. He can only do it, though, by coming into contact with Jesus Christ.

One of the most inspiring things I read is about our saddle-back preacher going about preaching the gospel. I am here to testify that we have in Canada the greatest country, therefore, it is imperative for you to be greater people. Is it not possible that as a Canadian people, the real problem rests on us?

We are not ashamed of what the gospel has done for the yellow man. You will all admit, though, that white men look down upon the yellow men, and think he is not equal to him in many standpoints. Now, we see that it is possible for him to be raised up. We see the yellow man of today as a man with capabilities and perhaps going to contribute something to this world.

The Yellow Peril.

People are very much afraid of the yellow peril. If you will read our daily papers you will notice that in every mission there is something said about the Chinaman coming into our country. This shows a great lack of the gospel on the part of white men. We believe, of course, that these slanderous words are not coming from people who have been moved by the gospel. If we are going to aid these people, we must be willing to recognize the yellow man as a brother.

The danger of the yellow peril to us is along this line: the Chinese might sometime arm themselves and come over and make war on us. It is only too true, I may as well tell you, that they were smarting under the injustice of the white man, when we first went to China.

Some of their advanced men were travelling around the world to find wherein lay the power of the different nations. One man came back and said: "I am persuaded that if we are going to tell these men to stand up and take notice, we have to copy the British Navy and the German Army." It will be a great opportunity when we go back to China to tell them that Germany, the country they are copying is a failure, because she lacked the gospel.

There are men in China who say, we will keep on along our own lines of development, because we hate war. We believe when they receive the gospel of Jesus Christ, they will so develop that they will come to meet us as brethren.

We have now ten central stations in China. The British Bible Society left our section for a wider field and left us in charge of the work, so you see this church is now responsible for missions in the province of Sz Chuan.

As you go into the different churches of West China, you can carry your own Hymn Book as well as Bible, as there is no difference in the hymn book of all denominations. We also carry the spirit of unity into our schools.

We have medical men at each station, also educational and pastoral men. In another year we will have graduates from our University in Chentu.

This gospel works in the yellow man's mind, and causes him to make more of himself than he ever expected.

I am confident in saying to you, that any sacrifices you have made, have been well made. The East and West will come together before the Throne of God, and we will then be willing to call the yellow man our brother.

Evening Sermon.

During the course of his sermon at the evening service, Dr. Smith said:—

"In the lesson we read you notice the Apostle Paul says, in going into Athens he was provoked at seeing so many idols. That is a true picture of Oriental lands. Go to any Oriental land and you will see the whole country given over to idols. The Apostle says, "I perceive you are very religious, because I find these letters written over, "To The Unknown God."

I also find such inscriptions written over Chinese idols. This teaches us that there is a clamouring in the human mind for the worship of something different to himself.

You are well aware that Budhism had its home in India. The people of that country are highly religious. They throw their babies into the river as a religious act. In Japan it takes the form of patriotism or hero worship. In Korea they worship in a very primitive style. In China, worship has taken a very different form. In that land you will see idols erected on the roadside, dedicated to some god, with the intention of getting god to give some help.

We will take you right into China and see if it is not something like what Paul saw in Athens. You will find people gathered together in shops. They do this, trying to find something new. They did not have daily papers until recently. I have heard them discuss some of the most important questions of the day. We take advantage of this and go in and try to preach Jesus Christ. On one mountain in China, there are eight temples. One day we made it a point to count the pilgrims going up the mountain. Six thousand people went up that day, and it was just an ordinary day. I talked to many of them and gave them tracts, and found that many were interested. We have an opportunity of raising these people to a higher level. Surely you will agree with me that these people are religious.

Elevating a God.

One day I noticed a little shrine, empty. I called the attention of a foreigner and asked him why it was empty. He said we have put the idol in the city. They had the idea of elevating him from mayor to M. P. We tried to show them that they should not worship idols and that the one true God is Jesus Christ.

Some men are trying to make Confusionism the religion in China. At the present time some of them put Confusius in the position of God, and worship him. The Confusionists are following our example and have started to preach. They must have something to worship, and we should be up and doing, and be alive. Now is our time to get in and give them the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. If Jesus Christ comes into men's lives, He compels them to throw off the old, and all things become new.

The Family Altar.

I went into a house where a man had become converted. I said to him, "Do you talk to your family of Christ?" He said, "We read the Good Book every morning and have family prayers. We might copy that home, as the family altar is one of the most powerful things. There will come a time in China, when the religion of Jesus Christ will be second to none.

I simply try to hold to Jesus Christ and all who have seen him, try to be like him. This grows and grows until finally they get to know Him.

We are teaching them self-support. The Chinese people are going to contribute something to the Christian church. We must support the missionaries now, but as soon as they get a foundation they will certainly support them. If we give them the best I am satisfied they will show the world what they can do.

This marvellous power of the gospel is for these people as well as for us. If we have a part in giving the new religion to these people, I believe there will come back to us thirty, sixty, yea, one hundred fold, and we want to do it for the gospel.

Threw Rifles Down

Here is a story of a typical British soldier of a typical sort:

We were up somewhere Belgium way, and marching backward and forward without seeing anybody, till one day we were told to be ready to take a hill. It looked a very nice sort of hill, quite innocent like, but when we came within about a mile of it it began to rain cats and dogs, as you might say, caterwauling and barking shells, shrapnel and bullets all over us. I got one in the leg, but went on for a bit, until we were all called back. They wanted to send me to the rear and back to England, but I said no, and nipped on a gun truck, and was driven like a king for a day or two. After about a week I was all right again, and we were pretty nearly always scrapping.

Our bayonets are fine, especially for the rings round the muzzles of our rifles, which catch the German bayonets and snap them like straws. Lord knows how many I stuck, whether it was ten or twenty. It was a grand scrimmage and I was real sick when a bullet nipped up my arm from elbow to thumb and stopped me. But we got that hill all the same.

One of our chaps has been clean mad ever since — went off his head in the fighting and still as silly as ever. The Germans can't fight for nuts when they are up against anything. They are all right when they are lying smug a mile off. And they don't want to fight a bit. One time, when we charged a line of them, instead of standing up to us, they all threw themselves down flat and chucked their rifles at us. One place we cornered a whole ambulance corps and one or two companies of artillery and they gave themselves up without a whimper.

An Expensive Job

Governorship of Ontario Will Cost Six Times the Salary This Year

The new Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and his family have now taken up their residence in the temporary Government House in Toronto. About next summer they will move into the new Government House—the palace (for it is little less) in Chorley Park. Colonel Hendrie is known to be wealthy and his wife to be a charming society leader. And the structure in Chorley Park is large enough for the exercise of all the hospitality that even the most hospitably-inclined of lieutenant-governors and their wives can possible wish to dispense.

What will it cost to keep up the new Government House? Well, not even the Lieutenant-Governor himself can answer that question as yet. He will have a better idea of the answer in a year or two's time. But it is certain that it will cost a good deal more than it did the old one on King and Simcoe streets. And yet the expense of keeping up that house was by no means met by the official salary of the Lieutenant-Governor, which is $10,000 a year.

"I should think," said one well versed in Toronto society and its ways, and in the cost of mixing in it, "that it must have cost the late Lieutenant-Governor at least $50,000 or so. And in the new mansion the new Lieutenant-Governor will probably find that he has to spend $65,000 a year at a low estimate."

The official entertainments given by the Lieutenant-Governor have always comprised, ever since there was such a functionary in Ontario, three or four official dinners, when the Legislature is in session, a couple of big balls, and several small dances, besides some "at-homes." That has always been something like the annual program. And these official entertainments are very expensive. For champagne is expected (and not in vain) at a Lieutenant-Governor's board. And you cannot get much of a champagne under $3.50 a bottle, and a bottle, alack! does not hold more than six not very large glasses.

Of recent years the expense attaching to the Lieutenant-Governorship has gone up for two reasons. First, royalty comes a good deal to Government House. And, though royalty's personal tastes may be simple in the extreme, this cannot be assumed as a matter of course. Provision must be made as though they were not. Secondly, automobiles are coming into favor as equipages for the Government House party. And automobiles are more expensive than carriages to keep up. In the new House, of course, the staff of servants will have to be very considerably larger. Some forty years or so ago the staff of indoor servants (exclusive of those employed in the stables and garden) used to consist of a butler, three footmen, a French cook and his wife, and seven or eight women servants. In addition, there were the two A.D.C.'s, whose stipends, however, are paid by the Provincial Government, and a secretary.

The present Lieutenant-Governor and his two immediate predecessors —Sir John Gibson and Sir W. Mortimer-Clark—are all known to be rich men. But, as a matter of fact, all of Ontario's Lieutenant-Governors have been fairly rich men, with the exception, perhaps of the Hon. John Beverley Robinson, who was comparatively poor, but whose wife was noted for her grace as a hostess.

SAVED BY THE GUNS.

Lance-Corporal Boyle, of the Gordon Highlanders, who is also in hospital, remarked:

Our battalion—or what was left of us after Mons—was in the fighting line, when an order was given for a general retreat. A despatch rider gave the message to a part of the division, but on his way to us he was killed by a shell. We did not know about the order, so we stuck to our position The Germans advanced in such force that we were at last compelled to retire, and we lost a lot of jolly good fellows. However, I doubt if any of us would have been left if it had not been for the 135th Battery. They covered our retreat, sending out such a terrible fire that the enemy were afraid to approach any nearer.

His Shaving Kit

The following are extracts from a letter dated Sept. 24 sent to his wife in London, of an officer in a line regiment:

We got some English papers lately, and realized for the first time what critical positions we have all been in, up to about the first week in this month. We have been fighting against enormous odds. Now I hope the tide has turned in our favor. And we have been advancing for the last three weeks. The Germans will not face our infantry fire; they say it is murderous. Their artillery is excellent, and they seem to rely principally on it.

They have enormous guns, and the shells make a hole in the ground the size of our small lawn. Fortunately the effect is very local, though it is rather trying to one's nerves. My company acted as rear guard at Mons and covered the retirement of the battalion. We were very lucky, as, although charged by cavalry, fired at by infantry, and shelled all the time, I did not have a man hit. It seems almost like a miracle.

What hits us most is the weather. I carry my "British warm" and a waterproof on my horse, also my shaving kit. My valise I have not seen for over a month. We sleep in the open, as we stand, whether it is hot or cold. If we get wet through, as we often do, we simply have to wait till we dry. It seems almost incredible that we can do this day after day and survive; yet we all keep fit. I interview German prisoners sometimes for generals.

German Fleet Preparing to Attack Russian Seaports?

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 1.—Via London.)—The German fleet is becoming more active in the Baltic, Scandinavian and Russian despatches indicate preparations for striking a blow at Russian ports, even entering the Gulf of Finland and possibly bombarding Petrograd.

It is reported here from several sources that there is great concentration of the fleet and German transport steamers along the Baltic coast and a withdrawal of warships from Kiel to strengthen the Baltic squadron operating northwards on the Gulf of Bothnia. (Excision by censor here.)

Battle Imminent.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 1.—A squadron of German warships is at the mouth of the Plata river, and a battle with a British or a Japanese squadron is momentarily expected. Apparently the German squadron, under Admiral von Spee, has escaped from the pursuing Japanese in the Pacific and has passed through the Straits of Magellan and reached the south Atlantic.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30.—Liverpool cables were unexpectedly lower this morning, which caused a weak opening on the Winnipeg market, wheat being ⅝c to ⅞c lower. Prices held steady at the light break, and trading was fairly active. This being the end of the month November prices declined to near the December basis. A prominent member remarked that this was the quietest day of closing of navigation in his remembrance. Another feature was the big decrease in both American and European visible, which caused prices to jump fully a cent when these figures were posted. Wheat closed ⅝c lower for November, ⅛c to ½c higher for other months. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛c lower, and flax ⅝c to ½c higher.

The cash demand was very slow and offerings fairly liberal. Exporters were buying to fill space. Cash oats, barley and flax were quiet.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Business over the cable in the grain market continues very quiet, and the market in this respect is dull, but there is a fair demand from local buyers for coarse grains, and quite a few car lots changed hands at steady prices. There is no change in the condition of the market for flour, prices being firm, with a fair trade passing for local account, but the export trade is quiet. In millfeed the feeling is strong under a continued good demand.

A weaker feeling has developed in the market for butter, and prices at the auction sales today were 1⅜c to 1½c per pound lower than a week ago, finest creamery selling at 25¾c, but there is no actual change in jobbing prices yet. Cheese is strong, with a good enquiry from over the cable for supplies. Exports for the week were 41,808 boxes, as compared with 24,032 for the same week last year. The demand for eggs is good, and the market is fairly active at firm prices.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.17⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.14⅛ to $1.16⅝; No. 2 do., $1.10⅛ to $1.14⅝; Dec., $1.12⅛.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered at $7.50, and $7.75 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the feature of today's trade was the weaker feeling for canning stock owing to the continued liberal supplies coming forward and prices declined 25c to 50c per cwt. as compared with this day week. Trade was slow, bulls selling at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $3.65 to $4 per 100 pounds. There was practically no change in the market for butchers' cattle. Good to choice steers were scarce.

Best steers were offered at $7.25, but the bulk of the trading was done at prices ranging from $6.25 to $7 per cwt. A stronger feeling developed in the market for lambs today, and prices advanced 10c per 100 pounds, owing to lighter receipts. Sales of Ontario stock were made at $7.25 to $7.60, and Quebec at $6.85 to $7.10 per cwt. Sheep were unchanged, ewes selling at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt.

Hog prices have declined 50c to 60c per 100 pounds, owing to the fact that supplies coming forward have been in excess of requirements. Selected lots sold at $7.80 to $8.10; sows at $5.80 to $6, and stags at $3.90 to $4 per cwt. weighed off cars.

ENEMY IS WORN OUT

German Partial Attacks Have not Altered Line

PARIS, Dec. 1.—An official statement, was issued here last night which is, in part, as follows:—

"A few details about what has occurred on the front from Nov. 21 to Nov. 27, inclusive: The general situation has not materially changed in that period. The enemy has worn himself out in partial attacks, without result. Our counter-attacks have inflicted on him heavy losses and have brought some gain to ourselves.

"To sum up, our material and moral situation from the sea to the Lys is very good. From the Lys to the Oise the enemy has not shown on this part of the front greater activity than on the northern section. There was no attack by the infantry. The attacks by the artillery were very intermittent and were lacking in spirit. Our artillery during that week maintained its advantage.

"Our infantry has gain brilliant results. It is to be noted that every advance it makes is at once definitely secured by the establishment of entrenchments. At Lievin, on the 21st, our infantry brought to a head an audacious operation which had been prepared by sapping. Our troops invaded a German trench, killed 200 of its occupants and installed themselves in the trench, after having burned, in front of it, two artillery observation stands.

"In upper Alsace and in the Vosges our Alpine infantry has assumed a remarkably ascendancy over the enemy. When they are confronted by the 'Black Devils' the Germans do not leave their trenches. We have taken from them all those that were impeding us. In this region, as also in the vicinity of St. Mihiel, our heavy artillery has made nearly impossible the victualling of the enemy."

Origin of the Curfew

What is the curfew? Its etymology carries its history with it. The word comes from the French couvre-feu (cover fire), a bell tolled at evening as a signal to the inhabitants to cover fires, extinguish lights and retire to rest. It is erroneously said to have been instituted in England by William the Conqueror as an arbitrary bit of tyranny, and the nursery historian has waxed sentimental over the wrongs of the conquered Saxon, and conjured up pictures that must be balm to the downtrodden Celt. Even Thomson tells us:

> The shivering wretches at the curfew sound
> Dejected sunk into their sordid beds.

But the couvre-feu was known before William's time, both in England and on the continent. He did, indeed, issue an edict on the subject, and although this edict may incidentally have helped to put down the Saxon beer clubs, which were hotbeds of political conspiracies, its primary aim was as a precaution against fire. That danger was an ever present one in those days of chimneyless wooden houses.

The ancient city ordinances of London abound in stringent fire regulations. None of them, however, was more effective than the "cover fire" bell, which as far back as the time of King Alfred was rung in certain places in England. William's edict rendered compulsory an ancient custom. But it was a wise legislative act and not a bit of arbitrary tyranny. We find plenty of early traces of the custom or its equivalent, as, for instance, the blowing of a horn at the market place in continental Europe.

A TOWN THAT LIVES IN DREAD OF EXTINCTION

It's a Solemn Spectacle for the Dwellers in the Shadow of the Gloomy Peak When "Old Faithful" Explodes as it Does Regularly Once a Year.

It is singular how indifferent to a persistently threatened danger human beings can become, even when the danger is of a deadly nature and may imperil their very lives. Harry H. Dunn, in the Montreal Herald and Star, tells of a case in which a whole townful of people lie under the constant threat of extinction by a volcano.

The roof of the little boxlike hotel in Colima, capital of the state of Colima, in Mexico, was freshly drenched with water in a vain effort to fight off some of September's heat. I think there were eighteen of us gathered there in the cool, gray night. The almost silent town lay like a black and white checkerboard at our feet.

Twenty miles away, across a valley still green with the rains of summer, rose a conical mountain, almost solitary. Even by night it looked sinister; by day it was terrible, with its barren, lava coated sides, its gas exuding cone shunned even by the vultures which haunted mountain and plain. It was the volcano of Colima, the "Old Faithful" of craters, which explodes regularly once a year—and it was almost due for an exhibition.

"He should begin soon," droned the hotel keeper. "Maybe today, maybe tomorrow, maybe not for a week, but it is the middle of September, and it is his time."

The old man had scarcely finished when a bubble, black as night, crowded itself out of the broken end of the mountain, which we knew was a pot of molten stone, twenty miles away. The bubble, so dark that we could see it plainly, swelled like a growing puffball and then, pushed out from below, rose like a giant umbrella, with incredible speed, into the sky. Behind it came a straight tubular column of smoke, such smoke as that of which the bubble was made, black and thick and ominous.

Up, up, up, rose the bubble, riding, it seemed, on the column below it. It appeared to hang like a huge blanket a thousand feet in the heavens; then slowly, like some great octopus feeling its way along the bed of the sea, the bubble flattened and began to spread out. Probably it moved miles every minute, but it was far away and so monstrous that we could not judge it by ordinary standards.

It seemed that the town below us heaved a long sigh. The thing for which its ten or twelve thousand inhabitants had been waiting was about to happen. The mighty drama was about to be enacted before their eyes, as it was before the Spanish conquistadores set foot on Mexican soil. Yet to them the spectacle was ever exciting, for its end might be death, might be destruction of their town, as it had been the destruction of the many smaller towns clustered more closely round the skirts of the gloomy peak.

The roofs filled with people. Here and there a woman screamed; many, both men and women, prayed; querulous cries and questions from children rose on the night air, and the bells in the churches began to ring, slowly at first and then more rapidly, as the fire god began to play about the crest of Colima.

Like a waterspout on the crest of a lofty roller at sea, the smoke column and its spreading top rested for a moment on the volcano and then, with a thunderous outrush of air, which must have been heard for at least a hundred miles, vanished into thin air. A column of fire took their place.

No ordinary fire was this. No flame ever kindled by human hands burned so white as that tower of luminous bits of lava and sand and stone and superheated gases that shot upward from the mouth of the crater.

I gazed at it spellbound as the light of day spread round all over the valley and the city. A constant roar came from the volcano, a roar so insistent, so monotonous, that I could not hear what the old hotel keeper who stood at my elbow was saying. I bent my ear to him and heard: "Not so bad as last year. Mayhap we shall not be harmed."

Too Modest.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's own story of his first experience as a playwright is instructive. He took his maiden attempt to a manager, who read it carefully and offered to accept it. "Now," said he to the overjoyed dramatist, "what do you expect me to pay you for this?" The young author, not liking to be too forward, modestly suggested 30 guineas. The manager immediately wrote out a check for the desired amount and, presenting it to Gilbert, said: "Young man, let me give you a word of advice. Never sell so good a play for such a small amount again."

A Curious Trial.

The records of Kirby Malzeard church in Yorkshire, England, mention a curious trial which took place in the church in the seventeenth century. A woman was tried for stealing a skull out of the churchyard. Her defense was that she took the skull to put under the pillow of a sleepless friend as a charm to make her sleep. She was reprimanded and ordered to put the skull back.

THEY LOST THE PRIZE.

But Then the Contenders Were Only a Lot of Sea Gulls.

Some campers at a northern lake once put a big fish on a sloping rock near the water's edge to see what the gulls would do.

A soaring scavenger soon spied it and swooped down for a feast.

Seizing the fish in his talons the voracious bird flapped its great wings and screamed greedily as he tried to make off with his find.

But the fish was too heavy to be lifted. The only result of repeated attempts was that the fish began to slide toward the water and soon fell in with a splash.

Diving after it, the gull brought it to the surface, and then began a curious spectacle. Time after time the gull hoisted the fish as high as his strength would permit, only to weaken and let the fish fall again. The noise attracted other gulls and a battle ensued. First one gull and then another would dive for the fish, lift it part way above the water's surface and be set upon by other gulls until the fish slipped back, a sacrifice to jealousy and greed.

For almost an hour this struggle lasted, ending only when all the gulls were tired out. The prize was lost.

A fraction of the energy thus spent in scrapping over an object too big to handle would have secured for each gull an ample meal of smaller fish, with which the lake abounded.

Or, a little co-operation, instead of so much crazy competition, would have lifted the fish to a safe place on dry land, where all the gulls could have feasted at their leisure.

But they were only gulls; hungry, unthinking, gluttonous gulls.

Of course, men would have known better. Yes?—Cleveland Press.

The suffrage campaign in England has cost the lives of 30 women.

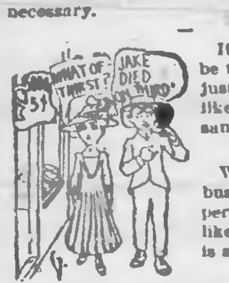
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MISFORTUNES may be tolerated when we are comfortable and they are well bred enough to not force themselves upon our notice.

Probably the reason why there are so many cures for baldness in the world is because there are so many bald heads.

When a widow singles a man out from the throng it is dimes to dewberries that he does not remain single a great while.

When men's and women's clubs reach a somewhat higher degree of development homes will no longer be necessary.



It is hard to be tactful and act just as you feel like acting at the same time.

When we are busy the only person that we like to hear talk is a deaf mute.

A girl who can't talk baseball doesn't care much about a young man who does.

Sometimes a man is popular because he has so many enemies.

Considering its universal application, it is remarkably singular that common sense isn't more fashionable.

It is hard to make an old timer understand that things are as they ought to be and that we aren't speeding to the bowwows.

Suspicious.

"You seem to have a lot of money."

"Do I?"

"Yes."

"That's all right."

"But I'd like to know one thing."

"Where'd you get it?"

"Say, do you take me for a grafter?"

Startling News.

"How did you get through the census ordeal, Miss Backnumber?"

"Oh, very nicely."

"Did you tell the man how old you were?"

"I certainly did."

TWO O.H.A. TEAMS TO REPRESENT PETERBORO

Peterboro will be represented by two teams in the O.H.A. this season, a Junior and an Intermediate. This was decided last evening at the meeting of the executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club held in the Empress Hotel. The question of having a Junior team has been hanging fire for some time as the Hockey Club was uncertain whether the Peterboro Athletic Club intended entering a team or not. The officers of the P. A. C. notified them to the effect that their club has disbanded and the Hockey Club then came to the conclusion that they would enter the two teams.

R. M. Glover was appointed delegate to the O.H.A. annual meeting in Toronto next Saturday and F. D. Craig was added to the executive committee. The latter will concentrate his efforts on the Juniors and a meeting of all aspirants to that team is called for seven-thirty Friday night of this week. It is the intention to utilize the short time between now and the opening game to get the boys into fair condition.

All Intermediates will be asked to attend the meeting toward the end of the week and preliminary matters such as training classes will be discussed.

COMMENT

As You Like it

IT IS HARDLY necessary for us to state that we endorse the actions of the Peterboro Hockey Club at their meeting last night. Over a month ago an item in these columns pointed out that the only way to overcome the troubles which confronted the club was to appoint F. D. Craig as a member of the executive and permit him to care for the interests of the Junior O.H.A. team. They have done so and the only thing to be regretted is the fact that it took the club so long to act. To have the Juniors in any kind of good shape for the opening game will call for considerable work and that work cannot be commenced too soon. A meeting is called of all prospective juniors for Friday night and it is expected that training will be started early next week.

THERE IS A MOVEMENT on foot to hold a concert for the Hockey Club. It has been suggested that Asa Huycke's Minstrels be secured to furnish the entertainment and undoubtedly the officers of the club will put forth every effort to engage the local production for an evening. The idea is far ahead of bringing in outside talent as the concert held last fall was made up of Toronto comedy and occasioned a deficit of some $50.

WITH ROSS CRAIG on the line of the Hamilton Rowing Club the team from the Ambitious City expect to defeat the Argos at Rosedale tomorrow afternoon. The T.R. and A.A. team has applied to Osgoode Hall in an endeavor to have the game stopped. The other clubs concerned have no expectation that the request will be granted.

THE MERCANTILE BASEBALL League has completed the season's business and handed each team a cheque for $2.70. The share going to the Printers team has been left with us and if the secretary calls he can have it—money is no object to us.

EXECUTIVE MEETS FRIDAY.

Toronto, Dec. 1. — The Ontario Hockey Association Executive is called to meet on Friday evening, when the reports to be presented to the annual meeting on Saturday will be considered.

At the meeting in Ottawa on Friday to organize the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association the O.H.A. which is the original, the largest and the strongest of all hockey governing bodies, will be represented by Past President Ed. Wettlaufer and Francis Nelson.

A POLAR BEAR HUNT.

Frank Houghton contributes a vivid account of a polar bear hunt in the arctic regions to the December issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor, Ltd. "The Hermit of White Otter Lake" tells the story of a canoe trip that led to a wonderful house in the woods, built by old Jimmy McOuat, sportsman recluse. "Toik's Soliloquy" is a fascinating tale of a brindle bull terrier who saved his master from financial ruin by his ability to fight, and who later straightened out the crooked course of true love. "The Bird Dog" will appeal to all those interested in this "embodiment of canine intelligence." Other articles there are of outdoor life from Atlantic to Pacific and departments full of interest to the sportsman, hunter and fisherman.

WAS IN FAMOUS CHARGE

Private Mayson, 9th Lancers, writing to relatives at Ryde, I. W., says: My regiment was engaged in a terrible charge on Monday. Out of 600 of us 50 were killed, but we managed to capture four German guns. My horse was shot in the neck and fell. I managed to catch a riderless horse, which carried me safe out of the firing line. On Sunday last the regiment was in a village. Some of our men were preparing to blow up a bridge when the Germans attacked them. One of our chaps was knocked over. I was standing about one hundred yards away and, seeing him fall, I rode down to him, and managed to get him out of the firing line.

OTTAWA COLLEGE WANTS HOCKEY

Ottawa Citizen:—There is material at Ottawa College for a strong team, and it is to be hoped the Intercollegiate Union sees its way clear to admit Father Stanton's protege. Afternoon games could be played here, as at Montreal and Toronto. "Laurie" Roberts, a well known Ottawa boy, is president of the Intercollegiate League, and is in favor of admitting the Garnet and Grey. Intercollegiate hockey did not come in for much patronage when Ottawa College were in the league before, as they were grouped with Laval only, but with McGill, University of Toronto and Queen's competing against them, the Sandy Hill students would undoubtedly make a success of the game in Ottawa.

BOWLING

Bowling scores at the Y.M.C.A. last night were:—

In the roll-off in the tie for the first game, Beginners won. Flowers was high with 174 single and 455 for 3.

Unknowns and C.G.E. Engineers roll tonight at 8 o'clock.

WIN COST DEARLY

Argos won the Big Four championship, but it cost them dearly. Dr. Smirle Lawson, the huge halfback, who went in the second half and played such grand ball, fractured a bone in the socket of his ankle, and is out of the game for the rest of the season. Lawson's grand plunging saved the day for Argos at Hamilton a week ago Saturday and paved the way for the winning of the Big Four title. Saturday he had the grandstand on its feet time and time again with his plunging runs. His injury came when he tried to tackle Leckie in the dying moments of the game. He wants to get into the Dominion final against his old alma mater Saturday if Argos beat H.R.C., but doctors who examined the ankle give him no hope for such luck.—Toronto Star.

JAKE DAUBERT LED NATIONAL

Brooklyn Swatter Met Pill for an Average of .329

New York, Dec. 1.—In the list of the National League batting averages published yesterday, showing fifteen only among baseball's "three hundred," four of these, Wiltse, Piez, Erwin, and Strand, with 667, 375, 348, and 333 respectively, played in less than fifteen whole games, and cannot, therefore, be considered in determining the leader of the league.

Jake Daubert, of Brooklyn, with an average of 329, is the real leader, as he played in 126 games; Becker, of the Philadelphias, is second with 325; Wheat, of Brooklyn, third with 319; Jake Dalton, of Brooklyn, fourth with 319; and Chas. Stengel, of Brooklyn, fifth with 316.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

AN eight dollar suit seems to look well on your dearest chum, but when you try one yourself—well, that's another story.

Most any of us can read the signs of the time nowadays because they are painted on all the billboards.

In quarrelsome time prepare to make peace profitable.

No wonder we are all so worn and tired out; we are chased by an army of microbes day and night.

When a woman suffers in silence it takes all of her time and strength to tell her neighbors about it.

No roast, whether verbal or culinary, is much relished if it is overdone.

The reason why a woman seldom listens to her husband is because she has heard it all before.

Longing.

I'd like to duck this care and strife
And go to lead the quiet life,
Far from the busy, bustling throng,
If I could take some things along.

Let's see, my books I want to take,
My yacht to sail around the lake,
Three trunks of useful things to wear,
A hammock and my easy chair,

My grand piano—yes, indeed,
My auto I will surely need,
And, not to do the thing by half,
An operatic phonograph.

Oh, yes, the simple life for me!
I want to live it, as you see.
Cut out the busy city ways
For quiet, rural, rustic days.

His Experience.

"Does her father object to young men?"

"Sometimes he does."

"How did you find him?"

"Something of a kicker."

Scared.

"Don't you dare let your dog bite me, miss."

"He will if you don't get out of the way."

"You will be sorry."

"Why?"

"Because I am cold pisen."

"Oh, come here, doggie, come here!"

But Not Remunerative.

"My intentions are good, anyway."

"Yes, but you know you have been owing me a long time."

"True, but can't you give me credit for my good intentions?"

"At that I can't see that they increase my balance at the bank."

Lost It.

"Did you ever see a girl who met her ideal?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

"Oh, she lost it."

"How?"

"Married it."

How He Feels.

"There is only one thing about this vegetable diet that suits me."

"Really?"

"Truly."

"And what is that?"

"The absence of the butcher's bill."

The Common View.

"He is a grafter pure and simple."

"Got the goods on him?"

"Yes. It is a sure case."

"Couldn't cover his trail?"

"No; he is a crook."

"Worse than that; he is a dub."

Needed the Money.

"Would you rather write for the present or the future?"

"For the future, except for one thing."

"What is that?"

"I have to live in the present."

MR. BOWSER OBJECTS

To the Raucous Cries of the Peddlers on His Block

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

"I'VE got a feeling," said the cook as Mrs. Bowser paid a visit to the kitchen, while Mr. Bowser had gone to the drug store on an errand.

"What sort of a feeling?" was asked.

"As if I was going to be blown up."

"It's nonsense. What could blow you up?"

"Mr. Bowser is always experimenting."

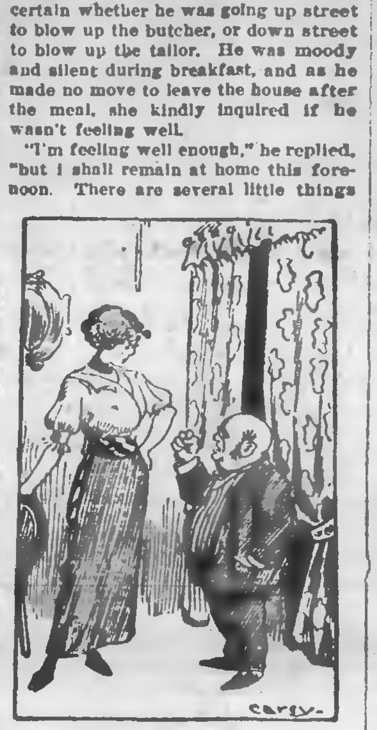
"But he hasn't blown any one up."

"But something is coming, ma'am. He's mighty quiet, and I'll bet he is getting ready to break out."

"Don't be foolish, and don't leave the tea kettle on the stove without any water in it."

All went well during the evening, but next morning, when Mr. Bowser got up, there was an uncertain look in his eyes—that is, Mrs. Bowser was not certain whether he was going up street to blow up the butcher, or down street to blow up the tailor. He was moody and silent during breakfast, and as he made no move to leave the house after the meal, she kindly inquired if he wasn't feeling well.

"I'm feeling well enough," he replied, "but I shall remain at home this forenoon. There are several little things I want to look into and straighten out, and one of them is right at the door now."



"BUT IT'S AGAINST THE LAW!"

"Do you mean the fruit-peddler?"

"That's exactly what I mean. I am going to find out whether a man with an old horse and rickety wagon has any legal right to stop in front of my house and shout and yell and shriek and howl and bawl and roar like that. Just listen to him! By the living jingo, but it's no wonder that we have had five deaths on this street within the last two weeks."

"But you—you won't go and say anything to him?"

"Won't I?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he clapped on his hat and opened the door and hustled down the steps, while the cat and Mrs. Bowser looked after him.

An Exchange of Amenities.

The peddler was shouting out his wares at the top of his voice.

"Look here, you idiot," began Mr. Bowser as he walked up to him. "I want to know who gave you the legal right to murder folks with your voice?"

"D'ye mean my shoutin'?" asked the man in considerable astonishment.

"Of course I do. I want to know if the law gives you the right to whoop and yell and bellow and shriek and groan in order to call attention to the hog feed in your wagon! If it does I'll see that it's changed. If it doesn't I want you to quit."

"Say, old man," replied the peddler, "you must have fell out of bed this mornin'. I've been selling vegetables for five years, and you are the first person I've met who objects to my voice. Better tie a towel around your head and go to bed ag'in!"

"Don't give me any impudence!" shouted Mr. Bowser. "You may be licensed to cart vegetables and fruit around, but you are not licensed to set a thousand people's nerves on edge by your howling!"

A crowd began to gather, and realizing that he would have the worst of it Mr. Bowser walked into the house. The peddler yelled after him and the children applauded and Mrs. Bowser said:

"Don't you see you can't do anything with such men as that? They are coming along here from daylight till dark, and every one yells just like this man."

"But it's against the law, and I know it is!" shouted Mr. Bowser.

"Well, there's lots of things against the law, but you can't change 'em. If the police permit these peddlers to yell and scream they won't stop their noise for anything you say."

Mr. Bowser went out and sat down on the front steps. The peddler grinned at him and moved on, but it was scarcely a minute before an old clothes man turned the corner. He had yelled about sixteen times before he reached the Bowser gate, and there stopped and looked at the man on the steps and screamed out in agonized tones:

"Old clo'! Old clo'! Cash for old clo'!"

"Move on, you scoundrel!" shouted Mr. Bowser.

"Old clo'! Old clo'! I buy old clo' for cash!"

"By the beard of Pluto, but I'll have your life if you don't move on!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser, as he clattered down the steps with a tragedy in either eye.

The old clothes man ran across the street, but no farther, and from his new position he shouted and yelled until he had collected a crowd of half a hundred, and Mr. Bowser had been forced into the house.

"You see you can't do anything," said Mrs. Bowser.

"I will do something," he hotly replied. "Are all the ordinances of this city made for the benefit of such howling demons? Has a taxpayer and property owner no rights? If there are no laws to protect me, then I'll protect myself."

Lays Hands on an Offender.

Out he went again, and he was just in time to encounter a man who had turned in from Fourth street, yelling:

"Knives to grind-o! Knives to grind-o! Bring out your knives to grind-o!"

Mr. Bowser walked down to the gate. He looked like a dangerous man, but the knife grinder was willing to take chances if he could make a nickel. He halted his grinder on wheels and uttered his yell of "Grind-o!" as if Mr. Bowser was forty rods away. He was still hanging on to the "o" when he was seized and banged against the fence, and a voice rang in his ears:

"You infernal nuisance, shut up, or I'll break your neck!"

The grinder shut up. He looked into Mr. Bowser's eyes and became afraid. However, as he was released after a minute and told to move on his courage returned, and he hadn't got more than ten feet away before he turned and said:

"You knocka and banga me, and I taka de law on you!"

Mrs. Bowser opened the door and tried to argue the matter with Mr. Bowser, but he declared he'd wet his hands in the life blood of the next nuisance who came along. He didn't have over ten minutes to wait. A junk dealer, an umbrella mender, a tinker and a popcorn man suddenly appeared in company, and all were yelling to drown the notes of the band on the corner. Mr. Bowser rose up like a bull about to make his last charge and was at the gate as they halted.

"Old junk! Umbrellas to mend! Fix your pans! Fresh popcorn!" shouted the four, as they waved their arms.

Cheers For Mr. Bowser.

Mrs. Bowser threw up the window to call out, but she was too late. Mr. Bowser had sailed in. He upset the junk cart and junk dealer. He overturned popcorn cart and popcorn dealer. He filled the air with the old umbrellas and tinker tools, and it was Spion Kop over again, with Mr. Bowser in place of the Boers. He met the enemy and they were his, and in five minutes he was in possession of the field of battle. He was cheered by the crowd which gathered, and a dozen overenthusiastic taxpayers insisted on a speech. A man had arisen who had taken up the cudgel for reform, and they wanted to know his policy toward firecrackers, baseball and kite-flying. Mr. Bowser backed up against the gate, but before he could collect his oratory a fat policeman seized him and said:

"You old ruffian! But you want to get up a riot and disturb half the town, do you? Come along with me!"

Mr. Bowser was walked to the police court and left in the "pen" till the judge was ready to hear his case and say:

"You may be a citizen and taxpayer and a reformer, but you have no right to take the law into your own hands. I fine you $20, and if you are brought here before me again on the same charge I shall feel it my duty to put you where you can do no more harm for six months!"

"Didn't I tell you how it would end?" asked Mrs. Bowser, when he got home.

But Mr. Bowser said no word in reply.

The Riming Speller.

A correspondent mentions the difficulty experienced by budding authors in spelling words in which dipththongs "ei" and "ie" appear. An easy manner to recall the order of precedence of the vowels is contained in an ancient rime:

"I" before "e"
Except after "c"
Or when sounded like "a"
In "neighbor" and "weigh."

ANOTHER PERIL

THE doctors are knocking on kissing,
They call it a dangerous thing,
Insisting in words quite emphatic
That bliss of that sort has a sting;
That one in that way to another
The germs of disease may transmit.
If it is so fraught with disaster
We wonder if doctors have quit.

It may be the doctors have reason
For trying to banish the kiss
That's planted by some one impulsive
Right square on the lips of a miss,
But if they are really in earnest
In making this public attack
They have on their hands quite a contract
Before they can banish the smack.

It may be all wrong, this indulging
In thrilling exchanges of bliss,
But who is to blame, Mister Doctor,
Since nature invented the kiss?
It may be the means of transmitting
A bunch of diseases; but, say,
Who wouldn't be sick with the measles
If he could secure them that way?

We like to give heed to the doctor
And take to our hearts his advice,
But till he can show us some figures
We'll have to put this chunk on ice,
For, though we may solemnly promise
No longer the kiss to apply,
Just where it appears to be needed
We'll get a few in on the sly.

MAXIM GUNS ON STRETCHERS

Lance Corporal M'Auslan, of the 1st Fusiliers, who was wounded at Mons, is now convalescent at his home at Woodlee, where prior to the war he was an asylum attendant. The Fusiliers resisted the German attack to cross the canal at Mons. The Fusiliers had to abandon their packs on the retreat from Mons, and the Germans finding them, they dressed the peasants of the district in Fusiliers' greatcoats, and made them march, men, women and children, in front of their forces. A german ruse was to carry their maxim guns on a stretcher, covered over as if it was a wounded or dead soldier who was being removed, and when the Fusiliers ceased firing they dropped the stretcher and set the maxims in motion.

RECORD FOR NOVEMBER

The Lowest Temperature in Eighteen Years Was Recorded

The highest temperature in November was 61 degrees, on the first day of the month. The lowest was 3 degrees below zero, on the 24th. In connection with this last item it may be of interest to say that this is the lowest temperature for November for a good many years—for 18 years at least. The only other occasions that the writer has been able to discover when the thermometer went below zero in November were November 16, 1900, with 2 below, and November 26, 1903, with 2 below. So the month just passed has made a record in one respect at least. Again, we had unseasonable and wintry-like conditions for a long period during the month, namely from the 8th to the 25th, and sleighing for several days. A thunderstorm on the first day of the month was also an unusual event for November.

The total rainfall for the month was 2.87 inches. Of this amount there was snow to the depth of seven inches. There was rain or snow on 12 days during the month, clear, cloudless sky on 9 days, and cloudy and overcast the remaining days.

DEAN STARR IS RETURNING TO KINGSTON

(Kingston Standard.)

Dean G. L. Starr, of St. George's Cathedral, who is at present acting as army chaplain in Paris, will return to the city very shortly. He stated in a letter to Bishop Mills, which was read by Bishop Bidwell at St George's Cathedral yesterday morning, that he was returning to Kingston early in December.

Dean Starr begins his letter by saying that he had just returned from the front to Paris with a train load of wounded. At the time of writing he was in the Hotel Majestic, in Paris, where he and Bishop Mills had stayed some time ago, and which was now turned into an hospital. He was visiting the sick and wounded there at the time of writing.

At the time war broke out, Dean Starr stated, he was in England, and as there were very few chaplains available at home, the regular men being at the front, he found that his services were very much needed. He said that he was compelled to answer his country's call, whether in a Canadian or British regiment; it made no difference at a time like this.

He said that he was very sorry that there was so much feeling against him among his parishioners for having offered his services to the country. In view of that, he thought it best to return.

He stated that a person would not recognize "gay Paris," there were so many changes there, and it had such a different appearance to what is usually represetnts.

In spite of everything, he said, both British and French troops at the front are showing a splendid spirit and are fully confident of success. He hopes to return early in December.

Dean Starr, it is said, is already on his way to Canada, but nothing official has been received as to this at St. George's.

W. R. HARTSHORN DIES SUDDENLY

Very suddenly was death's call answered last night by Mr. W. R. Hartshorn, who resided with his wife on London street.

The late Mr. Hartshorn had accompanied Mrs. Hartshorn to spend the evening at the residence of Dr. Carmichael. He was stricken with apoplexy and failed to rally. He was 56 years of age.

The deceased enjoyed the friendship and esteem of a very large circle of friends, who regret exceedingly his sudden demise.

The funeral arrangements will be announced tomorrow.

TRUSTEES WHOSE TERM EXPIRES

Four Members of School Board Must be Re-elected

Speculation among those interested is already manifesting itself over what changes in the Board of Education personnel will occur when the January municipal elections are held. Four members of the present board must either step down this year or else stand for election if they desire to serve the city for another term. They are Dr. M. A. Morrison, chairman), Vincent Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman and J. J. Turner, Jr. The latter gentleman is desirous of another term, if nominated. Mr. Vincent Eastwood had not considered the matter and preferred not to say anything just yet. B. F. Ackerman was out of the city and his intentions could not be obtained.

Dr. M. A. Morrison had not made up his mind, either. All four members have done yeoman service, and it would be a pity to lose their service. Every man is a veteran on educational matters by virtue of years of experience, and their actions and close attention to education have been invaluable to the board.

Of the four, Mr. Vincent Eastwood is senior member, having been elected first in 1899, serving continuously to 1905. He was re-elected in 1911, and has always been regarded as one of the strongest members of the board. Mr. B. F. Ackerman was elected in 1905, Dr. Morrison the same year, and Mr. Turner in 1913.

But two more meetings are scheduled before next year's board is inaugurated — a meeting tonight and another the first Tuesday in the new year. In the same week the new board meets.

Besides the four gentlemen mentioned, the Board of Education is composed of Dr. Burnham, Colonel Miller, W. H. Hill, John Crane and J. H. Smith.

DID WHAT HE THOUGHT TO BE HIS DUTY

Minister of Militia Says His Motives Were Misconceived

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Commenting yesterday afternoon upon the criticisms made in the Toronto newspapers and elsewhere on his alleged impropriety and breach of military etiquette in publicly censuring the test mobilization at Toronto under General Lessard recently, Major-General Hughes pointed out that in some quarters, at least, his motives and actions were apparently misconceived. All that he had in mind, he sad, was to allay as promptly and publicly as possible the apparent panic which existed in Toronto and along the entire Niagara frontier in regard to a suggested German invasion from the United States, fostered by injudicious statements by public men in Toronto, and accentuated by the mobilization of the Toronto garrison without due warning having first been given in the press.

He made his reprimand in public so that it would be brought more generally to public attention in the press. His object had been achieved in allaying the panic, even if it had resulted in arousing strong criticisms against himself. These criticisms he could stand. General Hughes pointed out that his criticism was directed against the mobilization scheme, and was not intended as a rebuke to the general administration of the Toronto military district under General Lessard.

The Minister said there was no authority for the mobilization under law, and no authorization for the payment of the cost of calling the men out. Had the matter been dealt with privately by the Militia Council a reprimand would have had to be given, but this would have been more or less private, and the object in view, of restoring public confidence, would not have been achieved.

As to the right of the Minister of Militia to publicly reprove any officer responsible for an indiscretion there should be no question, said General Hughes. As anyone who knew anything about military matters, either in Canada or in Great Britain, knew that public reprimands were often given. Officers at Canadian training camps were frequently censured by superiors in the presence of civilian spectators. At the Diamond Jubilee review in 1899 an officer of the General Staff, with the rank of Major-General, was reprimanded in the presence of tens of thousands of soldiers and spectators, and sent from the field by the Prince of Wales, the late King Edward VII. Lord Kitchener himself had publicly and almost ruthlessly dismissed from the service officers who were derelict in their duty during the South African War.

"I simply did what I thought to be my duty in Toronto," said General Hughes. "I wanted the panic allayed, and I wanted it done as quickly and as publicly as possible. I think I achieved my object."

The New York Federation of Women's Clubs has passed a resolution compelling each member to purchase a cotton dress.

G.T.R. TRAINS IN COLLISION

too late. The velocity and weight of the 20 cars carried them forward and the rear cars of the work train were hit with great force.

Engines Wrecked.

Both engines were smashed, the engineers jumping too late to escape injury, and both were painfully crushed and bruised. Fireman Weatherup was luckier, sustaining only a broken left arm. As far as known, no one of the work train crew was hurt.

Smith was the most badly crushed of the two.

Immediately the seriousness of their injuries were discovered orders were sent to Campbellford to make up a special and rush the unfortunate men to Peterboro for medical attention. The return trip was made in record time. Dr. Moir, G. T. R. physician, was asked to be ready, and when the train pulled in he had two ambulances waiting. A large crowd assembled when the unconscious men were lifted from the train to the ambulances. Weatherup was able to walk to the ambulance unassisted. In the Nicholls Hospital Dr. Moir gave them every possible attention, and was busy with them at the time of going to press.

Reports from the scene of the wreck claim it to be one of the worst seen for some years on this line. Passenger trains will be blocked, but the passengers will be transferred around the wreckage. Train No. 100 leaving here at one o'clock for Belleville will have to transfer, also train No. 99, leaving Belleville for Peterboro at six o'clock.

Engineer Smith seems to be unlucky, as some years ago he was badly hurt at Waubaushene, which laid him up for weeks.

DIFFICULTIES WITH SEWER

Much Water Has to be Contended With

The men working on the outfall sewer are experiencing considerable difficulty in laying the main on account of the water and sand, and also the fact that they have not the proper appliances with which to do the work. The steel sheeting for the sides of the trench cannot be kept down owing to the sand and water and it will be necessary to get a pile driver before the steel can be laid. The hand pumps are not doing the work properly, and steam pumps will be required. It is understood that the department is securing the extra equipment.

The corner of Lock and King George streets has been rounded and the work on the main trunk of the sewer begun. No work but the excavation can be performed until the board of works purchase the above mentioned equipment. It will be a few days before the hoist and carriage will be used.

EATING THEIR OWN HORSES

Private Sidney Davis, a reservist of the 23rd Battery, Royal Field Artillery, formerly a tin worker in Swansea, writes home:

While I am writing this, the German shells are dropping within 200 yards of our horses, and they are trying to find us. They cannot up to now.

There are prisoners coming in every day — forty, fifty or one hundred giving themselves up — starving. They are killing and eating their own horses and looting the towns; well, it is a sight to see what they have been doing.

PAUL SCHLICHT NOW IN OTTAWA

Police Want Some Information About Him

Chief of Police Short of Lindsay has received the following letter from Mr. A. M. Ross, chief constable, Ottawa:—

"Dear Sir,—I am desirous of obtaining some information about a man named Paul Schlicht, a man aged about 50 years, who claims Lindsay as his home. He also claims to have been promoting some large company in Lindsay and to have come from your town to Ottawa. Whilst apparently a clever man and according to what he tells is possessed of considerable means, he seems to be short of cash since he came to this town. He also impresses people as not being in possession of all his faculties. Any information will be appreciated.

A. M. ROSS."

Schlicht tried to interest the Lindsay Council in a new scheme to generate power, but having in mind the D. B. Thomas shoe factory, the town dads listened patiently and let it go at that. Schlicht visited Peterboro but failed to get on speaking terms with Mayor Buller's council of ten.

TRAINMEN ARE DOING NICELY

Engineer Smith's Injuries the Most Serious

Dr. Moir reports that Engineer Ambrose Smith, sustained a depressed fracture of the skull, in yesterday's railway accident near Campbellford and is doing as well as could be expected. A piece of the bone was removed.

Engineer St. Our was more fortunate, his injuries not being so serious.

Fireman Weatherup whose left arm was fractured left the hospital yesterday and is visiting his sister on Patterson Street.

SIR ADAM THE HORSE BREAKER.

Did you ever hear how Sir Adam Beck became a horseman? Here is the incident:

He sharpened his own saws, did this serious-minded, quiet-eyed young man, whose only capital was his energy and his ability to bring that energy to a diamond-drill objective; he bought second-hand machinery and fixed it up after hours; he kept his own books; he prospered.

Then, because of his very concentration, he faced a threatened breakdown.

"What you need is horseback riding," the doctor remarked one night.

The future turfman and representative of Canada at the largest Horse Shows of England, knew nothing about horses, had never owned a single specimen. But he sought out a livery stable on Dundas Street and picked up a hack that was tired conveying folks to the station or the graveyard. First, he hired the animal. Then, after he had studied the subject in his usual methodical manner, he bought him.

"That horse was the famous high jumper Rossbery, never beaten except by Mrs. Langtry's Filemaker," said a man who had watched the doctor's prescription emerge from his hackhood, "he was shown all over Canada, won prizes enough to fill a room, was sold for a large sum, and, when he finally met with an accident, was a dead loss to somebody else, rather than to his discoverer."—Canada Monthly.

INCREASE CANADIAN FORCE TO NINETY-SIX THOUSAND

Nine Regiments of Cavalry and Nineteen of Infantry, as Well as Other Units Will Make up an Additional Force of 31,700, According to a Statement Made by Major-General Hughes.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2. — Concerning the enrollment of Canadian troops, Maj.-Gen. Hughes, Minister of Militia, has made a statement in general terms. The enrollment so far consists of 33,000 troops now in England, constituting the first contingent; 8,000 on guard and outpost duty in the Dominion, and 23,000 recruited and mobilized in the Dominion for the second contingent. This makes a total of 64,000 already enrolled.

It is proposed to add to the above number 31,700 men. These will be contributed as follows: 9 regiments of cavalry, or 5,500 men; 19 regiments of infantry, or 20,000 men; army service corps, 2,000 men; army medical corps, 1,500 men; six batteries of artillery, 1,200 men; engineers, 1,000 men; signallers, cyclists, etc., 500 men; total 31,700 men.

This makes a grand total of 95,700 men.

The proposed details of the additional 31,700 by divisions and districts will be as follows, subject always to revision:

Div. 1.—Headquarters, London; cavalry, two squadrons; infantry, two regiments.

Div. 2.—Headquarters, Toronto; cavalry, two squadrons; infantry three regiments.

Div. 3.—Headquarters, Kingston; cavalry, two squadrons; infantry, two regiments.

Div. 4.—Headquarters, Montreal; cavalry, two squadrons; infantry, one regiment.

Div. 5.—Headquarters, Quebec; cavalry, one squadron; infantry, one regiment.

Div. 6.—Headquarters, Maritime Provinces; cavalry, three squadrons; infantry, one regiment.

Div. 10.—Headquarters, Manitoba and Saskatchewan; cavalry, six squadrons; infantry, four regiments.

Div. 11.—Headquarter, British Columbia; cavalry, three squadrons; infantry, two regiments.

Div. 13.—Headquarters, Alberta; cavalry, six squadrons; infantry, three regiments.

The present plan is to distribute this additional number at various cities and towns throughout the country, and to mobilize them later on when needed.

It is the intention to have one of the regiments for the Toronto division raised in the north country, probably with headquarters at Sudbury or North Bay, the supply of men to be drawn from the country between Fort William and the Ottawa river. For the two regiments in eastern Ontario there will be headquarters at Ottawa and Toronto. In the Montreal and Quebec divisions there will be at least one French-Canadian regiment raised.

COUPLE HAD TRYING EXPERIENCE WITH GAS

Sleeping thirty-four hours from the effects of inhalation of the anaesthetic qualities of gas, was the trying experience of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Moloney, who reside on Rogers Street, East City. Mrs. Rogers felt indisposed on Monday evening and toward eleven o'clock Dr. Gallivan was summoned. The lady was attended and about an hour later fell asleep and her husband also retired. Yesterday morning Mrs. Heaps, a neighbor, remarked that it was it was strange not to see either Mr. or Mrs. Moloney around but came to the conclusion that they had gone away early in the morning.

This morning the same lady had reason to feel alarmed when she heard Mr. Moloney's stamping about in the stable. She went to the stable and finding the horse in a state of frenzy from hunger, she fed the animal and then proceeded to the house. Unable to secure a response to her knocking on the front door, she went to the rear entrance and heard a smothered moan. The door was broken open and Mr. and Mrs. Moloney were found in bed, unconscious. The fumes of gas in the house were very plain.

Late this afternoon The Review was informed that both Mr. and Mrs. Moloney were rapidly recovering. The gas had escaped from the furnace which had not been properly attended to.

INDIA'S LOYALTY THE REAL THING

During his lecture on the new life of India, in Knox Church last evening, Rev. J. Sharrard, D.D., Principal of the Presbyterian College at Indore, India, said that India's new nationality, had been expressed in the response made on behalf of the British Empire, in the present war. He declared that India's loyalty was not a spurious loyalty. When war was declared, practically all the seditious newspapers said in effect: We have kicked against the British Government in and out of season but we realize that the British Empire stands for justice and truth. Let us lay aside all our differences and we urge all to support the British Government.

ANOTHER TRY FOR CALAIS

German Fleet May Attempt to Assist Kaiser's Reported Plan to get Through — Three Batteries of the Foe Are Damaged

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent in Central France says that the Germans have again turned their faces toward the sea and are trying to hack their way through to Calais. A new army has been brought upon the scene, and a new road chosen, and it is rumored that the German fleet will assist.

They ascribe previous failures to inundations and the guns of the British ships. Between Ypres and Arras there are no dykes to be opened, and that region is beyond reach of British naval guns.

The correspondent says the fleet will be used to prevent reinforcements from England, although he thinks this threat a bluff.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—The official announcement this afternoon says:

"In the south of Ypres and St. Eloy the attack of the enemy against an entrenchment taken by our troops during the day was repulsed by us. Our artillery inflicted damage on a group of three batteries of heavy artillery of the enemy. There has been a spirited artillery exchange in the vicinity of Fay, to the southwest of Peronne.

"In the region of Vendresse-Craonne there has been a violent bombardment, to which the French artillery replied with success, accomplishing the destruction of a battery.

"In the Argonne, a German attack against Fontaine Madame was repulsed, and we made some progress in the occupation of a trench in the forest of Courtes-Chousses and a miaor fortified position near St. Hubert.

"On the heights of the Meuse, in the Woevre district and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1914

PROFIT SHARING BY HENRY FORD.

NEARLY A YEAR AGO Henry Ford began his profit-sharing scheme. To ordain that no man in his employ should receive less than five dollars a day, regardless of prevailing rates of wages, and that the more skilful should receive more, was a somewhat daring innovation. It was occasioned by the fact that Mr. Ford had a cash balance of $13,000,000 a year ago, and he decided to spend $10,000,060 in increased wages. The annual statement recently issued shows a cash balance of nearly $30,000,000, with a reduced number of men and shorter hours of labour. A Detroit paper says of Mr. Ford's scheme:

> "In the first six weeks after the plan was put in operation, the figures of February, 1914, and February, 1913, were contrasted. In February, 1913, with 16,000 men, working ten hours a day, 16,000 cars were made and shipped. A year later, when the profit-sharing plan was under way, the company, with 15,800 men—200 less, working eight hours a day—two hours less—built and shipped 26,000 automobiles."

In addition, it is said that the men have paid down $1,500,000 on homes which they are buying, have saved an average of $48.65 a month, besides spending a large amount for life insurance. The Toronto Star cannot credit the statement handed out, and asked repeatedly: "Is it true?" The statement is certainly wonderful, and, if true, is of such importance that more of Henry Ford's policy should be known. However, until it is proven otherwise or corrected, the statement can be assumed as true.

The conclusion is that Henry Ford has made his scheme pay, or that it is, in other words, a decided success. To assume that further profit-sharing would increase business is to push the logic beyond its limit, and no one assumes that position. Two natural questions are asked: How can he do it? and, Will it last?

For the first question, many details operate to make it possible, but one or two are of outstanding importance. The first great factor is the profit from the business. To do what has been done there must be a tremendous margin of profit on every Ford automobile sold. In the long run, the buyers of Ford cars pay the huge profits and salaries of the Ford factories. A second almost equally important factor is the economics of production. The milling of six, ten or twenty parts in one operation means that six, ten or twenty automobiles are produced at almost the same cost as one, the difference being mainly in raw material. These savings reduce cost and correspondingly increase the margin of profit. To make such production profitable, there must be a market for the product and facilities to use the market. All these factors have been carefully developed, so that Henry Ford's staff is one of the most complete and efficient in the world. As to whether his scheme will stand the test of time depends largely upon the capacity to meet changing conditions of production and marketing. Owing to the wear and tear on automobiles, their relatively short life, the field seems to be almost without limit, at least for a long time to come.

There are other considerations that space will not permit a discussion of here. There is the appeal wholly to the money-loving, or selfish, instincts of his men, the emphasis on a crude materialism, as incentive, rather than the love of things for their own sakes, such as the handicraftsmen had for his product in the days before the Industrial Revolution. There is the effect of this appeal, an important effect, on the ethical and religious side of life, whether it is better to abandon the love of a thing for its own sake and substitute instead a golden calf. Whether there is a greater measure of happiness and success by breaking with the Christian principle of love and putting character on a dollar and cents basis, paying a man two dollars a day for doing a certain amount of his duty, and five dollars a day for doing a little more of his duty. Or, put it this way: Have we not long ago given up that principle in actual life, and, by careful nursing, kept it alive only for parade on Sundays in fine churches? Henry Ford's scheme may go the way of Robert Owen's socialistic enterprises, but, surely, time will show the weak spot, if such there is, in the practicability of profit-sharing as a guiding principle in industrial life.

PIKE'S PEAK OR BUST.

THOSE in charge of the campaign for the Patriotic Fund have decided for Pike's Peak or bust. That is the substance of their resolve to try and raise fifty thousand dollars for the Patriotic Fund. They have done well in aiming high, and, with a properly organized force, together with a strong appeal to the patriotic impulses of all the people of this city, rich and poor alike, the object should be attained. It is a worthy object, deserving unanimous local support, and, we trust the people of this city will measure up to their duty in this final effort for the Patriotic Fund. When towns of five thousand population have raised funds of over nine thousand dollars, surely Peterborough can do as well.

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

THE BELGIAN COMMISSION is still finding fresh evidence of the atrocious cruelty of German soldiers. One case of several is enough to rouse the blood of every Britisher and refers to the retreat from Namur, when the Germans got possession of the town or village of Tamines, situated on the Sambre between Charleroi and Namur. The first attack, or rather advance, to occupy this village was beaten back by some French skirmishers, who killed several Uhlans before finally leaving the town, which, when occupied, paid bitterly for the dead Uhlans.

About five o'clock on August 21st the Germans carried the bridge of Tamines, crossed the river Sambre, and began defiling in mass through the streets of the village. About eight o'clock the movements of troops stopped, and the soldiers penetrated into the houses, drove out the inhabitants, set themselves to sack the place, and then burnt it. The unfortunate peasants who stopped in the village were shot; the rest fled from their houses. The greater part of them were arrested either on the night of August 21 or on the following morning. Pillage and burning continued all next day.

On the evening of the 22nd (Saturday) a group of between 400 and 450 men was collected in front of the church, not far from the bank of the Sambre. A German detachment opened fire on them, but as the shooting was a slow business, the officers ordered up a machine gun, which soon swept off all the unhappy peasants still left standing. Many of them were only wounded, and, hoping to save their lives, got with difficulty on their feet again. Many wounded still lay among the corpses. Groans of pain and cries for help were heard in the bleeding heap. On several occasions soldiers walked up to such unhappy individuals and stopped their groans with a bayonet thrust. At night, some who still survived succeeded in crawling away. Others put an end to their own pain by rolling themselves into the neighboring river.

All these facts have been established by depositions made by wounded men who succeeded in escaping. About one hundred bodies were found in the river.

These are the tales that show the extremity to which Belgium has been reduced, and the woe and retribution that the Allies have a right to inflict on Germany. When the time comes, cold steel and shot will, we hope, exact its tax on Germany for what it has done in violation of its agreements, and the international rights of humanity.

General Hughes.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

With a degree of modesty for which he does not often receive credit, but which is really part of his interesting nature, the minister of militia, at the military dinner last evening, awarded to others the greater part of the credit for the feat in Canadian mobilization with which the name of Valcartier will ever be associated. The governor-general and the premier, he said, had done the utmost in their power to forward the work. The committees he had appointed of eminent business men, whose faculties and whose experience were of inestimable value in such a crisis, had done wonders in connection with the business end of the great undertaking. In fact, one would almost think, if his own words were the only source of information, that everyone but him was entitled to the gratitude and admiration of the nation for the accomplishment of a huge national task. All the same, everyone with the least knowledge of military affairs has known that throughout the proceedings, from the call to arms to the shipment at Quebec, the master-spirit of the herculean performance was the doughty and relentless minister himself. And his energy is far from exhausted. He is today as much bent on the assembling, training and equipment of the further series of contingents as he was on the record-making achievement of two or three months ago. It is scarcely too much to say that, as the head of the military arm of the Dominion in an unprecedented emergency, he is the man of the hour, the Kitchener of Canada.

The address of the Japanese consul-general on the rise and progress of Bushido, "the soul of Japan"—an ethical system closely akin to Christianity, and independent of either Shintoism or Buddhism—was fascinating partly because of the nature of the topic, concerning which too little is known by western nations, and partly because of the engaging personality of the distinguished speaker. To his theme and his treatment of it, we shall recur at greater length than is at the moment possible.

The function was an unalloyed success in every particular from beginning to end. The officers of the Canadian club, and in particular their president, the chairman of the evening, are to be congratulated on the smooth operation, the gusto and the eclat of the whole affair.

Taxing Life Insurance.

(Monetary Times.)

By their decision to fight the taxation of life insurance in Ontario, the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association are making a stand against the penalizing by governments of thrift and foresight. The existing Ontario laws will be appealed against by the companies on constitutional grounds. Whatever may be the result of legal engagement, the moral claim is clear. The principle of taxing life insurance premiums is unjustifiable. If the companies can prove the tax is also unconstitutional, so much the better.

The opinion has been held both in high and low places, for many years past, that life insurance taxation is decidedly unfair: Daniel Webster made this statement on insurance taxation: "Because the life insurance premium is itself a tax—voluntarily paid by the insured to the end that those dependent upon him may not become a public charge after his death. Therefore, the taxation of life insurance funds is in reality a tax upon a tax."

Those with sufficient prudence to insure are doubly burdened. They must pay their share of the taxation necessary to provide for the destitute (for whose care no life insurance was arranged) and they must pay a further tax for arranging that their own dependent ones do not become a public charge.

Senator Sherman of the United States Senate has said that instead of placing burdens on life insurance the government ought to exempt it and the companies writing it from taxation.

The taxation imposed upon Canada's life insurance companies has become a serious matter. The life companies' funds have been heavily taxed because they are easily reached. The question is not one only for the life companies; it is one for every man and woman who carries life insurance. The policy holder is directly affected by this taxation, which is increasing at an alarming rate. Only those who believe that thrift and foresight in taking out life insurance should be penalized by governments will support the taxation.

Operations.

(Life.)

Frost—Don't you think it would be a good idea, if one M. D. said an operation were needed, to consult several others and get their views?

Snow—Possibly. But the more surgeons you consulted the more operations you'd find imperative.

Well done, Australia. Canada does not envy you; but may she soon learn to emulate you.

PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Now that everything is likely to go along with a swing, after next Tuesday night, why not put Adjutant McElhiney in to distribute relief. So many people say what about this thing and what about the other thing, but it is what the people who need relief are thinking, we ought to take stock of.

They don't want charity nor that which looks like charity and they should be treated differently than the poor old habs of the town, for a quarter of a century.

Adjutant McElhiney could do this job well and I vote to put him in and no more fooling about it.

CITIZEN.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

Turkeys in Demand

Canadian Trade Commissioner Ray of Birmingham reports that there will be an increased demand in England this winter for Canadian turkeys and potatoes. The war has cut down the usual supplies available from Servia, Hungary, Austria, France and Russia.

Trade Commissioner Bickerdike reports from Manchester that British food supplies have not been interfered with to any great extent by the war. Vegetables and fruit are unusually abundant, and prices are lower than in former years.

Mr. Bickerdike reports that Canada's wheat exports to Great Britain last month amounted to $11,000,000, an increase of $7,500,000 over September of last year. Flour shipments decreased by $500,000, barley by $150,000, cheese by $750,000 and flaxseed and linseed by $2,700,000. Shipments of oats increased by $250,000, bacon by $280,000 and wood pulp by $245,000.

GERMAN BARBER'S THREAT.

Private Macnamara of the Royal Fusiliers, who arrived in Colchester hospital from the front on Friday, relates that during the fighting on the Aisne a German called out to a company of Fusiliers: "Wait till we catch you in our barber shop in London." The Fusiliers wiped out the German company with the bayonet, a private shouting: "You won't get to London again."

Minimum wage laws for women have been enacted in ten states.

THE KAISER'S INVESTMENTS IN CANADA

British financiers have little doubt that the German Emperor has invested extensively in Vancouver and other parts of British Columbia, and that two and a half million dollars would be a fair estimate of his holdings. The Mail's correspondent says that other eminent German subjects have followed the Kaiser's example.

"Up to a very short time ago," the correspondent adds, "Count Von Alvensleben had ostensibly carried on this business, and has for years 'specialized' in bringing British Columbia before his wealthy compatriots as a land of great possibilities."

Count Constantin Alvo Von Alvensleben is a financial agent of Vancouver. He went to British Columbia in 1904 and in 1908 married Edith M. Westcott. He is president of the Standard Fish & Fertilizer Co., Ltd., Vancouver Nanaimo Coal Mining Co., Ltd., Vancouver Traction & Trading Co., Ltd., Piercite Powder Co., Ltd., American-Canadian Oil Co., Ltd., and other concerns. He was born in Neu Gattersleben in 1879, and is a son of Count Werner Alvo von Alvensleben and Anna, Baroness Veltheim. He was educated at Bernbery and Gross Lichterfelde, and is a lieutenant of the Prussian army.

Uhlans Fight Each Other

Driver Charles Mayson, Royal Horse Artillery, in a letter to friends at Maidstone, relates several thrilling incidents during his eight weeks' experience at the front.

One day (he says) we were bivouacking in some very large grounds, when shells came bursting all around us. The cavalry had to retire at a gallop or be slaughtered, and we had to move to the side of a wood and stay there until it was dark enough to retire further. We had quite a number of men and horses killed. Another night we were awakened out of our three hours' sleep to find one regiment of Uhlans attacking another. They had intended to attack our flank, and mistook each other for a British cavalry regiment. We had to chase them for miles.

The writer records a gallant deed by a trooper of the Queen's Bays, who used a maxim by himself, doing an awful lot of damage to the enemy, for which service he was made a sergeant.

Foot and Mouth Disease

In vew of the recent serious outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease in the United States, with its subsequent serious losses and necessity for stringent measures, Canadian stock owners hould acquaint themselves with the particulars of this disease. A seven page pamphlet, prepared by Dr. J. G. Rutherford, formerly Veterinary Director General for Canada, outlines the symptoms and appearance of the disease with its treatment and preventive measures. In view of the fact that it is one of the most infectious diseases known, attacking nearly all species of farm animals, and that the many different ways in which its germ can be conveyed from place to place render it very difficult to prevent its spread once it has made its appearance in a community, preventive measures of the utmost importance. In this pamphlet a number of such measures have been outlined by Dr. Rutherford, a knowledge of which should prove of great value should the disease make its appearance in Canada. Copies of this pamphlet which is No. 9 of the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, can be obtained by making application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

At a reception tendered by the Barrie Conservative Association, Mr. A. B. Thompson, M.P., was presented with a cabinet of sterling silver, a wedding present.

A Singular Bequest

The Purpose Could Only be Inferred

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

When my mother died, leaving me alone in the world, I felt so desolate that I considered it essential for me to do something to divert my mind from my trouble. I should be obliged to make my own living, but I possessed a few hundred dollars and could not bring myself to begin the work till my money was all gone.

Scanning a newspaper one day I saw an advertisement of a lady who desired a companion with whom to travel abroad. The applicant must be between twenty and thirty-five years old, educated and of a cheerful disposition. Besides her expenses, she would be paid $50 a month.

It seemed to me that this would be a good opportunity for me if I could obtain the situation. I came within the limit of age, for I was exactly twenty. As to the cheerful disposition, I bore my misfortunes without inflicting them on others, but I surely did not feel cheerful. I answered the advertisement and, having been invited to call upon the lady, found her a widow, much broken down in health, nervous and irritable.

I was so disappointed at the prospect before me that I declined the position. This seemed to excite Mrs. Southerland's desire for my services, and she doubled the offer of salary. Since I would be at no expense I should return with some $1,200, which, with what I already had, would give me a little nest egg. So I agreed to go.

Mrs. Southerland's son, a young man of twenty five, brought her on to the steamer, where I had gone shortly before to prepare her stateroom for her and unpack needed articles. Roy Southerland was evidently much harassed by his mother, whose nervous condition had evidently communicated itself to him. This is a common occurrence. There is nothing that will break down one's nerves quicker than taking care of a nervous wreck. While his mother was resting in her state room before the ship cast off the young man took me aside and said to me:

"I don't envy the work before you. I am sorry to turn my poor mother over to another, but she needs other care than mine. Quite likely when you return you will be in the same condition as myself. If so I will do what I can to make it up to you. I don't consider your salary any pay for what you will have to endure. A thousand dollars a month would not induce me to undertake the care of my mother, and twice that would not induce me to give it up to any one else if I had not come to the end of my rope. It is essential for both her and me that she should be cared for by some one else than me."

I could understand this situation, and I confess the young man won my earnest sympathy. The prospect before me was surely not brightened by what he told me. I did not think so much of his offer to make good what I would endure as a feeling of contentment at being able to bear his burden for him while he took a rest. I assured him that he had acted wisely in the matter and that he might have perfect confidence I should devote myself to his mother and stand by her till I brought her back to him, as I hoped, greatly benefited.

Mrs. Southerland proved to be a singular woman. When I returned to her after this interview with her son she said to me:

"I suppose you have been talking to Roy. He is a good son to me, but he does not realize that I am perfectly competent to take care of my own affairs. Besides, he considers me very irksome and I'm sure is glad to get rid of me. However, he is more dutiful than most sons, who don't hesitate to fall in love with the first pretty face they see, and those who have poor old lonely mothers will not scruple to marry and leave their mothers out in the cold. But Roy can't do that without my consent unless he is willing to give up the family fortune, which my husband left entirely to me to dispose of as I please, and Roy knows that the moment he takes a wife to usurp my first place with him he will lose every cent of it."

This was but an expected sequel to what Roy Southerland had told me and was not a very pleasant beginning of my term of service. Without making any reply to the remarks I asked the lady what I could do for her to make her comfortable. This diverted her mind from her unappreciative son, and she told me of so many things she wished for that I had all I wanted to do to provide them.

I had accepted this situation in order to recover from a condition of my own and found myself called on to bear a depression of another. One would suppose that I had made matters worse for myself. But this, in one respect at least, was not so. My own distress fell to the ground before the greater suffering of another. Mrs. Southerland was a hard mistress, finding fault with every one, including her own son, but there were moments when, her nerves having come to a period of rest she showed an entirely different disposition. During these intervals she showed unbounded love for her son and declared that if he wished to marry a society girl she would not stand in his way. We had not crossed the ocean before she showed not only great dependence upon me to do things for her, but began to rely upon me for companionship and for sympathy. Her son had provided her with reading matter, and she desired me to read to her, but I saw at once that the books he had selected were far above his mother's requirements. I found lighter works in the ship's library, which I read to my charge and by doing so not only kept her from harassing me, but I was enabled to pass such time as I devoted to this work pleasantly.

During the latter days of the ocean voyage I got Mrs. Southerland on deck occasionally, and she was benefited by the pure air of an ocean whose currents were unobstructed, but when we entered the smoke and perpetual rains of London she fell back to her previous condition.

One duty fell to me that I found very difficult. Mrs. Southerland directed me to write every few days of her condition to her son. Of course she read the letters I wrote. I tried telling the young man that his mother was doing well and improving steadily. This letter she forced me to write over, telling him that she was no better and would never be any better. I obeyed the order, but since I was commissioned with the posting of the letter I opened it and put a postscript stating that the health report was his mother's and not mine. In my next letter I stated that the patient was feeling poorly. I was directed to write it "tolerably well for a broken down old woman."

Since I wrote in the mother's name the son replied directly to her, but his letters invariably contained thanks to me for acting as her amanuensis. He seemed constantly solicitous about his mother, and it was evident that he was a very good and affectionate son.

We reached Switzerland as the hot weather elsewhere was coming on, and I took my charge to a small hotel on Lake Geneva. I had hoped the Swiss mountain air would do her good, and I do not doubt it would have done so had it not been that her vitality was gradually failing.

During our stay in Switzerland I was told by physicians whom I had called in that she would last but a few weeks. I wrote privately to Roy Southerland of this report.

Roy started at once to join us, but arrived too late to see his mother alive. During the last week of her life she became aware that she had but a short time to live and called in a notary to draw a will. I was surprised at this, for she had told me that she had made a will before she left bequeathing her fortune to Roy, but had determined that if he married against her wishes during her lifetime she would change it. However, it was natural that she should make a will with death facing her to provide for immediate requirements. Indeed, she told me that she had stipulated in the instrument that I should be paid my salary for a year from the date of my entering her service.

A few days after Mrs. Southerland's death we started on our return to America. I gave Roy his mother's will, but he was too much affected by her loss to open it, thrusting it into his pocket.

When I reached America I went directly to my home. Not long after my arrival Roy Southerland called upon me, and from the moment I entered the room where he was I knew something momentous had happened. He spoke to me in a reserved tone.

"Are you aware of the contents of my mother's will so far as it concerns you?"

"Only what she told me."

"What did she tell you?"

"That I was to receive a year's salary."

"Do you know any thing else that is in it?"

"Nothing whatever. I supposed that she would call upon me for one of the witnesses, but she did not."

While he was asking me these questions he was scrutinizing me. It was evident he was searching for some truth. He asked me one more question.

"Did mother ever talk to you about how she had left her property?"

"She told me she had left a will at home bequeathing you everything, but added that in case you married without her consent she would change it."

When I said this an expression came over his face which seemed to indicate that he had elicited what he had been searching for. He did not speak again for a few moments, then in a changed voice said:

"All my mother's property after a few small legacies is bequeathed to you."

I stood staring at him as though he had made a statement involving an impossibility.

"I naturally wondered," he continued "whether you had exerted any influence upon my mother to bring this about. I am sure you had nothing to do with the matter and were ignorant. Moreover, I have learned from what you have told me my mother's reason for leaving all her property to you."

I was too dumfounded to speak for awhile, but presently I asked him what that reason was.

"That you must find out for yourself."

I did find out, so far as guessing would enable me to do so, that she had left her property to me because she wished her son to marry the woman of her choice and I was her choice. She was a singular woman, and had I not known her for some time I could not have understood her.

What followed this denouement is a longer story than the one I have told. I offered to give up the inheritance. That plan failed. Then I offered myself with the inheritance. The offer was accepted.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

To prevent a silk skirt from cracking press it all over with a hot iron before wearing it.

One of several ways of stiffening the bristles of brushes after washing is to dip them into a mixture of equal quantities of milk and water and then dry before the fire.

Always put scrubbing brushes to dry with the bristles face downward. This lengthens their lives considerably, as if dried the other way the water naturally soaks into the wood and rots the bristles.

To remove paper labels from old bottles easily wet the face of the label with water and hold it for an instant over any convenient flame. The steam formed penetrates the label at once and softens the paste.

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed in a warm lather, made with pure soap. This should be blued, as should the rinsing water. Roll up tightly in a cloth and iron the handkerchiefs between linen or they will turn yellow.

Destroy the smell of paint by placing pailfuls of cold water in the rooms which are being painted. Change the water night and morning, and, when possible, add a handful of hay to the water in each pail.

Queen Amelie of Portugal an Enthusiastic Red Cross Worker.

EX-QUEEN AMELIE OF PORTUGAL.

One of the most enthusiastic Red Cross workers in England is ex-Queen Amelie of Portugal, who is a princess of the exiled royal family of France.

Her great grandfather was Louis Philippe, the citizen king of France, whose reign came to a violent end in 1848. Her father, the Comte de Paris, was heir to the throne, and her eldest brother, the Duc de Orleans, is known as the French pretender.

Queen Amelie, who has resided in England since her son, ex-King Manuel, lost the throne of Portugal, is a clever and amiable woman. She has studied nursing and holds a degree in medicine.

As soon as the present war broke out she offered her services to France, as did her two brothers also. While thanking them for the offer, the French government suggested that they co-operate with the English, as there is a law that forbids scions of former royal houses to return to France.

STIFFENING BRISTLES.

Treatment With Ammonia and Salt Restores Their Elasticity.

Bristles that have lost their stiffness may be restored by washing them in hot water to which has been added about two teaspoonfuls of ammonia, then dipping them in water to which salt has been added. Dry the brush in the open air with the bristles up.

Washing the brush in warm water to which a little ammonia has been added is an effectual way of cleansing a brush and one that is not likely to make the bristles too soft. It is not necessary to immerse the whole brush; merely hold the bristles below the surface of the water, and you will be surprised at the ease with which it will be cleansed of grease and dust.

Another excellent method for the weekly cleaning and one which probably will not wear the brush out so quickly is the use of dry bran. Rub the bran in thoroughly, afterward combing and shaking it out. It will remove all grease and will leave the bristles firm. This should be done at least once a week.

HAND TOOLED LEATHER.

Hand tooled leather is very popular this season. It is used for matinee bags, hand bags and purses. Two dainty coin purses of the leather are here pictured. They are decorated with the popular butterfly pattern.

DAINTY NEW COIN PURSES.

Chamois leather is rather expensive, so that it is just as well to know how to clean it. Put it in a weak solution of soda into which you have thrown some grated soap. Leave it for two hours and then rub it until clean. Finally rinse the leather in warm, soapy water. Wring the leather in a linen cloth and dry quickly. It can also be rubbed dry and brushed until soft.

LAME EXCUSES.

THEY say that any one would graft,
  Including me and you,
Dip in his pail and help himself,
  Were but the chance in view,
Did opportunity unfold,
  Take everything in sight;
But, even though it may be true,
  That doesn't make it right.

A plea like that may serve to ease
  The conscience for awhile,
And, though it is a lame excuse,
  It seems to be the style,
But no reliance can a man
  On plea so specious place
When in the still and solemn court
  The jury has his case.

When grafting pleasantly along
  On something that looks sure
It seems a very easy way
  A living to secure,
But when some sly uplifter comes
  Muck raking on the trail
It's slightly different if a chap
  Must hustle out for bail.

It doesn't soften the disgrace,
  It doesn't pay the fine,
To say that every one would like
  A nibble in that line.
When no exposer is around
  It all seems very well,
But much more serious it seems
  To view it from a cell.

Unselfish.

"Could you spare me a nickel?" whined the beggar. "I haven't had a thing to eat for three days."

"I would do it gladly, but I am just about busted myself."

"But I only want a nickel."

"Sorry, but that is more than I have." But, seeing the look of disappointment on the face of the beggar, he added, "You don't happen to have a hatchet, do you?"

"What do you want with a hatchet?"

"So I could divide my last cent with you."

Good Man Gone.

"Did you not know Clancey?"

"No; I don't remember him."

"He was a good man. It took three policemen to arrest him, and then they couldn't have done it if he hadn't given himself up. He was a good man."

"Does he live around here now?"

"No; they hanged him."

Got Satan Bluffed.

"That woman would intimidate Satan himself."

"Who—Mrs. Sprightly?"

"Yes."

"You don't say!"

"Yes, I do. He wouldn't dare to intimate that a single soul was his own if she were around."

Certain Way.

"I want to learn to make money."

"Do you?"

"Yes. Can you tell me how?"

"Certainly."

"You can? Pray, do."

"Get a job at the mint."

"I didn't know I was going to marry her."

"What! Hasn't she mentioned it to you?"

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

PROVIDED KETTLE OF TEA TO KEEP CHINESE IN CHURCH

Returned Missionary Relates Incidents From His Work in China

Millbrook, Dec. 2.—The Millbrook Epworth League held an open session on Monday evening, November 30, which was very largely attended. The program consisted of music and an address by Rev. Dr. Smith, of which the following is a synopsis:

"Tonight I was going to say something about the medical work in China, however, there is something comes before that.

We have ten stations in the province of Sz Chuan.

Jung Shau means glory. When people leave glory they like to get back again, so you see why we are anxious to get back.

In Jung Shau, they make self-flowing wells, by drilling from two to three thousand feet into the rock and bring the water up. They also have natural gas. They use the water buffalo to turn the windlass, to get this natural gas to bring up the water.

I would like to enlist Canadians to go over to do business, for instance, to introduce engines for working the natural gas instead of these water buffalo. Of course the most important work of all is introducing men to Christ.

The Chinese friendship is worth while. They will stay with you till the point of death. Fifteen years ago I did not think it possible to get so close to a yellow man as to chum with him, but now I know it is true.

Bamboo grows very luxuriously in China, and they put it to a great many uses. Some of these are the making of houses, tables, chairs, baskets, natural pipes.

In China you must serve tea if a gentleman comes in. They also give you tea when you go into their shops. The Chinese are so fond of drinking tea that they would go out to a tea-room between Sunday School and church, and sometimes would stay till church was over, or come in during the sermon, so we got a big kettle and served tea right at the church, so as to keep them there.

Another thing we have in the church in Jung Shau, is a partition. We have posted up on the door ten rules, explaining what they must do when they come into the building. One of these is to clean their feet. The men must go to the left and the women to the right of this partition. We have the school girls in front and they sing an anthem in the morning. We also have a choir of boys, and on alternate Sundays they put up their little song. It is marvelous how they sing. They sing "Jesus Lover of My Soul" just as jubilantly as you sing "Tipperary."

The opium pipe has created more havoc than the Krupp guns.

The medical missionary can do much along this line, trying to help men to quit the opium habit.

When we went to Jung Shau in 1905, nearly the whole land was covered with the poppy. Now you can hardly find one plant. In Sz Chuan there is not now any opium grown. Opium is certainly bound to go out.

We have two churches in Jung Shau, the North and the East Gate churches. The North Gate church seats three hundred and sixty people."

Mr. Smith sang a Chinese hymn and his wife sang "Whosoever Will" in Chinese. They had a great many curios which were placed on tables for inspection, among these were bamboo baskets, opium pipe, cup and lamp, Chinese caps, flags, chop sticks and present box.

THE APPOINTMENT OF COL. CLEGG

(Lindsay Warder.)

Lindsay military men and other citizens, who are pleased to have the acquaintance of Lt.-Col. Clegg, of Peterboro, heard with a great deal of pleasure that he had been promoted to the important position of commander of the Canadian Camp at Salisbury Plain, Plymouth, Eng. It is an appointment that the Colonel may well feel proud of, and quite an honor for Peterboro and the 57th Regiment in particular.

In replacing Col. Williams, who has been appointed a member of Sir John French's staff at the front, Col. Clegg has a hard position to fill. His predecessor in office was a painstaking, but popular commandant, and one who did much to bring the efficiency of the first Canadian contingent up to the high standard it now enjoys. However, Colonel Clegg's Lindsay friends believe that he will prove himself equal to the occasion. His many friends will be delighted to hear of his military success, and The Daily Warder extends greetings far across the sea to a fine man, a good soldier, and a most capable Canadian officer.

WILL BRITISH GOODS BE DISPLACED

Indias New Life is Lucidly Portrayed by Principal Sharrard

The lecture by the Rev. J. Sharrard, principal of the Presbyterian college at Indore, India, in Knox Church, last evening, was a revelation. His subject "The new Life of India," was treated in a lucid and interesting manner and the question arises: Will India displace British goods?

In seven short years, the whole scene has changed. It would appear that the people of India are seeking to imitate the Americans and, there are some who are asking that a protective wall be given them but the nonsense of this is realized by all those who understand the situation which is that India expects all her cheap labour and resources to supply the world and is not in any sense in need of a protective tariff which some think would raise the wages of the workers to the level of those in the United States, not seeing that this is impossible unless India is afraid of importations. As a matter of fact her strength lies in the fear which she is inspiring in other nations who will have to look to the rivalry and rivived spirit of the East.

India has reached a place now amongst the nations and is aspiring to supply the world with manufactured goods. Her workmen of the skilled kind get from 30c. to 40c. a day. The lecturer began by tracing the history of industrial India. There are 315,000,000 inhabitants now and there was always a vast horde. Ninety per cent. of them live by agriculture and in the old days before the railroads brought in by the British Government the conditions of affairs in India were just like those in every other country. Railways however wakened up the people who lived almost altogether in little villages throughout the country. By and by capital came in and the Russo-Japanese war inspired the people with a great national spirit showing them that they were just as good as the western nations. Immediately factories began to spring up and now there are hundreds of cotton, steel, leather, woollen, jute, etc., factories throughout the country. Imports have fallen more than half and if the present rate of rapid expansion continues India will supply her own needs in a few years and is already beginning to look to supply the world. She exports now jute, steel, and woollen goods. She grows immense quantities of cotton and expects to displace English cotton in a few years. The transformation is such as to amaze those on the spot.

The lecturer was introduced to the audience by Rev. R. Pogue. He was a pupil of Dr. Park, of the Normal School teaching staff.

Rev. Dr. Stobo, pastor of the Baptist Church at Smith's Falls, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church, Hespeler.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

All men who wish to participate in the checker tournament next Tuesday evening should leave their names at the office some time during this week. Good sport is expected and doubtless all the old checker fiends will be out together with the young bloods who think that they can succeed at the quiet game of dross. Should the tournament not be completed on Tuesday evening another evening will be arranged for the finals.

A letter just received from Physical Director Carson, who is at Moncton, N.B., at the bedside of his mother states that there seems to be no hope of Mrs. Carson's recovery as she has taken no nourishment for over a week, simply kept alive by hyperdermics. Mr. Carson does not know when he will return but he expresses appreciation to the volunteer workers who are keeping the classes going in the gymnasium.

MILITARY OBSERVERS LOOK FOR ANOTHER ATTACK ON THE WEST

Some Believe German General Staff Has Rearranged its Lines For a Supreme Onslaught and Others Say Nothing Will be Done Until Battle in Poland is Over—French Occupy Heights in Vosges.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—In the west, although the German official report says there is nothing to communicate, the French official statement notes a somewhat lively cannonade in Belgium, and German activity to the north of Arras. This may mean that the Germans have commenced, or are about to commence another attempt to get through to the French ports. Certainly there are some important changes in the dispositions of the eGrman troops, but what they foreshadow is known only to the German General Staff.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:—

"In Belgium the German infantry has essayed, without success, a sortie against those trenches to the south of Bixschoote, between Bethune and Lens. After a rather brisk affair we captured the chateau and the park of Vermelles, south of the Lys river.

"In the Argonne we have advanced appreciably in the wood of La Grurie.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

The following statement was given out yesterday afternoon by the War Office:—

"In Belgium the day of yesterday (Monday) was marked by rather heavy cannonades. The German infantry made no attacks.

"The enemy continues to show a very marked activity to the north of Arras.

"In the region of the Aisne there has been a continuous cannonade all along the front.

"In the Argonne the fighting continues without causing any modification of the general situation.

"In the Woevre and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

Military men here take opposing camps, one side believing that the Germans will rest content with holding their present positions until the battle in Poland, where they need all the men they can get, is over, while the other looks for an immediate resumption of the battle in northern France and Flanders.

The Germans, too, according to Dutch reports, are strongly fortifying Zeebrugge and other Belgian ports against a renewal of the attacks by the allied fleet. The fighting which has occurred around Ypres was due to the allies pushing their lines forward.

The Germans have retired from the front at Dixmude, a distance of fifteen kilometres (nine miles) according to the correspondent of The Vaz Dieas.

A despatch to The Telegraaf from Brussels reports that the Germans are refusing to issue passports for travelers in any direction. All train service in Belgium is completely suspended and all newspapers have been confiscated, even those published in German. The probable reason for the latter move is believed to be that the authorities are keeping secret all measures which are being taken in connection with the situation on the eastern front.

The French troops have occupied all of the heights of the Vosges, according to a telegram from Mont Belfard. The message announces that the Germans have evacuated the three villages of Seppois, Moos and Bisel, abandoning a large quantity of ammunition and other war material.

The Tijds Sluis reports that the German retreat along the Yser front continues. Troops are being despatched north, apparently to prepare against new attacks by the British fleet.

Gen. Joffre, during a recent visit to Thann, Alsace, welcomed in the name of France the Alsatians gathered there. "We have come back for good," declared Gen. Joffre, "you are Frenchmen forever."

The citizens of Thann gave Gen. Joffre assurances of their absolute loyalty, it is said, and when he was leaving, shouted, "Long live France!" "Long live French Alsace!"

AVOIDS SNARE

Italy Scorns German Suggestion That She Seige Tunis

ROME, Dec. 2.—The German Government apparently has not yet despaired of seeing Italy rise to a well-baited hook, but the Italian papers say it will take more to draw Italy back into the German net than the latest snare spread for her. These remarks refer to an article in The Deutsche Tageszeitung inviting Italy to step in and take over Tunis, now that she has the chance. The paper points out that, reinforced by the Turkish fleet and the Austrian navy, the Italian fleet would easily be a match for the Anglo-French squadron in the Mediterranean, and energetic action in common would inevitably result in the quasi-automatic acquistion of Tunis by Italy, an acquisition which would be legitimate in law by reason of the predominance of the Italian element in Tunis. Little reflection, concludes the tempter, should suffice to convince Italy that all she needs is the decision to do and dare; the result would be as easy to obtain as it would be profitable and far-reaching. In quoting this article, the Italian papers declare there is good authority for asserting that it undoubtedly reflects the ideas of Wilhelmstrasse, and was indeed directly inspired by the German Foreign Office.

Austrians Failed In Attack.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—A violent attack by the Austrians on the Servian front running from Lazarevals to Maljen, along the River Ljid, in Northwestern Servia, was repulsed, says a despatch from Nish yesterday to the Havas Agency. It is reported that more than 600 dead and wounded were found on the battlefield. The positions occupied by the Austrians were on the right bank of the Ljid. Twenty officers and 500 soldiers are reported to have been captured.

Montreal Engineers Would Disband.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—Because orders have come from Ottawa that officers of the British army, now in Canada, are to take command of the field company of engineers organised by City Engineer Geo. Janin, the members of that corps have asked to be released from their oath, which would mean the disbandment of the company.

The corps includes 282 men.

Kaiser's Armies

PARIS, Dec. 2. — A semi-official communication concerning the German armies in the field made public here last night says:—

"Germany at present has at her disposal 25 1-2 active army corps, of which 21 1-2 are operating against France and four against Russia. Of the thirty-three German reserve army corps 22 1-2 are now employed against France and 19 1-2 against Russia.

"These figures show that there is a total of 58 1-2 army corps, active or reserve, fighting for Germany on the two fronts, and not 400 army corps, as has erroneously been stated by the German Government.

"If the territorial units (landwehr), of which nothing was said in the German official note, are taken into account, it will be seen that eight landwehr army corps are engaged against France and seven against Russia—that is to say, in all on the two fronts, 30 territorial divisions."

MESSAGE WAS SPURIOUS.

Goeben and Breslau Escaped By Fraud on Admiral Troubridge.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. — The German cruisers Goeben and Breslau escaped from the British Mediterranean fleet in the Straits of Messina in the first week of the war by a use of the British Admiralty wireless code, according to a story received by The New York Sun by mail from London. The story is, in part, as follows:—

"There was much astonishment when Admiral Troubridge was absolved of all blame in connection with the escape of the Goeben and Breslau. That he would be dismissed from the service, if nothing worse, seemed assured. His complete vindication was inconceivable.

"By means of his log book and the testimony of his flag lieutenant, his secretary and his wireless operator, the admiral was able to prove absolutely that he received a radiogram in the British Admiralty's secret code, worded and signed in regulation form, ordering him to permit the Goeben and Breslau to escape."

It turns out that the despatch was probably sent by the Goeben herself although her knowledge of the jealously guarded code is a mystery.

Bulwark Blown Up By Accident.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. —A cable to The Herald from London says:—

The authorities, it is stated, are not absolutely satisfied that the disaster to the battleship Bulwark was due to an accident. According to The Daily Express, just about the time the vessel was blown up a man of military bearing, with his hair and moustache close cropped, was seen on the bank of the Medway near the scene of the calamity. A description of this man has been sent to the police throughout the country.

FOE CANNOT HOLD GROUND BEFORE LODZ AND LOWICZ

Russians Stand in an Invincible Ring Around Von Mackenzen's Army and Kaiser Will Have to Get Reinforcements From the Western Front—Austrians Are War-sick—Slav Advance in East Poland.

LONDON, Dec. 2. — The Petrograd correspondent of The Times says: According to the view in military circles here the situation in Poland has assumed an extraordinary and unprecedented importance. Nothing like it in respect of interest and danger has presented itself hitherto, yet all the indications point to the maintenance and even increase of the present tension, in as much as the Germans persist, despite the awful climatic conditions, in holding their positions facing Lodz and Lowicz, whence the Russians are inflicting such terrible punishment. It is obvious the enemy expect soon to bring up reinforcements, but how this can be done the Germans alone know.

The Russian armies are disposed in an unbroken and invincible ring along the whole eastern front and also along that of the Austrians, who are hopelessly defeated and war sick. The Germans are either unable or unwilling to send further aid. It is equally clear that East Prussia is too far remote to afford scope for a counter-demonstration, even if the Russians did not possess a crushing superiority in numbers there, while the region between Plock and Soldau is not available for the movements of troops at this season of the year.

Military critics of leading newspapers agree in predicting the continuation of the German offensive, and conclude that the only possible quarter from which reinforcements could be obtained is the western front.

The announcement that the Kaiser has arrived at Thorn strengthens this conclusion. Incidentally it bears out the presumption that a further German advance will proceed from that point up the left bank of the Vistula. It may be assumed that the necessary counter measures already have been ordered.

The Russians are quite confident of victory. Besides, the movement of German troops from the west to the east is a help to Russia's allies.

Against the Austro-Germanic forces in the south the Russians continue to gain more decisive results. They are now in possession of all the Austrian positions, and are said to have arrived abreast of Cracow, while their captured for three weeks amount to 50,000 men.

In East Prussia the Russians have succeeded in penetrating about 30 miles beyond the border, and in Galicia it is reported that the Austrians have been swept back to the gates of Cracow. In all these regions, however, the issue still hangs in the balance.

Turks Dislodged.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 2.—The Army Messenger says that the Russians are holding their own against the Turks, dislodging the Ottoman troops from a position in the Euphrates Valley, and capturing many prisoners and two guns.

Monarchs at the Front.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The battle in northern Poland, concerning the progress of which there has been so much mystery, is now being fought out under the eyes of the German Emperor on the one side and the Russian Emperor on the other. These two monarchs left for the front yesterday, so that virtually all the heads of the nations which are at war are with their troops. The King of Great Britain is in France, the King of Belgium, as usual, is spending all his time with his soldiers, while M. Poincare, the French President, started yesterday for another visit to the northern battlefield.

PLEAD GUILTY TO THEFT CHARGES

Two Youths Confess to Petty Thieving

Good work by the police has resulted in the solution of a series of petty thefts that have been going on for some time in the city, and was responsible for the appearance in police court today of Stanley Hartley and Harold Lawrence, boys of 17, and James Grisdale, a man about 35. The two youths confessed to two charges this morning and there are others yet to be laid. Grisdale is charged with receiving stolen goods. A week's remand was granted by request of crown prosecutor Hatton.

Periodically in the last 4 or 5 weeks, small thefts have been committed from three of the public schools, from the Salvation Army and L. Potvin's restaurant on George Street, and Henderson's barber shop, Brock Street. Although detectives had their suspicions they were unable to definitely lay their finger on the guilty ones, until one who was questioned furnished information that made it easy to locate the others, which led to their arrest. Hartley and Lawrence have been befriended by the Salvation Army and stodo well in the estimation of the army officers. Yet it did not prevent them from pilfering from the barracks, it is said. Only two charges were read this morning to which they pleaded guilty. One charged them with entering the Central School on Nov. 20th and stealing $1.80 and a pair of scissors, the second with breaking into L. Potvin's confectionary store and stealing chocolates to the value of $1.00. Grisdale was accused of receiving twelve packages of tobacco and 13 packages of cigarettes, 1 razor and 1 pair of scissors, knowing them to be stolen. The tobacco and cigarettes are alleged to have ben stolen by the two youthful prisoners from Henderson's barber shop next to the Windsor Hotel.

Grisdale was committed for trial one week hence. He pleaded not guilty and said he did not know the goods had been stolen. Bail of $500 was put up by Mr. David Conroy.

Constable Blade was principally responsible for discovering the identity of the two youthful pilferers. Last Friday night he shadowed one of the two outside the Collegiate Institute, and accosted him. The lad claimed to be waiting for a companion inside as the commencement exercises were taking place that night. Constable Blade followed but lost trace of him at the London Street power house. Next morning the news of the thefts were reported from the schools and Constable Blade informed Detectives Meagher and Newhall of what he had seen the night previous and the name of the boy he had accosted. The detectives were thus able to place their hands on the guilty parties. Chief Thompson has had Constable Blade watching the school steadily every night for some weeks and his success in locating the thieves resulted from this plan.

Nearly 100,000 women are employed by the tobacco factories in the United States.

Decorations for Heroism

LONDON, Dec. 2—The distinguished service order has been awarded to 59 officers of all arms, from the special reserves to the guards. Thirty-nine of them have been given lieutenants or second lieutenants. The rewards have been made for such reasons as "cheerfulness and optimism," "helping the brigade to pull together," "consistent good work" and "utmost gallantry."

Among those receiving award is Lord Alastair Robert Innes-Ker. It was given him for "conspicuous courage with the advance squadron at Kruiseik in bringing wounded men out of action under a heavy fire."

Alien Women Ostracized.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Women's clubs in England have been enlisted in the movement to head off the activities of possible German spies, and Austrian and German women have been asked to resign or discontinue their attendance at many clubs which formerly welcomed them.

A number of prominent literary women have urged that English women should be as cautious as Englishmen about their associates.

POLICE COURT

In police court this morning one man said he procured his liquor supply in Port Hope; another got it from a "gentleman" in front of a Simcoe street garage. Both were "sisters" and both got a $10 fine.

"Thomas McKinley," cried the Magistrate.

"Git up, McKinley," said one of his box seat companions. "Mac" was so drunk he had to be carried into the police cells when arrested last night.

Must Clear Out.

John McCarthy had a pass for Montreal and wanted the chance to get there. Too many drinks landed him in the cells while waiting for his train last night. He was given the opportunity to clear out.

No Relation to "Sam."

"This is no relation to 'Sam,'" said His Worship, when the name of Francis Hughes was called. He was drunk in a public place last night.

"I'm guilty, all right," said Hughes, with a genial smile at the Magistrate. He was fined $2 and costs.

ANTWERP OBDURATE.

Belgian City Fixes Terms Upon Which She Will Pay Fine.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 2.—Trouble is brewing between the German and the Belgian authorities there, the Germans being annoyed at the impossibility of obtaining payment of the fine of $10,000,000 which they inflicted upon the city. The local authorities have made it plain that they will pay this only in return for a solemn undertaking that the German army authorities will not only refrain from all further commandeering in kind in Antwerp, but will pay cash, and a proper price, for all stores they may requisition. This the Germans will not do. As the Belgians argue that any other course is contrary to the stipulations agreed upon when the city surrendered, a deadlock has arisen.

It is stated here that apartments have been secured in Antwerp for the Kaiser.

White Duck Captured

PEMBROKE, Dec. 2.—Peter White Duck, one of the Indians wanted for the murder of Turnkey Robt. Coxford in the Renfrew County Jail here Sunday night, was captured last night near Golden Lake Reserve by Alexander Patterson of Pembroke, and a posse. He had separated from his companion, Anthony Jocko, who is still at large. White Duck will be brought to Pembroke to-day.

The Indian practically gave himself up, hunger and exhaustion forcing him to seek shelter at a farmer's house. The farmer notified the posse headed by Mr. Patterson, who effected the arrest.

On Short Allowance.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 2.—(Via London.)—All male British subjects up to the age of 55 who are still in Brussels, The Amsterdam Handelsblad says, have been interned in a military concentration camp.

The inhabitants of Antwerp, according to this same paper, are allowed only ten ounces of bread per capita daily.

Capt. Turner Killed.

WEATHER MAKES AN EFFECT ON THE GERMANS

Teutons in Belgium Suffer From Cold and Lack of Food

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Chronicle publishes the following from its correspondent in Belgium:—

"The German army on the Belgian seacoast is feeling very acutely the terrible effects of winter weather, disease and shortage of food. Practically no winter quarters have been provided for the troops, who are now exposed to the rigors of a Flanders winter.

"The flooding of Flanders by the Belgians, while it checked the German advance, also had disastrous effect on the health of the German troops. Pneumonia, rheumatism and typhus fever have laid hold of unwounded soldiers of the Kaiser's army. The death roll in Flanders has been very heavy, but perhaps the German soldier's worst and most feared enemy is famine. Supplies of all kinds have run short, and it has been found impossible to adequately feed the armies now holding the line in front of the allies. Belgium itself has been skinned bare, and the wretched inhabitants have been relieved of everything in the nature of foodstuffs.

Once over the frontier into the rich land of France, the Germans had reckoned on coming into a country of plenty, and calculated on being able to feed their famished armies on the captured supplies of their defeated enemy. A number of fugitives who contrived to evade the military cordon, say that every available train is being utilized for the hurrying-up of supplies of food to the front. Fresh troops are coming up to replace those who have been killed or wounded, or who have fallen victims to disease. One Belgian assured me that Germans were dying like flies, as they had practically no shelter from the cruel biting weather, in addition to being compelled to fight without rations.

VILLA IN CAPITAL.

He Is Now In Full Charge of Republic's Armies.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 2.—(Via El Paso.)—Gen. Villa entered the capital yesterday at the head of about 25,000 troops. He arrived during the afternoon in the suburbs, where he remained during the evening receiving delegations and foreign consuls. Villa will not enter the capital part of the city until the arrival of Provisional President Gutierrez.

Gen. Villa issues the following statement to the Associated Press:—

"My only mission is to restore order in Mexico and not to take personal revenge on any one. I promise that order will be restored at once. I am acting as the subordinate of Provisional President Gutierrez and the national convention.

"The Provisional President is now the supreme power in Mexico and I am merely acting as field commander of the armies. All foreigners and foreign property will be protected."

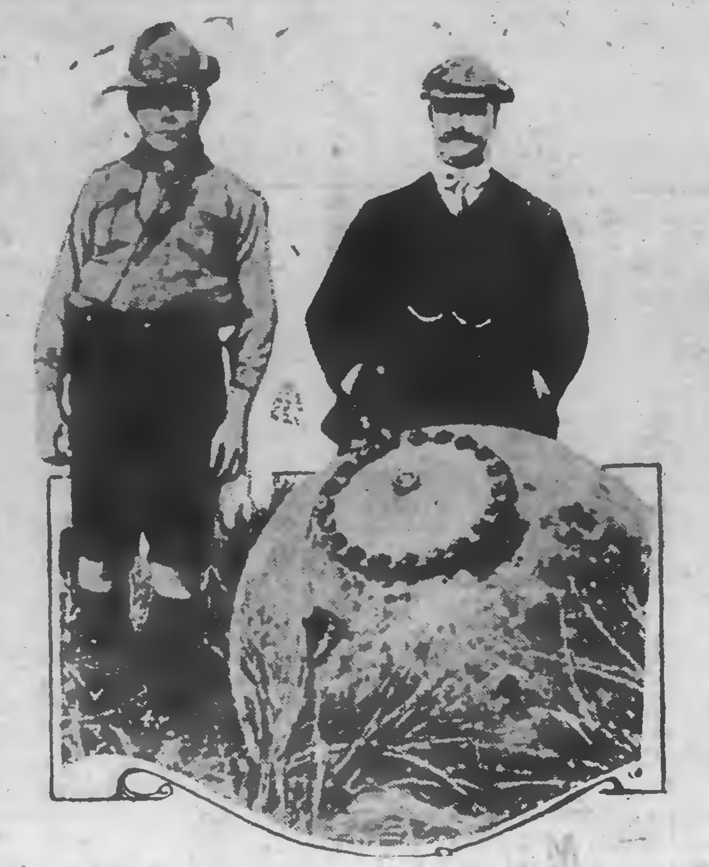
DEADLY MINES THEY PLANT IN THE SEA — HERE'S ONE ON DRY LAND



This great big steel ball is one of the deadly mines feared by all navigators. Many similar ones are being washed ashore on the British coast. The one which is seen in the photo was washed ashore at Sizewell, Suffolk, England, just after its dangerous explosives had been removed by a torpedo instructor.

ARIZONA KICKLETS

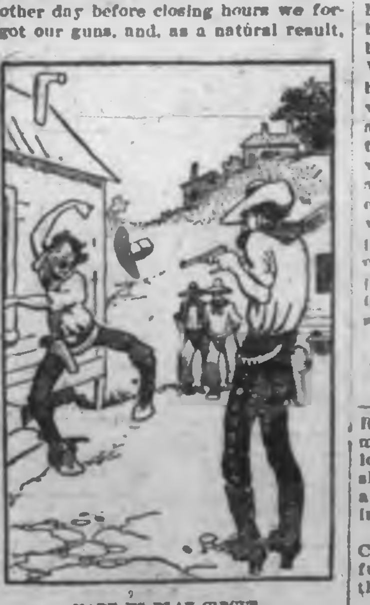
The Editor is Usually Ready to Defend Himself

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

OUR predecessor in the postoffice made a practice of licking on postage stamps for all persons who requested it, and one of the first changes we made after taking possession was in regard to this matter. We had printed and hung up in the corridor half a dozen different signs of "No Lick Here," and notwithstanding the vigorous kick on the part of the public we have strictly adhered to the change. Tuesday evening, as we were temporarily in charge of the stamp window, a bluffer from New Mexico handed in two letters and four stamps and commanded us to lick. We knew by the glint in his eye that he was reaching down for his gun, but we had one on a shelf beside us and had him covered before he could wink twice. He was somewhat surprised and disappointed at first, but we gave him credit for recognizing the situation and backing off as gracefully as possible under the circumstances. As postmaster we are willing to oblige all comers in everything pertaining to business, but our duty ends with selling the stamps.

In our hurry to get to the bank the other day before closing hours we forgot our guns, and, as a natural result, bumped up against Joe Pardon, the cowboy who had long had an itching to square accounts with us. As soon as Joe saw that we were unarmed he held a pair of guns on a level with our eyes and made us play circus for his benefit. We took back everything he asked us to and promised heaps of things for the future, and at length he let up on us and walked away. We have been severely criticised for crawfishing as we did, but we have lived in Arizona for the last ten years, and we think we know our gait. The thirteen duffers planted in our private graveyard is a pretty good record of our shooting, but we can't shoot without a gun, and when all the guns are in the other feller's hands our policy is to keep him good natured.



MADE US PLAY CIRCUS.

A little thing happened last Monday afternoon, for which we were in no wise to blame, and yet for which we feel it our duty to apologise to our fellow townsmen. Ten days ago our esteemed contemporary saw a forty pound keg of ink delivered at the Kicker office, and all at once. He has never been financially able to purchase over ten pounds of ink at one time in all his newspaper experience, and the sight of that keg, which had been paid for cash down, rendered the old reprobate half crazy. For about the hundredth time in the last five years he determined to assassinate us, and as we left the mayor's office for the postoffice he took up our trail and began shooting. We heard the reports of his gun, but gave them no attention, and it was not until the critter had fired sixteen bullets at us that we became aware of his presence. Then we suddenly lost control of our temper and turned on him and picked him up and jammed him into an empty barrel and spent five minutes cuffing his ears. He claims to be badly hurt in the spine, but aside from this we feel sorry that the thing happened.

The trifling misunderstanding between Mr. Hornbecker of the Palace hotel and the editor of the Kicker has been greatly magnified. Mr. Hornbecker is near sighted and impulsive. We happened to encounter him while he was looking for another party with whom he had had words. He called us a liar and struck us on the chin. In ten seconds we had him against the wall with a gun covering his left eye, and as soon as he heard our voice he explained and apologised. We never walk the streets without being prepared to be called a liar or to hear the click of a pistol. If it's a mistake we pass it over; if there is any shooting to be done we shoot. Mr. Hornbecker simply made a mistake.

Canada Life Service

The Canada Life management studies to extend and broaden its service to the policyholders, while constantly aiming at increased efficiency. The Company is quick to adopt any measure which will promote either.

An Example of Canada Life Usefulness

By means of an annual deposit with the Company, a man may now arrange that in the event of his death his wife, or other dependent, will at once enter on an income of, say, $50 per month. This sum is beyond the reach of poor investments and is absolutely assured to her for life—or for a minimum of 240 payments to the estate should the beneficiary die. The amount of the guaranteed monthly payment may be adjusted to suit the means of the assured.

This is the ideal provision in that it furnishes a guaranteed income for life, payable every month. As it may be provided through moderate annual payments to the Company, it is within the reach of every business man.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—There was little more enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today; but, as all the bids were out of line with values here, no business resulted. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is steady under a fair demand for car lots. Demand for flour is steady for local and country account, but there is very little doing for export, owing to the fact that the prices being bid are out of line. An active trade continues to be done in all lines of millfeed, and the tone of the market is strong.

The trade in butter is quiet, and the tone of the market is easier, with prices tending towards a lower level.

In cheese the feeling is firm, but business is quiet, navigation now being practically closed for the season. Eggs active and firm.

Denies Peace Story.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Dr. Henry Van Dyke, American Minister to the Netherlands, late yesterday denied often published reports that he had reurned to America with a special message from Queen Wilhelmina to President Wilson about a movement to restore peace in Europe.

"The desire of the United States for peace," he said, "is a well-known fact. All things, however, have a proper moment. We can trust President Wilson and Secretary Bryan to determine when that moment arrives."

The President will receive Dr. Van Dyke and discuss conditions in Europe with him to-day.

CAN'T MISS THEM

Corporal Warren of the 1st K. O. Scottish Borderers has written a letter to his sister, Mrs. George Bellwood, Morley, in which he says:

I expect to be out again soon, after my operation. The English and French are finishing the Germans off in thousands, so I don't think they will need me again. But it's a grand thing to shoot at the Germans; they make such a lovely target. Why, bless your life, you can't miss them, and, poor creatures, they are wishing it was over. Every prisoner we take says they are starving, and they look it, too. Well, never mind; we are there to kill, and kill we do. They are frightened of us, and say we shoot too straight.

Billeted in a Theatre

Pte. F. J. St. Auby (interpreter)—I now coil myself up in the "O. P." corner of the stage of the municipal theatre. It is curious to see by the dim light of the pilot lights forty or fifty men sleeping on the boards with their rifles stacked between them. The curtain is up, but the auditorium is dark and empty for what is probably the most realistic and interesting scene that has ever been set between its proscenium.

I am surrounded by a crowd of French people of every age and of all shapes and sizes. The fact that I am writing a letter seems to strike them as an incident of extraordinary interest. "Here's one writing a letter," they call to their friends, and they all flock around. The people of this town press round us when we feed, sleep, wash, dress, and, in fact, at every moment of the day.

Until we were quartered in the theatre some of the more modest soldiers were compelled to wait till it was dark before they could summon up sufficient courage to change their clothes. One old lady has just come up and tested the quality of my tunic, and has moved off nodding her head in approbation. Their interest in our welfare is practical nevertheless. (I have just been called away to rescue the lieutenant. He was surrounded by a crowd of about fifty natives while smoking a pipe, and was obliged to call to me for assistance.)

ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE WINS INTERMEDIATE TITLE BY DEFEATING TIGER 11

Corkery and Feeney of Peterboro and Kelly of Norwood Greatly Assisted the Winning Team — Trick Plays Prominent

Toronto, Dec. 2. — Hamilton, the home of football champions, is in gloom. Following close on the defeat of Hamilton Tigers on Saturday by Argos for the Interprovincial senior title, the Tiger intermedites yesterday were beaten by St. Michael's for the Canadian Intermediate championship. The score of 21 to 1 just about represents the play, as the collegians had it all over their rivals from under the mountain.

Ground conditions were very bad, but despite the uncertain footing, the teams played fast, clever football. There was much "loose ball" on both sides, but not as much as expected under the conditions. There was also a dense fog, and it was difficult to see across the field. Tigers outweighed Father Carr's team, but the latter with their triple and quadruple bucks simply tore the Hamilton line to pieces. St. Michael's are at their best on a dry field, but they demonstrated yesterday that they are not hampered to any great extent by muddy going.

Trick Plays Amazed Tigers.

The large crowd present witnessed some clever football, the majority of which was exhibited by the St. Michael players. Trick plays in which four and sometimes five and six men handled the ball, had the Tigers so baffled that they stood in amazement, while the locals went through for thirty, forty and fifty yard runs. Trick play upon trick play followed so fast that even the crowd wondered what St. Michael's would do next. It it no exaggeration to say that the plays were carried through with such machine-like action as to put many senior teams to shame.

It was laughable to hear a Tiger player call out "Watch the left side," and then see several St. Michael's players work a double or triple criss-crose and carry the ball in the opposite direction. Another play which is seldom used in senior football was worked on many occasions by St. Michael's. On a kick signal the ball was passed out to Broderick, the centre half. He made a motion to kick, but instead, passed to Canfield, who was standing a few yards away. This fake of Broderick's tended to draw all the Tiger wing players close in in an endeavor to break through the line to block the kick. As a result Canfield had perhaps a clear field or only one man to pass.

St. Michael's had more speed and also the ability to recover the loose ball. It was noticeable that the locals took better advantage of their opponent's mistakes than Tigers did of the St. Michael's misplays. In tackling, too, the locals were superior, but it might be said that Tigers could show a few of their senior players something about tackling.

Corkery Caught Well.

Canfield, of course, was best for St. Michael's. He was in nearly every play, and also mixed his signals so as to catch Tigers off their guard. Canfield caught and ran cleverly on the backfield, and seldom muffed. He is not a spectacular player, but "eels" his way through, and is hard to bring down. Corkery on the backfield also caught well and worked in fine style with Canfield on extended runs. Ryan and Feeney at outside wings as usual seldom missed their man if within tackling distance. Of the wing line Kelly was the best ground-gainer. The big fellow also broke through on many occasions and upset the working of the Tiger plays. Brown, Nealon and Harris also bucked effectively.

"Mawk" McKenzie, the former Toronto hockey and football player, was the best man for the visitors. Only as small as a "minute," he caught and kicked well at all times, and, although given some hard knocks, he pluckily stood up under it and was going strong at the end. Graham on the backfield also ran well, but the wing line fell down badly on the offensive. The teams:

St. Michael's—Flying wing, Lellis; halves, Canfield, Corkery, Broderick; quarter, Beck; scrimmage, Killan, Hickey, Malone; insides, Nealon, Harris; middles, Kelly, Brown; outsides, Ryan, Feeney.

Hamilton Tiger II.—Flying wing, Moffatt; halves, Mackenzie, Rowlands, Graham; quarter, Bridges; scrimmage, Tope, Sheridan, Garrett; insides, Clark, McEwan; middles, Shaw, Major; outsides, Partley, Palmer.

Referee—Billy Foulds. Umpire—"Sinc" McEvenue of Montreal.

COMMENT
As You Like it

AN OTTAWA SPORT writer comments as follows:— If the war has affected other branches of sport, it has not interfered one whit with the interest in rugby football in Toronto this season. On Nov. 7th, the league game between Varsity and McGill drew ten thousand. The same team sawed off two weeks later on the same field and drew ten thousand more. The next Saturday Tigers and Argos replayed their drawn game at Varsity field attracting another ten thousand and next Saturday Varsity and Argos will meet at Varsity stadium and there certainly will not be less than ten thousand. Thus in the course of four weeks four games have been witnessed by forty thousand people. This surely busts all records for the Dominion of Canada.

GEORGE MORIARITY, star third sacker of the Tigers, who is at present touring Honolulu with the All-Star American and National League baseball team speaks as follows about catcher McAvoy the former Berlin Canadian League team backstop now with the Athletics: "Among other things, the trip has proven that Connie Mack has picked a promising youngster in McAvoy, who went to the Athletics at the close of the season from the Baltimore club in the International League. McAvoy assumes a squatting position behind the plate, and handles all slants with ease, besides pulling in foul flies and turning back would-be base stealers with a deadly aim."

IT'S THE PROPER dope that the Argos will have very little difficulty in winning from Hamilton Rowing Club this afternoon but how will they fare against Varsity. Whilst admiring the Intercollegiate champions we are inclined to believe that the Big Four champs will win the Dominion title. Varsity has set aside the rules on which it developed its play this season and will revert to the Interprovincial code, thus the Argos will have the edge in rules as well as weight. Charlie Gage's team has not played since November 21st and although practicing it cannot have that zip essential to championship speed.

A FAN has suggested the following setting for a movie film:—Evers sliding into the plate on a close play, Bresnahan taking the throw and Hank O'Day giving the decision.

CANDIDATES FOR EXECUTIVE OF THE O.H.A.

Vice-president Casselman to Retire — Hockey News

The most important change in the personnel of the O.H.A. Executive is the voluntary retirement of Mr. Ken Casselman of London from the first vice-presidency because of business reasons, after many years of valuable service to the association. Mr. Casselman's place has been filled by Mr. Jas. T. Sutherland of Kingston, while Sheriff J. F. Paxton of Whitby has been elevated to the second vice-presidency. There are five candidates for the Executive, of which four are to be elected. The complete list of nominations is as follows:

Past president—H. E. Wettlaufer, Berlin.

President — Charles Farquharson, Stratford.

Life member—J. Ross Robertson, Toronto.

A. A. U. of C. governor—Francis Nelson, Toronto.

First vice-president—Jas. T. Sutherland, Kingston.

Second vice-president—Sheriff J. T. Paxton, Whitby.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

Treasurer—Dwight J. Turner, Toronto.

Executive Committee (four to be elected)—A. E. Copeland, Midland; R. M. Glover, Peterboro; A. M. Kerr, Preston; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; C. L. Macnab, Orillia.

The annual meeting of the O.H.A. will be held Saturday morning to permit delegates to attend the rugby game in the afternoon.

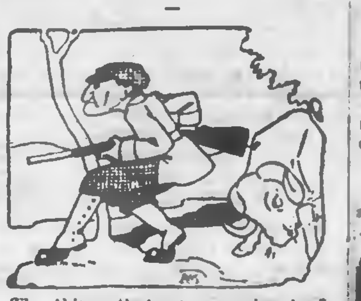
Barrie will be back on the O.H.A. map this year with a crack junior team.

Dunnville will have a new O.H.A. rink this winter, 220x79 feet. It will be up to date in every particular.

Peterboro Junior O.H.A. players and prospective players are reminded of the meeting Friday evening at seven-thirty.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

How would it do to so conduct ourselves that there would not be such a crying and howling need for New Year resolutions?



The things that we are going to do are usually quite different from the things that we arrive to do.

LIVINGSTONE denies that he intends purchasing the Ontarios and turning his T.R. and A.A. team into pro. company. At that Frank Heffernan, Gordon Meeking and a few others could easily get by in the N.H.A.

HANK O'DAY says he is undecided about his future but admits having a couple of good offers. Doyle and McGraw of the Giants and Heiny Zimmerman of the Cubs are suspected.

"JOHNNY EVERS has ceased to be a crab," so says an exchange. The obituary column does not bear the fact out.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

A number of small affairs have been given recently in honour of Miss Curtis, who is staying with her sister, Mrs. W. J. Kent.

Mr. Alan Munro left today for Kingston. He has joined the engineering corps of the second contingent for overseas service.

The many friends of Mrs. Hartshorn will unite in feelings of the deepest sympathy for the death of her husband, which occurred with such tragic suddenness on Tuesday evening.

A meeting of the Business Girls' Club is called for this evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers at half past seven. It is hoped that there will be a large turn-out of all members and intending members as important business is to be discussed and there is a great deal of work to be accomplished before Christmas.

As a result of the success of the Patriotic Bridge held last Friday, a number of ladies have been busily but pleasantly occupied in packing the Christmas boxes which are to be sent to our soldiers at Salisbury Plain. These boxes are dainty dark green affairs, lettered across the top in red "from the ladies of Peterborough." They will be tied with red cord and decorated with Christmas seals and tags. There are one hundred and forty-eight in all, and are sure to prove most welcome.

However attractive the exteriors may prove, the interiors should appeal even more strongly to the fortunate recipients as each box contains a liberal supply of tobacco and chewing gum, also a generous piece of Christmas cake and a khaki handkerchief to be worn round the neck. Last but not least, each box contains a piece of soap, which we are pleased to learn is enclosed in a separate receptacle, to prevent the risk of marring the pleasure derived from the rest of the contents.

The prettiest touch has been given by little Masters Freddie and Billy Trebilcock, who at a considerable sacrifice to their own small selves have given a Christmas card for each box.

The loving thought and generous action of these little fellows will go far to increase the pleasure of our boys on Christmas Day.

PTE. ALLEN HARPER WRITES FROM CAMP AT KINGSTON

General Secretary Meserve of the Y. M. C. A. has received the following letter from Pte. Allen Harper, who is with E Company, 21st Battalion, at Kingston:

Dear Mr. Meserve:

Received your letter and parcel O. K., and should have written sooner, but have been pretty busy.

The fob is certainly a fine one and much more than I expected. I will carry it in fond remembrance of you and the Y. M. C. A. and the good old times I have spent there.

The 57th are doing fine here, and all the boys are well. The whole battalion is now rounding into good condition. There are some 1,200 men and officers down here. All have to work hard, but we get very good meals and accommodation. We sleep in bunks built three high in rows. Each man gets a straw mattress and two blankets. He also gets a complete outfit of clothing, including two suits of underwear, shirts, sweatercoat, etc.

We have a long day of it. Revallei blows at 6 a.m., and we have to crawl out. Then there is calisthenics from 6.30 to 7 (in the dark). Breakfast is then served out. We fall in again at 8.30 and drill till 12 o'clock. After dinner we generally have a route march of about 15 miles or go to Barriefield for target practice. Supper is served at 5.30, and the men are allowed out till 10 p.m. But we non-commissioned officers have to attend a "course of instruction class" at the Armouries from 8 to 10 p.m. five nights a week, so you see you are ready for bed when "lights out" is sounded. But we should worry; that is what we are here for.

Was sorry to learn Mr. Carson's mother was ill, and hope he finds her improving.

Yours to the finish,
ALLEN HARPER.

HOME GUARD 800 STRONG

Executive and Captains Hear Report Regarding Rifles

Members of the executive and captains of the Home Guard met last night to hear the report brought back from Kingston by Colonel Miller and Major R. E. Layfield, who were delegated to interview Colonel Hemming, D. O. C., and obtain rifles and ammunition for the Home Guard. Their report was regarded last night as very encouraging and satisfactory, but just what it contained was not disclosed to the press.

The executive were greatly pleased with the offer of the school board, who will permit them to use 110 Ross rifles that are kept for cadet use.

Display of Flags.

The flag enterprise was also discussed and a committee of two appointed from the association to cooperate with other committees that have been appointed in the endeavor to create more interest in a general display of the flag. Canon J. C. Davidson first mooted the idea, that of having a flag float from every residence or public building in the city.

A committee was appointed to arrange the details of the competition for the silver cup trophy donated by Lt.-Col. Nicholls, president of the Canadian General Electric Co., to encourage shooting efficiency in the regiment.

Colonel Miller and Major Layfield were both enthusiastic over the treatment received by them when they visited Kingston. Colonel Hemming was particularly pleased with the strength of the Peterborough Home Guard.

Over eight hundred members are now enrolled.

THE TROOPS IN ACTION

At Their Concentration Camps — Come and Pick Out Your Relatives and Friends —Stirring Picture at the "Royal"

The management of the Royal Theatre has at a considerable expense, secured the original pictures of the Canadian troops living under active service conditions at both Valcartier and Salisbury Plain. This is one of the best pictures that has been brought to Peterborough for some time, as it not only portrays the mobilization of Canada's first contingent, but is of local interest to those who have relatives and friends with the contingent. If you have any relatives or friends with the troops, visit the Royal and pick them out. It is the best picture of the soldiers preparing for their grim task, that has ever been produced. It is unnecessary to say here that no picture has ever been produced under conditions similar to those which effect the Empire at the present time. A few weeks hence the men who made the creation of this picture possible will be engaged in one of the deadliest conflicts that the world has ever known. Many of them will figure in the honour roll of casualties. It is therefore a great privilege to be able to witness in the Royal Theatre, a portrayal of the stirring events incident to the work that is to follow.

Love for His Horse

An Englishwoman living at Nogentsur-Marne. — A fortnight ago some one came for my father, telling him that an English soldier was ill and that he was a little higher up the boulevard. No one could understand him. He wanted to go to Vincennes and asked for some food for his horse, which had had nothing for a very long time. Someone had brought him a chair to sit on, some vinegar to smell, then a basin of water to wash his face, and a woman offered him the leg of a chicken.

You can imagine how glad he was when my father arrived. He wanted nothing for himself, but was anxious about his horse, a beautiful creature of which he seemed to be very fond.

It was given some wet oats. My mother went out to shake his hand, and it was such a great pleasure for the poor boy to make himself understood and to speak in his native language. He pressed mother's two hands; I am sure that he would have given something to take her in his arms. She had tears in her eyes when on leaving us he said: "God bless you."

SLIGHT GAINS IN ARGONNE

Enemy Made Several Attacks but Were Repulsed --- Violent Bombardment From the Lys to Somme and Artillery Fire Against Nieuport

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 3. — The official report this afternoon says:

"In Belgium there was a rather lively artillery fire directed against Nieuport and south of Ypres.,

"Inundations have extended to the south of Dixmude.

"From the Lys to the Somme there has been a violent bombardment, particularly at Aix Noulette, to the west of Lens.

"There was quiet along the entire front from the Somme to the Aisne and in Champagne.

"In the Argonne several attacks on the part of the enemy were repulsed, and we made slight progress.

"In the Woevre district, German artillery evidenced certain activity, but with insignificant result.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges there is nothing important."

LONDON, Dec. 3. — It is reported that rioting broke out in the Belgian concentration camp at Zeist, Holland, yesterday. Dutch troops fired on the Belgians, killing six and wounding nine. No details are available.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company reports that at the opening of Parliament today, Premier Salandra stated there was no new factor in the situation which would prompt Italy to alter her policy of neutrality.

BOMBS DROPPED ON KRUPP WORKS.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — A despatch from The Hague to the Exchange Telegraph Company says a foreign aviator dropped bombs on the Krupp works at Essen, confining attention to the buildings where the big guns are made.

The aviator escaped uninjured, and the amount of damage to the works has not yet been ascertained.

STIFF FIGHTING AROUND YPRES.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — The increasing thunder of guns in the vicinity of Ypres and the arrival at Bruges of transports bearing wounded men, lead to the conclusion in London that a greater degree of activity has prevailed in West Flanders than has been reported in official communications.

All reports agree that in Northern Poland the battle is still undecided and fiercely contested, with Germans making a desperate effort to resume their forward movement in the direction of Warsaw.

WHAT CITY DADS SAY REGARDING ELECTIONS

Indications Point to Mayoralty Contest —Ald. Johnston Not a Candidate Against Present Mayor

Three weeks from next Monday nomination for the municipal elections will be on, and contrary to all previous years there is still a great deal of uncertainty as to who will run for the various offices. Naturally the main item of interest is the mayoralty contest. Mayor Buller had thought of discontinuing his office, when he received the appointment of collector of inland revenue, but many ratepayers have waited upon him and urged him to remain for another year. He then announced that he was willing to accept the position if given to him by acclamation, and today he informed the Review that he intends to stay in the game if it necessitated entering a campaign. His Worship is in favor of having all the elections by acclamation and donating the money set aside for election purposes to the Patriotic Fund.

Ald. Duncan, whose name has been closely allied with the mayoralty chair for 1915, informed the Review this morning that he is perfectly willing to return as aldermanic representative of the south ward if all the elections go by acclamation, but if there is any contest he intends coming out for mayor. Numerous ratepayers have been urging him to enter the field and he has made up his mind to do so. He denied that he was contemplating running for the Utilities Commission.

Ald. W. J. Johnston still takes the stand that he did a few weeks ago and asserts that he will not oppose Mayor Buller.

After their victorious assault, they marched into the city cheering loudly.

ELECTRIC PLANT SAID TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

No Power for Operation of Maritime Canal and Submarines Are Bottled

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3. — A Herald cable from the Belgian frontier says the last naval ombardment of Zeebrugge resulted in the destruction of the electric plant which supplied power for the operation of the lock gates to the Maritime Canal. TThe gates cannot now be opened and submarines are now bottled up. Unless the gates can be opened the submarines are useless and must be taken piecemeal overland to Antwerp.

TRAINMEN HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Were in Great Danger in Wreck Near Campbellford

"One of the worst wrecks I have ever seen," declared a trainman today, in speaking of the smash-up near Campbellford that occurred on Tuesday. How Engineer Smith came out of the disaster alive is a marvel to railroaders who viewed the wreckage. The front engine of the double-header was pitched clear of the rails against the fence, while the tender was completely reversed. The second engine was submerged by the wreckage of box and flat cars piled high upon it.

Luckily there happened to be no one aboard the caboose of the work train. No one could have escaped. It was smashed to kindling, while a couple of cars ahead of it were demolished.

Immediately after the wreck, the Belleville auxiliary arrived on the scene with the steam derrick for clearing the track. It worked all day aided by the apparatus of the Lindsay auxiliary. The line is clear, and efforts will be made to replace the engines on the track, to be hauled to Montreal for such repairs as may be needed.

Not a great quantity of grain of the double-header's stock was spilled, only two cars being injured.

Engineer Smith, as far as can be ascertained, stuck to his engine, and he was pinned underneath when found. He is the most seriously injured of the three victims, and small bits of coal are said to have lodged around his brain when his scalp was torn open. Hospital reports today declared the two sufferers confined there to be recovering slowly, and Engineer Smith resting easily, with little fears entertained of him failing to come through all right. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge, and in his time of need does not find himself neglected. He is a young man of about 35 and regarded as a capable engineer.

No information relative to the speed at which the double-header was travelling when it crashed into the work train can be gathered. There is a slight down-grade at the locality: Orders had been given to pick up the flagman of the work train at Campbellford, and this was done, but it is stated that a miscalculation occurred over the distance the work train was supposed to be ahead. The train was but two miles east of Campbellford, not four, as first reports stated. From an authoritative source it has ben learned that the flagman has been relieved from duty.

KING IN THE TRENCHES

His Majesty Goes About Chatting With Men at the Front

LONDON, Dec. 3. — The Express prints the following from its correspondent in France: King George had a thrilling experience when, guided by two high staff officers, he visited a number of bivouacs. He even entered the trenches and talked with the men by the camp fires. It was wonderful to see the enthusiasm awakened by the Royal visit. What touched the soldiers most was the King's personal interest in their welfare, and his eagerness to know how they were fed, what life was like in the firing line, whether they were receiving everything possible to make for their comfort. This was evident in a hundred questions. The soldiers talked freely to His Majesty, and repeated over and over again that he need have no fear as they meant to see this thing through. One feature of the visit which impressed His Majesty most was the general cheerful determination shown everywhere to make the best of anything that came along till the Germans are beaten.

SLIGHT REDUCTION MADE IN THE ASSESSMENT OF SEVERAL PROPERTIES

Other Appeals Before Judge Huycke Are Thrown Out on Account of Technicalities

Of the twenty-eight appeals against the decisions of the Court of Revision which were heard yesterday before Judge Huycke but seven appellants were successful in securing a reduction in their assessment and the total amount of reduction made in all seven was $4,020. The sitting of the Court of Revision this year was of special note as the members of the Retail Merchants Association secured th services of E. H. D. Hall to oppose the assessment as made by Assessor Henry. Practically no success was won at that Court so the Association instructed their solicitor to appeal to the County Judge and the above was the result.

G. N. Gordon, city solicitor, was present to act for the city and had six appeals thrown out on technicalities. The appeal against the assessment of the Oriental Hotel was made to the Court of Revision under that name while property in East City also owned by the Dickson Estate was appealed under the name of the Dickson Co. The Oriental appeal was carried to the County Judge but under the name of the Dickson Co. and for that reason could not be considered. The firm could however appeal against the decision of the Court of Revision in regards to the property in East City but did not desire to do so.

No Reason Given.

Mr. Gordon also raised an objection to the appeal of Barrie's Limited being considered on the ground that the reason for appealing was not given. Acording to the Act the reason must be given and the appeal was therefore thrown out. The appeals of R. Denne, N. Douros, F. R. J. McPherson and E. F. Mason met the same fate on acount of being irregularly entered.

In the appeal of Wm. Lech and Sons it was proven that the assessor had credited that firm with an extra half foot frontage and the assessment was reduced $180. The Kingan Hardware Co. was assessed for $533 per foot and this was reduced to $500 making a total reduction of $700. In the cases of Alex. Gibson and Nugent Drug Co. $200 was taken off the assessment of each. The appeal of James Sutherland for over-assessment on his store on George Street was not allowed but on his property on Albert Street $50 was taken off the assessment of the building at number 539, $10 off the assessment on the building at 530, and $150 off the assessment off the building on the adjoining lot making a total of $210 reduction.

In the evidence taken dealing with the appeal of R. J. Soden it was made known that the assessor assessed the property along that section of George Street at $550 per foot. The property was 114 feet deep except where there was a lane where the depth was 100 feet. Further evidence revealed the fact that the property in question was but 81 feet deep and Judge Huycke reduced the assessment by $1260. The property of Ben Shortly is also 81 feet deep and Judge Huycke reduced his assessment by $1270.

The appeals of Sanford Manufacturing Co. (Oak Hall) for whom J. R. Corkery appeared and Moncur Drug Co. created a great deal of interest. The frontage of the former is 19 feet 3 inches and the latter 21 feet. Assessor Henry stated he fixed the average assessment on the two at $440. Moncur's was assessed for $461 and Sanford Manufacturing So.'s for $423 per foot, the reason for the increase in Moncur's being that it was closer to Hunter Street. G. W. Morrow of the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. which owns the building embracing the two stores, gave evidence to the effect that the property was worth between $300 and $350 per foot. Wm. Langford swore that he would consider that a fair price. Mr. Morrow stated that the property was assessed for $21,000 and he would recommend the sale of it for $20,000. Mr. Gordon asked the witness if he thought the Toronto Sav-

Work for Unemployed.

Mayor Buller expressed himself as being in favor of having the sewers constructed in that section of the city known as Victoria Heights so that the unemployed might be assisted especially during the Christmas season. Chairman Ald. Duncan informed His Worship that the work is being gone on with.

The matter of paying Foley and Gleason the full amount of their contract and accepting a bond for the work unfinished was left in the hands of the chairman, city engineer and city solicitor with power to act.

The question of granting sewer facilities for the Diamond property which lies south and east of the lift locks was brought up but the City Engineer reported that it will be impossible to do anything along that line until the new sewage system for East City is constructed. DOCTOR WINS APPEAL.

At Osgoode Hall the Appellate Court allowed the appeal of Dr. Andrew Haig of Campbellford against the decision of Chief Justice Falconbridge for $1,200. The action was brought by Chas. H. Cassan, a friend of the doctor. The two went on a fishing expedition and Cassan's eye was injured. Dr. Haig attended Cassan and the latter claimed the Doctor poisoned his eye by not using the right solution. The Appellate Court disagreed with the judgment of the Chief Justice and allowed the appeal with costs and action dismissed with costs.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1914

THE TRUCE TO PARTY STRIFE.

WHEN, in the beginning of the great struggle that is now making the fairest portions of Europe desolate, the Canadian party leaders declared a truce to bickering and heckling criticism, it was assumed that the Canadian Parliament would work unanimously for the welfare of Canada and the safety of the British Empire. Memorable was that war session of the Canadian Parliament for the singular high tone of its sentiments and the unanimity of its debates and measures. That brief, brilliant session proved that in Canada politics could rise to a high and noble occasion, and it was hoped that the example set by the political leaders of the Canadian people would be imitated by the press and by all those who had influence with the people. Such a conclusion has largely been justified by events, but a survey of the editorial pages of Liberal newspapers throughout Canada shows from what a height they have fallen. Displayed in their pages are remarks of an uneasy nature, like an itch to do something not quite respectable, which they have not strength to resist.

Take, for example, the following from a representative Liberal newspaper of Western Ontario. The London Advertiser declares that "Canada is listening in vain to hear a patriotic keynote from the lazy lips of Sir Robert Borden." It adds: "Recently we have seen Sir Wilfrid Laurier stumping Quebec, calling upon the French-Canadians to enlist for the European war. The whereabouts and actions of the other party's leader at that time were made remarkable by contrast. Sir Robert Borden has been golfing and dancing in Virginia, and there have been none to assume a leadership of his people at a time when public sentiment needed to be stirred as never before in Canada's history."

The Ottawa Free Press, the Liberal organ of the Capital, said, in commenting on the big meeting in Montreal: "Although Sir Robert Borden and several of his colleagues were advertised to speak at the French-Canadian meeting in Montreal, called to launch enlistment in the French-Canadian overseas contingent, not one of them appeared. While Sir Wilfrid Laurier was promoting the cause of the Empire, Premier Borden was playing politics in Toronto and considering a general election."

The Kingston Whig, the chief Liberal newspaper between Ottawa and Toronto, asserts that "As a matter of fact, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been more energetic in his service than any minister of the Government, or all of them, excepting General Hughes."

The Edmonton Bulletin, the chief Liberal newspaper of Alberta, controlled by the Hon. Frank Oliver; the Saskatoon Phoenix and Regina Leader, of Saskatchewan, along with the Toronto Globe and most Liberal journals, have expressed themselves in the same strain as those we have quoted. As to Sir Robert Borden, it is true his work regarding the Canadian Overseas Forces has not been of the spectacular kind, but General Hughes' speech at Hamilton was ample testimony to the work done by Canada's Premier, the London Advertiser to the contrary notwithstanding.

We need hardly remind the electors of Peterborough that this squeamish criticism is general in Liberal newspapers throughout Canada and reflects the uneasy attitude of the Liberal party in this country to stand firmly with the Government's policy of supporting the British cause to the limit of Canada's resources. This party that is showing signs of wavering now, was the one that pinned its faith to training ships—the tin-pot navy—and refused to sanction the building of Dreadnoughts, which have proved to be the stay and bulwark of the Empire in the struggle in which we are engaged. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has done as well as his years would permit and has aided recruiting in Quebec, but what he did was only to amplify the policy of Sir Robert Borden, without whose support and sanction Sir Wilfrid would have been as impotent as the humblest citizen. The Liberal criticism that has lately been given to the press, over-laudatory to Sir Wilfrid and unfair to Sir Robert Borden, is, in a final analysis, nothing more than small potatoes.

A NEW NATIONAL POLICY.

WHEN DID CANADIANS ever have such a national policy as now? Many of us remember what a thrill the old original N. P. created in this country when John A. Macdonald swept Canada as old Van Tromp, the Dutch admiral, did the English Channel, with his broom at the masthead. That was called a party victory. It was almost everything else. The N. P. might as easily have been the slogan of one party as another. The fact was that Canada was ripe for a bold, self-asserting stroke of policy. Protection to native industries supplied it. That was a mere matter of tariff, but it did the work. Now Canada is about to deliver another master stroke of economics, and the millions who buy made-in-Canada goods will help her do it.

THE GERMAN TUNE HAS CHANGED.

FREQUENTLY there appears in the newspapers evidence pointing to the failure of the German plans in this war, and also to the anxiety with which they regard the progress of the conflict. The following paragraph from the Toronto Mail and Empire is a case in point:

> "Herman Ridder, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, of New York, says in his German review of the war: 'The overwhelming forces of the Czar now cast their heavy shadow across the trembling plains of Poland. . . Should it happen that the power of Russia succeeds in crushing Germany, at what point may we expect England to be able to stay the ambitions of the Slav to world power?' The idea that Russia would have a chance to crush Germany was laughed at in Berlin at the outbreak of war. The quick conquest of France was to settle that. The German tune has changed."

WEEDS ON ONTARIO FARMS.

DURING RECENT YEARS the Commission of Conservation has been directing agricultural survey work in various sections of the Dominion. The object has been to secure accurate information respecting the methods of the Canadian farmer with a view to promoting scientific agriculture. No stronger proof of the need and value of such investigations could be found than the following report respecting weed conditions in Ontario, commonly regarded as the banner farming province of Canada:

> "The farms in nearly every district visited are reported as being badly infested with weeds; sow thistle, wild oats, wild flax, wild buckwheat, rib grass, Canada thistle and couch grass are very common. The weed problem is getting to be a serious one with many farmers, and one that interferes largely with the crops grown and the present methods of farming being practised. Those farmers who follow a systematic short rotation of crops have been able to keep the weeds fairly well in check. On the majority of the farms visited, however, weeds are increasing. The farmers are unable to tell definitely where the weeds come from. In many instances no attention is paid to exterminating new weeds when they first appear on the farm; consequently, by the time a farmer does make an effort to get rid of them they have become so numerous that the process is a difficult and expensive one. The old adage, 'a stitch in time saves nine,' would be one well worth heeding in connection with the weed problem."

HENRY SIEGEL MERELY FINED.

SOME TIME AGO we commented on the collapse of the famous Siegel-Cooper stores, which involved in ruin the savings of thousands of people, among whom were many of his employees. His trial has just been concluded whereby he is let off with a paltry fine of $1,000, or ten months in jail, and which furnishes another example of the red tape and injustice of the American Law Courts. Canadian Courts are not free from criticism in this regard, but are not quite so deformed. In the beginning of his trial he was willing to plead guilty to an offense more serious than the one of which he was finally convicted. His case illustrates what a skilful lawyer can do for a self-confessed crook and for the perversion of justice.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A SURVEY of all the modern electric appliances for the home leads one to the conclusion that a technical education in electrical appliances is necessary for successful housekeeping. What would our grandmothers think of electric toasters, washers, heaters, cleaners, wringers, sad-irons, curling-irons, percolators, clocks, and numerous other electrical appliances?

A Critic Rebuked.

(Toronto News.)

Bold Beck's Weekly dares to say
We have cast a slur on squash,
And, pursuing U.S. essays
Statements that will scarcely wash.
We declared that pumpkin pie
Had been threatened by its cousin,
And our Critic starts to shoot
Fourteen bullets to the dozen.

He disdains the pumpkin pie,
He says it is a Yankee dish.
He avers that pies of squash
Satisfy his dearest wish.
Crippled intellects like these
Are familiar to us all.
Such the products of the schools
Flourishing in Montreal.

Have We scorned the Hubbard Squash?
Never, since our pen was made.
Boiled, and mashed with butter sauce
And with parsley leaves arrayed,
'Tis ambrosia itself,
Cheering every weary eye.
But 'tis ever out of place
When assembled in a pie.

Further, this abandoned Beck's
Takes a shot at Angeline,
Wonders who the lady is,
She, our Paragraphic queen!
Doubt her cookery!—Ye gods,
Men have fought for less than that.
Let this Beck-ery beware,
Editor, to Office Cat!

The German Spirit.

(Berlin Kreuz Zeitung.)

Speaking frankly, and as true Germans, we would see every monument, every stone that tells the history of France, every picture, though it be a work of semi-divine conception, utterly destroyed rather than that the glorious work that has been given to the German race to perform in the world should be hindered by even so much as one hour's avoidable delay. The world can be revitalized, society ennobled and refined, only through the German spirit. The world must, for its own salvation, be Germanized.

CHEAP FOREIGN LABOUR.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Those who had the good luck to be present at the splendid lecture given by Rev. Principal Sharrard of India will never forget the impression he made upon the audience when picturing the phenomenal rise of India industrially since the Russo-Japanese war. That war convinced India that the east was just as good as the west and with cheap labour Asia could beat the west. No doubt this is true. What hope have we to keep our own fair lands for ourselves and our civilization if not in protection? By means of judicious and fair protection we can keep Canada wholly for Canadian civilization. We have no wish to be mean to Asia but until Asia comes up to our standard and becomes like us we cannot be expected to let ourselves down to the level of eastern cheap labour. It is to go back to all that we have advanced from. The lecurer said that Asiatics were not going to emigrate in future. They were finding such good conditions at home that beyond a little foreign travel Orientals had no longer any desire to leave home.

Yours,
INTERESTED.

PATRIOTIC FUND.

Sir,—What are the qualifications of Adjutant McElhiney (and how do you pronounce the name)? I should think military duties would prevent that gentleman from doing the work required, which should be done by a committee of the parsons and priests of the respective churches.

Yours truly,
F. J. S.

BRIDGENORTH LADIES HELP IN PATRIOTIC WORK

They Realized $64.25 by Serving Meals at C.O.F. Hall

A grand patriotic demonstration was held in the Foresters' Hall, Bridgenorth, last night, with Reeve Garbutt in the chair. The report of the ladies on the results of their efforts, of two days, on behalf of the Patriotic Fund, was received with applause, the total being $64.25.

During the two days of the stock judging, the ladies served meals. A concert will be given Thursday evening, December 10th, in the C. O. F. hall and the ladies promise a good program.

Tomorrow afternoon the ladies meet to organize a patriotic association.

Mr. Burnham, who was present last night, said that when Mr. Jobe telephoned him that the ladies were holding a social for patriotic purposes and asked him to come out and say a few words, he brushed aside a multitude of obstacles that stood in the way and was only too pleased and proud to be present. There are occasions when we must not stop to think or let things stand in the way. We must go forward. This was one of them. The whole British world is throbbing with the shock of war and with the strain of every effort to help our men and the vast multitude of the distressed and afflicted. All that we have lived for, all that we have striven for, all that we have and all that we are, is now being put to the test. Canada, as a part of the glorious British Empire, is proud to do its share. While her soldiers are going to the front, those remaining at home are doing what they can to supply them with many of the necessaries of life and to provide for all those who are left dependent and are being deprived of their property and thrown into poverty and distress in consequence of the war. Just as there can be no home without a woman, there can be no great work undertaken for the well-being of humanity without the help and self-sacrifice of womankind. The great work of love and kindness which they are performing in their ceaseless efforts to provide necessaries and comforts are beyond all praise. But there is more than that. It is the especial glory of women that it is they who chiefly preserve the spirit and sense of chivalry which should animate us all at such a time. Men may fall short, grow careless and forget. Women never forget what a high and noble spirit is. They supply the dynamic of spiritual power. While men are engaged in the carnage of actual war, nurses flit to and fro on the very battlefields themselves in the service of the wounded and suffering. Our good sisters there and here "keep the faith" in humanity in the midst of it all. They preserve the spirit of gentleness, refinement and the standard of true excellence and self-sacrifice which saves civilization from coarseness and ruin. It is a great privilege to know that we can all help at such a time and that we are all helping. The country is even surpassing the centres of population in its efforts. We must stand fast, for the time of trial is upon us. But we are equal to it. It is perhaps, after all, the real meaning of life that we cannot get something for nothing. We must give an equivalent. If we would be great, we must stand great tests and do great things.

From the following alphabetical list of the different grades of military service readers will be able to understand exactly the duties of the various officers now serving at the front.

Adjutant.—An army officer who assists a commanding officer by receiving and communicating orders; usually holding the rank of lieutenant or captain. He may not be above a major in rank.

Aide-de-Camp (A.D.C.)—An officer who is in close touch with a general, and assists him in all routine matters.

Bombardier—The lowest grade of non-commissioned officer in an artillery regiment, and correspondig to corporal in the infantry. In old times he handled the bombard, or fuse, which fired a gun.

Captain—A captain commands a company of infantry, troop of cavalry, or battery of artillery. He ranks between a lieutenant and a major. He is responsible for the arms, clothes, efficiency, and discipline of his men, and recommends for promotion the non-commissioned officers.

Colonel—The chief acting officer of artillery or engineer regiments is always a colonel, but in the infantry and cavalry he is frequently known as a lieutenant-colonel, the full rank being often conferred as an honorary distinction upon some Royal or distinguished personage.

Commandant—A title usually given to an officer in charge of a fortress, military station, or military school. A captain-commandant is a captain who is temporarily doing duty of a higher rank.

Corporal—A non-commissioned officer of the lowest rank in infantry regiments. A corporal wears as a badge two stripes on the left arm.

Field-Marshal—The title of the British officer of the highest rank. He carries a baton as a symbol of rank.

General—An army rank next below that of Field-Marshal. Subsidiary ranks are those of Lieutenant-General and Major-General.

Gun-layer—An artilleryman or non-commissioned officer who is in command of the team when it works a big gun. On smaller guns the gun-layer sights the gun.

Lieutenant (Second)—In the army the junior commissioned officer is known as second-lieutenant.

Major—The title of the lowest rank of field officer in the army. The major assists the commanding officer in all matters of routine and discipline.

Orderly—A soldier or non-commissioned officer told off for routine duty. Such duties are usually undertaken by all the men in turn.

Quartermaster—an Officer whose duty is to provide quarters, provisions forage, and ammunition.

Sergeant—A non-commissioned officer who is often described as "the backbone of the army." There are also ranks known as sergeant-major (who is the leading sergeant of a regiment and quartermaster-sergeant (who has charge of stores, etc.)

Warrant Officer—An officer between the rank of a commissioned and non-commissioned officer. He wears a sword, but is not entitled to a salute.

Canadian Telegraph Poles

The Secretary of the High Commissioner's office in London recently interviewed the British Post Office Department in regard to purchasing telegraph poles in Canada. He was informed that whereas competition with Russia and Norway for smaller poles would probably be too keen for Canada to meet, the Department would consider the question of placing trial orders for larger size poles in Canada.

THE SANTA MARIA DERELICT

By M. QUAD

Of all the devilish, cold blooded things done by men you will have read of few to equal what took place aboard one of the Spanish merchantmen, the Santa Maria, in the year 1862. It was published in the papers at the time, but only a partial account, and as we had war and excitement at home the incident was soon forgotten.

One of the oldest business houses in Mexico up to the date above named was that of the Spanish house of Galera & Co., founded seventy-five years previously. The business of the house was banking, mining, merchandising and cattle raising. It had a dozen branches in Mexico, and it had dealings with half a dozen countries. In a financial sense it was stronger than the government, and its yearly profits footed up an enormous sum. A son of the founder had succeeded to the management, and when old age came he turned over the active work to a cousin named Alvarez. The new manager was a young man of twenty-five, born in Spain of a fine family and had been educated for the priesthood. He was a man without a vice. Such was his probity that he was called "Holy Alvarez" even in his youth. At an enormous salary and with autocratic powers young Alvarez took over the management of affairs in Mexico, and almost as soon as he stepped foot on North American soil a change took place in his character. He began to drink, gamble and play fast and loose.

Of course there was gossip about the new manager, and there were those who predicted that his extravagances would ultimately bring ruin to the old house, but there were no official complaints. He knew little or nothing of business, but he did know how to spend money royally, and in a year he had people guessing how much longer it would take him to bankrupt the house. It was after the balance sheets had proved to him that he was spending more than the profits of the house and was a debtor to an enormous amount that he set about preparing a grand coup. The Spanish merchantman was loaded with a consignment of gold, silver, copper, furs and dyestuffs for Spain and the cargo insured to the last cent. Alvarez took into his confidence a young man named Prado, and when the Santa Maria sailed his confederate went with her as supercargo.

The ship was manned by a crew of fourteen men, all Spaniards. Thirty days after her sailing to the southward the American bark Homeward left the port of Valparaiso homeward bound. We had been out three days when we ran into a dead calm, with the weather so terribly hot that the deck planks smoked in the sun. As we lay heaving on the ground swell a small boat drifted into view. It seemed to be empty, and it had been in sight for two hours and was not over half a mile away when the captain decided to pick it up. A boat was sent off, and when she returned with the stranger we had a sad spectacle under our eyes. There was a dead man lying at full length under the thwarts

About two days later we came up with a derelict from which the man in the boat had no doubt escaped. On board a horrible sight met us—the bodies of fourteen dead men.

The derelict was a great find to us. Her manifest showed a cargo valued at over $2,000,000, and the ship was all right above deck.

As the man got away alone and had provisioned the boat it must have been after the others were dead. He it was, then, who had brought about the wholesale death of the crew, and he must have had a strong motive. That motive was discovered when some of the boxes of treasure were hoisted out of the lazaret and broken open. Aside from one or two boxes, the whole treasure business was a fake. Lead had been substituted for silver and gold. The furs were a cheat and a fraud, and the value of the dyestuffs was not one-quarter of the sum they were insured for. A second and closer search of the stateroom evidently occupied by the supercargo gave us the key to unlock the whole mystery. He had left behind a letter of instruction signed by Alvarez at the City of Mexico, and in that we learned that the name of the dead man was Prado.

With the auger hole plugged and a part of our crew on board the Santa Maria, we laid our course for the port of Valdivia, and in due time both craft arrived there in good shape. The dead had been given burial, of course, but there was no lack of other proofs. As soon as the plot was unraveled steps were taken for the arrest of Alvarez in Mexico, and our claim for salvage was filed. Governments move slowly in international matters. It was months before they got ready to arrest the man who had plotted this sea tragedy. He had meanwhile continued his career of dissipation and extravagance, depending upon his insurance money to make everything good. News got to him somehow from Valdivia of the derelict being towed in, and he left Mexico and hid away in Bolivia. There he was at last found, but he cheated the hangman by committing suicide.

As a plot hatched against an equal and as a tragedy of the sea one must believe that Prado was little short of a devil incarnate to sweep aside coolly the fourteen human beings who stood in his path.

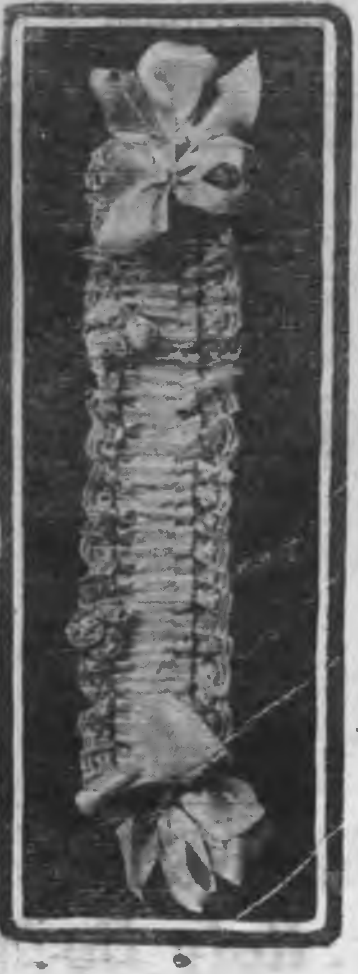
FOR BABY'S CARRIAGE.

Dainty Handmade Band to Take the Place of the Leather One.



BAND FOR BABY'S CARRIAGE.

The accessories for the perambulator, the little carriage in which baby takes his airing, should always be as dainty as possible. The little pillows may be lace trimmed or hand embroidered. The coverlet may match these or carry out some other design.

The strap that keeps the little tot from falling out may also be hand made. All these pretty things may be fashioned at home. The shops where they are sold charge very high prices for most of them.

The carriage strap illustrated here is of wide satin ribbon, neatly gathered and lined with a plain piece of the satin ribbon of a paler shade. The edges are trimmed with frills of valenciennes lace.

Clusters of satin ribbon rosebuds are knotted along the length of the band, while the ends of the band are finished with coquettish knots of narrow ribbon. A little sachet powder sprinkled inside of the band before the two pieces of ribbon are fastened together will add to its daintiness.

SUMPTUOUS COSTUMES.

Evening Gowns of Rich and Dazzling Fabrics Interwoven With Pearls.

For afternoon and evening gowns Paris has advised a figure hung in garments as dazzling and sumptuous as those of a Byzantine princess. These rich materials refute any possibility of a country undergoing "hard times." Ropes and trimmings of pearls, crystal and rhinestone rival jet and nacre or the new mother-of-pearl.

The ball gown of winter is to be conceived in mousseline perlee. The interwoven beads of the bodice material are so heavy that they cause the silk to droop in deep folds, which are caught at the center by narrow straps. The underdress, entraine, is made of heavy net, interwoven with silver threads and pearls, and the overdress is trimmed with appliques of silver embroidery.

WRAPS OF THE SEASON.

Corduroy and golf cord are among the favorite corded fabrics. Bedford cord is very desirable for heavy things, like waistcoats in capes and coats.

If you have an old lace shawl packed away in a cedar chest bring it to light. You may wear it in capelike fashion with your white or other evening frocks.

One of the prettiest of the new capes is a raven's wing silk that reaches the hem of the gown, falling in long, straight folds and gathered into an upstanding frill around the neck.

A cape of knitted wool, attached by snaps to a sleeveless wool waistcoat, is a novelty that is attracting a good deal of attention among people who like a light weight but warm and compact wrap for outdoor sports.

Some of the sweaters being displayed in the shops recall the jerseys of thirty and more years ago. Like those of the past, they extend well down over the hips and button straight up the front with self covered buttons.

So far many of the coats shown button rather snugly about the throat. One heavy coat of mixed black and gray, in a soft, thick cloth, shows a wrinkled collar of black velvet, and the fur collars fold close about the neck.

Do your Christmas shopping early.

A Prophecy

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Margaret and I met in Florence. We were both of an artistic makeup, and there is nothing more pleasing than the companionship of one with congenial tastes. We sauntered through the galleries of that artistic city and admired the works of art together.

Then, too, there is something unifying to kindred spirits in being thrown together in a foreign country. America to Americans on the other side of the Atlantic ocean seems so far. The customs of those countries are so different from ours. They seem so old; we so new. It is this that draws Americans abroad together who would live for years next door to each other and never form an acquaintance.

These meetings between fellow countrymen of opposite sex frequently end in love affairs, and such was the case with Margaret and me. But my suit was not successful. Whether this was due to Margaret or the influences brought to bear upon her I did not know. At any rate, I returned to my home, leaving my heart in Florence, and I realized that I would never get it back again.

On my voyage home the stateroom opposite me was occupied by a young man who had gone abroad for his health and, having failed in his quest, was coming back to die. There was no one on board whose business it was to minister to him, and the duty fell to me. I became very much attached to him, and he seemed grateful for my attentions. More than that, he seemed to love me as a brother.

I told him of my disappointment, and he seemed to be regretful for me. He tried to comfort me by telling me that he had a feeling deep down in his heart that Margaret and I would meet again and that all would be changed. "She loves you," he said. "I know it. When she refused you it was contrary to her inclinations. She will return to America much changed. Her circumstances will be different. Instead of refusing to listen to your suit she will be glad to lean upon you, happy and relieved to be loved by you."

He seemed so earnest, so sure, in what he said that I was greatly surprised. Could it be that to one so near death had been imparted something of that knowledge of future events we are prone to attribute to those who have passed the portal of eternity? The thought occurred, but I did not really believe it.

My friend lingered till we reached the coast. Then he said that if he could be spared through the brief journey that remained to him to his home he would be content to die. I accompanied him and spent with him the few days he lived after being again under his own rooftree. The day he died he was, or seemed to me to be, delirious.

"I see men marching," he said. "hundreds, thousands, millions. They are like fields of wheat. A mowing machine is passing through them, and they are falling just as I have seen the grain fall in the fields of a summer day. People are fleeing before them. Some are peasants; some are gentlefolks; some are without a roof to cover them; some are starving; some are strangers in that land and, being cut off from home and friends, have no one to care for them."

At this point his voice sank to murmurings, and I understood no more.

I had left Italy early in the spring, and when my friend died the leaves had not yet put forth their buds. I was busily engaged, but not so much so as to recover from my disappointment. My mind during the day constantly reverted to she who I felt was my natural mate, and the nights were dreary without her.

Late in July there came like thunderclaps out of a clear sky declarations of war all over Europe. Hundreds of thousands of Americans were stranded there. All, or nearly all, were cut off not only from their homes, but from the wherewithal to meet their necessities. Naturally I thought of Margaret, for I had seen no announcement of her return. I would have filled my pockets with gold and gone to seek her that I might supply her necessities, but I realized that I would be unable to find her and would not likely be able to reach her if I knew where she was. All I knew of her whereabouts was that she had left Italy, for it was not intended when I parted with her to remain there after the spring opened.

Since I could not go to her I waited for her to come to me. Something told me that my lost friend's words would come true. When a steamer bringing Americans from Europe came in I was on the dock and watched eagerly those who came down the gangplank. One day I was at my post as a steamer docked, and as she swung around to back into the pier I caught sight of a pale, haggard girl standing on the deck.

I rushed to the gangplank, but was ordered away. I waited while the throng of sufferers left the ship. My eye was on Margaret, but she did not see me in the crowd on the dock. As she stepped off the gangplank I caught her in my arms. Looking up, she recognized me and broke into tears of joy.

Hers was one of the bitterest of those many bitter tales. Her father had died before the outbreak of the war, and she and her mother had been turned out in the cold with not a hundred francs on which to subsist and return home.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson X.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 6, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xvi, 1-8; Matt. xxviii, 11-15—Memory Verses, 6, 7—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 5, 6 Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The resurrection from the dead is the crowning event in all His work, for if Christ be not risen faith is vain, preaching is vain, no one is saved; there is no forgiveness of sins (I Cor. xv, 14-18). But before we consider His resurrection we must look at some incidents in connection with His death and burial which we have passed over. Note the women who ministered to Him, who followed Him, who looked on afar off as He was crucified, who beheld where His dead body was laid and returned and prepared spices to anoint it when the Sabbath was past (Mark xv, 40-47; Luke xxiii, 55).

They loved Him greatly, but did not believe that He would rise from the dead, so those spices were in a measure love's labor lost because of unbelief. Note the pierced side, the blood and water with all their Scriptural suggestions and the fulfilled Scriptures about His being pierced and not a bone broken (John xix, 31-37; Zech. xii, 10; Ex. xii, 46).

The boldness of Joseph and Nicodemus at a time when all others seemed to fail, the new tomb, the loving ministry and the fulfilled Scripture concerning His grave being with the rich in His death are a fascinating record (Luke xxiii, 50-53; John xix, 38-42; Isa. liii, 9).

It would appear from Matt. xxvii, 62-66, that some of the Pharisees remembered, as His disciples did not, that He had spoken of rising again after three days and therefore they had His tomb sealed. Our lesson verses give us only the beginning of the resurrection story. They tell us of the coming of the women to the tomb very early in the morning on the first day of the week to anoint His body, wondering who would roll away the stone for them. How often we find the stone which we thought would hinder us rolled away when we reach the place! We read of an earthquake when He died, but this is another one at His resurrection (Matt. xxvii, 54; xxviii, 2).

Inanimate nature is moved by these events while the heart of man remains harder than the rocks. Some day we shall see these angels, whose countenances are like lightning and their raiment white as snow, and we, too, shall shine as the sun (Matt. xxviii, 3-4; xiii, 43). We should be reflecting more of His glory now in these mortal bodies (II Cor. iii, 18). How beautiful it is that the first word from the angel to these devoted women was "fear not" or "be not" affrighted (verses 5, 6; Matt. xxviii, 5, 6). So He Himself said to the other women after He had appeared to Mary, as He allowed them to hold Him by the feet and worship Him, "Be not afraid; go tell My brethren" (Matt. xxviii, 9, 10).

With similar words He spoke to the disciples in the upper room that evening, saying: "Peace be unto you. Why are ye troubled? Behold my hands and my feet that it is I Myself" (Luke xxiv, 36-40). Even though we fail and forsake Him He has only words of peace and comfort for us. Matthew and Mark speak of one angel; Luke and John speak of two, but there is no discrepancy, for if there were two there was certainly one, whether the disciples or women saw one or two. Neither is there any discrepancy in the seemingly different positions of the angels, for they can move about more easily than we can. The words of the angel concerning Jesus, "He is risen, He is not here" (verse 6), are sometimes used by ministers at a funeral concerning the dead, but that is a wrong use of the words, for they refer to the resurrection, not to the burial of the body.

How very gracious it was of the Lord to tell the angel to send by the woman a special message to Peter and then to give Peter a special personal interview (verse 7; Luke xxiv, 34) after all his base denial of his Master. It is always so—weakest lambs have largest share of their tender shepherd's care. The angels reminded the women that Jesus had said that He would be crucified and the third day rise again, and yet when the women told the disciples that He was risen their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not (Luke xxiv, 6-11). Mark xvi, 9, says that Jesus appeared first to Mary Magdalene, but the full record of that appearance is found in John xx, 1-17.

Is not His appearing first to her another illustration of the same great truth that we saw in His giving Peter a special personal interview? She was blinded by tears of unbelief, but one word from Him opened her eyes. A peculiar thing in her case was His "Touch Me not" when He afterward allowed the other women to hold Him by the feet.

To my mind the reason He gave her was clear and plain. "For I am not yet ascended to My Father" (John xx, 17). Another wonderful thing that on His way to His Father in His resurrection body as our high priest He should stop to speak to her and comfort her. Having ascended and returned, He could then let others touch and handle Him as He did the others and the disciples that evening.

Humor and Philosophy

NO ACCOUNTING FOR TASTES

THE kinks in some men's busy brains
Are hard to understand.
One person to one special cause
Will give his heart and hand,
While others who are just as wise,
With heads about as long,
On schemes exactly opposite
Will bear down just as strong.

It's pretty hard to comprehend
How men who seem to be
About as bright as any one
With some cults can agree.
And yet if you will look to home
Some notions you may find
That will not be accepted by
The balance of mankind.

We cannot look at things alike.
Each has his little fad
That seems to him, if understood,
Would make the whole world glad,
But some one else may think as well
Of something that would seem
To you to be a wild and vague
And iridescent dream.

And that is why each little cult
Has ones of it who swear
And who are looking for a chance
To boost it anywhere.
If we could see things just alike
Perhaps it would be nice,
But, oh, the world would just for that
Be mighty short on spice!

Kind Words Can Never Die.

"Why is a girl a good cook?"

"Generally because she is too homely to be frivolous."

"Right. Why do we so often say 'He is very good to his family'?"

"It is necessary to say some good of him."

"Well?"

"He's apt to be an exposed grafter."

The Difference.

"It is hard."

"What is?"

"To win a rich wife."

"Different with a poor one."

"She is easy to get, eh?"

"Not exactly."

"What then?"

"Hard to lose."

Hasn't Time.

"The office doesn't seek the man, as it used to."

"No; it doesn't seem to."

"I wonder why?"

"It is too busy dodging him."

Easy.

"Did he make his mark?"

"No; he concluded he would do something else."

"What?"

"Be one."

Improved Method.

First he was meek and humble,
Avoiding scraps and strife,

WHAT CITY DADS SAY REGARDING ELECTION

position to Mayor Buller?" asked a Review scribe.

"I don't care if a dozen men come against him," was his reply. "I won't. But if the Mayor drops out, you can bet I'll be there."

Ald. Johnston also endorsed the idea of having all the elections by acclamation, and remarked that if it could be possible he would like to see it tried out. He was of the opinion that such a move on the part of Peterboro would give this city universal publicity. With reference to the rumor that he was coming out for a member of the Utilities Commission, Ald. Johnston stated emphatically that he would not offer T. F. Matthews any opposition, but if the present chairman of the Commission dropped out he might consider entering the field.

W. H. Bradburn's name has also been mentioned as a possible contestant for a seat on the Commission, but in speaking of it today he remarked that the city would, in his opinion, be making a mistake in not having Mr. Matthews on the Commission for another term, as the work is but partially under way. Mr. Bradburn stated that he was out of city affairs, and would like to remain out, but if Mr. Matthews decided not to stand, he might offer himself for nomination.

The Review got in touch with Mr Matthews today, and although he would not make a definite statement to the effect that he would run again he left the impression that he would be a candidate for the Commission At present it appears as though Mr Matthews will return by acclamation"

In the west ward, Ald. G. W Green's term finishes this year. He is out of the city and no statement could be secured, but from information gathered from a fairly reliable source it is safe to state that Ald Green will run again. Ald. Duffus representing that ward has another year to serve.

Ald. McIntyre's term of office closes Dec. 31st, but he will not make any statement as yet. It is doubtful if any other East City ratepayer is thinking of running for the seat, the belief that Ald. McIntyre and Weir will act for "Brooklyn" during 1915.

As stated above, if the elections go by acclamation, Ald. Duncan will represent the south ward, but should he enter the mayoralty contest, it is generally believed that Thos. Brown, 176 Lock street, will run. As yet, no other names have been mentioned.

In the north ward, Ald. Langford's term is up, and he is at present out of the city, but it is stated that he intends running again. If Ald. Johnston vacated his seat to run for Utilities Commissioner or Mayor, there would be a possibility of Ald. Dobbin, at present representing the centre ward, running under the north ward ticket. If not, it is understood that Ald. Dobbin will again run in the centre ward.

DRAWING FROM THE WEST

Germany is Rushing Troops and Guns to Poland Say Reports.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 3. — Absolute confirmation of the reports that the Germans are removing large forces of their mobile troops and smaller guns from Flanders and France to Poland has been received. One hundred and forty-eight machine guns and 50,000 cavalry have passed through Herbesthal en route to Poland.

On the contrary, 18 large guns have been sent forward to Blankenburghe, on the coast north of Bruges and east of Ostend, indicating that the Kaiser is preparing to resist further attack from the British and French war vessels on the coast.

A wounded German lieutenant who has made his way into Holland from Thorout, states that strong German forces are concentrated at Thorout and Roulers, on the reported line of defence, in preparation by the Germans, and that a force of 4,600 reservists have arrived at Herbesthal, on their way to Thorout.

Heavy artillery is being removed by the German from western Flanders in the direction of their new line of defence. The civilian population of Belgium is overwhelmed with fear of indignities and peril at the hands of the Germans when the expected retreat begins, owing to the demoralization which exists among the German troops.

ANOTHER ACTION TO RECOVER $58

A jury sitting of the Division Court will be held on Monday before the County Judge. The only case is that of Dr. McNulty vs. John O'Leary to recover $58.00 alleged to be due the plaintiff on an account for surgical duties he performed on the defendant's child.

It will be remembered this case was tried a month ago but the jury disagreed.

What Will Italy Do?

ROME, Dec. 3—The Italian Parliament will reassemble to-day, and its deliberations are awaited with anxiety, as this is considered the gravest moment for Italy since its unification, Four hundred and fifty deputies and 300 senators are already in Rome to attend the session.

Premier Salandra, in presenting the new Cabinet, will make a statement concerning the Ministerial policy. An especially interesting passage will deal with the attitude of Italy with reference to the present European war, and the Premier will explain the reasons that actuated the Government in maintaining "armed and watchful neutrality," the object of which was to guarantee the supreme interest of Italy whenever threatened.

The statement will contain an announcement of the military and naval preparations for which almost $200,000,000 have been appropriated.

It is expected that the deputies and senators will unite in showing confidence in the Cabinet, with a view to having the Italian Parliament give evidence of its solidarity before the foreign powers.

Cases Before the General Sessions

The sitting of the county court and general sessions of the peace, presided over by Judge Huycke, will commence on Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock. The two criminal cases to be tried are those against Joseph Scott, charged with a serious offence against a young girl, and James Grisdale, charged with receiving stolen goods.

There are two civil cases to be tried before a jury. Samuel Currie takes action agains F. Stares of Hamilton, for $500, for alleged false arrest. On the 19th of January last, Currie was attending a funeral at the Little Lake Cemetery, and Frank Stares, it is alleged, arrested him and took him to the police station, claiming that Currie had stolen his overcoat. Gordon & Widdifield are acting for Currie, and Lewis, Arrell & Schwenger for Stares.

Jane Tucker of Dummer is suing Allan Uriah Payne, also of Dummer, for $2000. Plaintiff claims the defendant seduced her daughter, Alberta Grace Darling, and as a result the latter gave birth to a child. The plaintiff claims $2000 for medical and nursing expenses. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, for plaintiff; D. O'Connell for defendant.

Another case pending, although not yet entered, is that of John Gilbert Post of Campbellford vs. Stuart Murphy of Dummer for $500 as damages for injuries alleged to have been received by plaintiff while employed at defendant's sawmill Jan. 31. D. J. Lynch, of Campbellford, is appearing for Post; Peck, Kerr & McElderry for defendant.

In the non-jury sitting but one civil case is entered. It is that of Charles MacFarlane of this city vs. Canadian Peat Co., Toronto, for $228.41, alleged to be arrears in salary. Peck, Kerr & McElderry for MacFarlane; Clark, McPherson, Campbell & Jarvis, Toronto, for the Canadian Peat Co.

ings and Loan Co. would act on his recommendation and he replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Corkery asked the court to consider the fact that if the property of the Sanford Co. was purchased for $9,900 for which it was assessed it would be necessary to rent the store of $800 per year in order to receive 8 per cent. on the money invested and 8 per cent. is the minimum. The rent at present paid is $500 per year and $800 would be exorbitant.

Judge Huycke pointed out that the first principle governing the setting of a price on property was the price paid for property in the immdeiate vicinity. It was found according to evidence that the Royal Bank paid $608 per foot for the property at present occupied by the Bank of Ottawa and Abrahams which is directly south of the properties in question. His Worship was therefore governed by that and declined to make any reduction.

Solicitor E. H. D. Hall considering the fact that no further evidence could be secured that would strengthen his side of the argument did not take up the other appeals and they were thrown out. A list of the appellants whose appeals were dealt with in this manner is as follows:—

E. B. Clegg Co., R. Fair, W. E. Lech, Merrill and Meredith, D. M. Minicola, Morgan Hardware, L. Potvin, Reid Co., W. J. Routley, J. E. Stenson and Sons, The M. Taylor Estate, Turnbull Co., and Warne Drug Co.

Gentlemen who were present in the capacity of expert valuators for the city were R. J. Kidd and H. C. Stabler. It necessitated but the one sitting to dispose of all th appeals and the sitting lasted from 2 o'clock in the afternoon till after 11 o'clock last evening with a short intermission for luncheon.

AUSTRIANS NOW OCCUPY THE CAPITAL OF SERVIA

Long and Partially Neglected Siege Ends Successfully on Anniversary of the Accession of Emperor Francis Joseph—Austro-Germans Anxious to Get Control of Belgrade-Sofia Railway.

LONDON, Dec. 3—Belgrade, which until the outbreak of the war, was the capital of Servia, was yesterday occupied by Austrian troops, the Servians having previously evacuated the city. Thus, on the 66th anniversary of the reign of Emperor Francis Joseph, who again is reported seriously ill, and four months after the outbreak of the war, his generals report one of the most important successes they have obtained.

Belgrade was frequently under bombardment in the war, and but for the general European war, which compelled Austria to send her troops against Russia, must have fallen an easy prey to Servia's big neighbor.

Apparently Austria miscalculated the nature of the Servian opposition, and only after Bosnia was invaded did she send a sufficient force against the Servians to drive them back. Now they are being forced backward and eagerly looking for the advance of the Russians into Hungary to afford them relief.

Russia has been sending Cossack raiding parties through the Carpathians, with the object of diverting Austria's attention, but the dual monarchy seemingly is determined to finish with Servia first.

It is certain that one of the objects of the despatch of Austrian reinforcements to Servia is to obtain control of the railway from Belgrade to Sofia and Constantinople, and thus allow the free movement of troops and munitions, etc., in either direction between Germany and Constantinople. The control of the railway would permit the enemy to concentrate forces at such points as they choose on the main line through the Balkans, or for that matter to send troops to Syria, or to place Turkish troops in France or Russia.

HARBOR DESTROYED.

German Naval Base at Zeebrugge Is a Complete Ruin.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 3.—The harbor works at Zeebrugge have been put out of commission as the result of a renewed bombardment by the British fleet, according to a despatch here yesterday from the correspondent of The Handelsblad.

The docks and various other works cannot be used now, it is stated, and the harbor has been closed completely. The submarines there are unable to leave, the despatch declares.

Another bombardment of the German positions between Ostend and Zeebrugge on the north coast of Flanders, began late Tuesday night, and is still continuing. The fire of the warships in the allies' fleets has again caused a suspension of the work of the Germans in fitting out submarines in the naval bases which have been established there. Additional naval stores continue to arrive at Bruges from Antwerp.

INSPECTOR AFTER WAYWARD GIRL

Chief of Police Short received a communication from the Barnardo Home officials in reply to his letter of a previous date, giving the location of Hilda Roberts, alias Violet Jones, who is supposed to be engaged as a domestic at a farm home south of Janetville. Hilda had escaped from the keepers while on her way to Peterboro to assume domestic duties with a resident of the Electric City.

The Chief was informed that a lady inspector would be sent out and her detention by the authorities maintained. The young girl will, according to the rules of the institution, be deported if she pursues her incorrigible ways.—Lindsay Warder.

HOW THE COUP WAS SPOILED

Gen. Rennenkampf Arrived Late and Now Loses Post

LONDON, Dec. 3.—It is reported that Gen. Rennekampf, the famous Russian cavalry leader, who conducted the successful repulse of the Germans on the River Niemen, has been relieved of his command for being two days late in reaching the central battle zone in Poland, thereby preventing the completion of the ring around the Germans.

GENERAL RENNENKAMPF.

No information as to the causes of the failure of Gen. Rennenkampf to reach the post assigned him at the proper time is available. It is known, however, that war under the Grand Duke Nicholas admits of no excuses. The soldiers say of their commander-in-chief "that he clips the generals a great deal closer than he clips us."

FORCED ON GERMANY.

Turkey Entered War to Save Her Life Says Bethmann-Hollweg.

BERLIN, Nov. 3. — (Via Amsterdam and London.)—With only one dissenting voice, Herr Liebknecht (Socialist), the Reichstag yesterday authorized a new war credit of 5,000,000,000 marks ($1,250,000,000).

The President of the Chamber, at the opening of the sitting, dwelt on the unity and patriotism of the German people and commented appreciately on the large number of members of the Reichstag who are now serving the country at the front. In the course of his exposition of the progress of the war, the President said:—

"Japan joined our enemies from a desire to seize as booty the monument to German culture in the Far East. On the other hand, we have found an ally in Turkey, as all the Moslem people wish to throw off the English yoke and shatter the foundations of England's power. Under the banner of our army and fleet we will continue."

Referring to the entrance of Turkey into the war, he said:—

"Our latest ally in the war was forced upon us in the Ottoman Empire, which well knows that if the German empire were destroyed, it, too, would lose its national right to arrange its own destiny. As our enemies have formed a powerful coalition against us, they will, I hope, find that the arm of our brave allies reaches the weak spot in the world positions."

The Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, attended the session dressed in the gray service uniform of a general. All the secretaries of state and the Prussian Ministers also were present. Many of the members of the chamber were in uniform and wore iron crosses.

Liebknecht, prominent Socialist leader in Germany, incurred the displeasure of the Kaiser at the outbreak of the war by voicing his disapproval of the Government's policy. Various reports, later proved unfounded, were circulated to the effect that he had been executed for high treason.

BAD TEETH

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 3.—Bad teeth cause one of the most serious health problems of the day, according to Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of Washington, D.C., who discussed that subject here in an address before the American Public Health association. A joint session was held with the National Mouth Hygiene association, of which Dr. Wiley is president. The speaker submitted figures showing that, out of 10,230 children examined in Washington, more than nine thousand had teeth which required treatment.

NEW FRONT FORMED IN NORTH POLAND

Russian General Staff Reports Less Violent Fighting, But Disappointment is Felt in Petrograd That German Army Was Not Completely Defeated.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—In north Poland the German army which, with the aid of reinforcements, succeeded in escaping from the ring that the Russians had formed around it, has formed a new front and at some points has resumed the offensive. The Germans assert that in this series of manoeuvres by which they were able to check the Russians they made 80,000 prisoners.

On the other hand, the Russians in a statement issued yesterday through Rome, say that their captures greatly exceed this number. All agree that the losses have been very heavy and that the battle is still proceding. It will probable be some days before a decisive result is reached.

For the moment, the allies are somewhat disappointed that the realization of a great Russian victory is denied them. They take some consolation in the fact that the German attempt to pierce the Russian lines has failed, and that, suffering from heavy losses, the Germans are compelled to weaken their armies elsewhere.

The Russian report last night says that the fight has lost some of its violence, and indicates some progress for the Russian troops south of Lodz. It is unofficially reported that the Russians are "nearly in Cracow."

While there is every indication that another big battle is imminent in the west, there is no evidence that it has actually begun. There has been fighting in Flanders, but this doubtless is the result of an attempt by the allies to take some advanced position. There are also reports that the Germans have evacuated several villages on the Yser Canal and are concentrating on new positions.

The Army Messenger, in a review of the fighting during the period from Nov. 28 to 30, says:—

"On the Russo-Prussian frontier the Germans have maintained their fortified positions, and have been making attacks of little importance. These operations were without success, and our army corps have kept their dispositions.

"The German offensive in the region of Lowicz was repulsed by the advance guards and cavalry, who inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The same fate befell the German offensive at Dombrovo nad Sebutsoff.

"On the Thorn-Cracow front, the German guard which attempted the offensive suffered a serious defeat in the Trzbitz-Bogomiloff district. Our troops took a large number of prisoners, assumed the offensive, and captured several important points. Counter attacks by the enemy were repulsed.

"The Austrian troops defending the approaches to Cracow have been defeated, and are falling back in disorder in the region of the fortress.

"On the Galician front we are advancing with ever-increasing success."

CAPTURE OF DEWET IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

Was the Most Prominent of the Rebel Leaders in South Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A Reuter's telegram from Pretoria gives the official announcement that Gen. Christian De Wet, the most prominent of the rebel leaders in South Africa, has been captured by the Federal forces.

Gen. Christian De Wet, whose capture is reported, rose to fame as commander-in-chief of the Orange Free States forces in the South African war. Starting as a burgher in the Heilbron commando, he later was appointed commandant at Ladysmith and was sent to relieve Gen. Cronje as second in command. When Cronje surrendered De Wet was made commander-in-chief. He was one of the signatories of the peace conference after the war and later was Minister of Agriculture in the Orange River Colony.

Gen. De Wet, at the outbreak of the present war, offered a corps of South African scouts to Lord Kitchener. Later he protested against the action of the Union of South Africa in fighting the Germans and took the field against the British forces.

Gen. De Wet has several times been reported as meeting with reverses, and once as having been wounded. One of his sons was killed in the fighting and two sons are said to have surrendered.

Keep S. A. Rebels on Run.

PRETORIA, Dec. 3.—A series of minor successes against the rebel Boers, extending out over the past five days were officially reported yesterday. A rebel band under Gen. Wessels was defeated southwest of Vrede in Orange Free State. The rebels lost three killed, including a major and had 18 wounded. Col. Vandeventer and Commandant Trichart announce the capture of 68 rebels.

Near Ladybrand, in the southern part of Orange Free State, a rebel detachment was defeated, losing sixteen prisoners, including a colonel. A quantity of plunder which the rebels had taken from looted towns was captured.

Seditious Paper Raided.

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—(Via London.)—The police have raided the office of The Irish Freedom, a monthly newspaper, which has been opposing enlistment and expressing pro-German sentiments. All copies of the newspaper on news stands were confiscated. The police also have prevented the issuance of another newspaper of similar tendencies.

More Horses Wanted.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3. — The special committee on remounts, of which Sir Adam Beck is the head, is in the capital to-day, conferring with the Minister of Militia. The committee must now set about the task of providing horses for 27 squadrons of cavalry, each 206 strong, so that it will be necessary to procure six thousand horses.

Generals Captured.

KIEV, Russia, Dec. 3.—(Via London.)—One hundred and twenty German and Austrian officers have been brought here as prisoners. Among them are two generals, six colonels and eighteen majors.

NO GREETINGS ARE ALLOWED

From People of United States to Belgians

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Not even the words "Merry Christmas" may be written on packages of supplies sent to the starving Belgians. The American commission for relief in Belgium announced yesterday that the placing by donors of an inscription of any sort inside or outside the package might subject the entire consignment to confiscation by officials suspicious of a military code message.

In one case which has come to the commission's notice, it is instanced, a whole shipload of goods bound for Genoa—not, however, one of the relief ships—was held up for a month because of a single word printed on a box—"Dantzig."

ARE TRYING TO SMASH THROUGH TO DUNKIRK

That Biggest Artillery is to be Used is Evident From Long Distance Bombardment of Lampernisse—Hand-to-Hand Fighting Occurs Between Lens and Bethune—Both Sides Reinforced.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Yesterday witnessed fighting on practically all parts of the 260-mile battle line from the North Sea to Alsace, with the greatest activity near the opposite ends of the line.

There was no cessation of the struggle between Lens and Bethune, where the opposing armies are almost at hand-grips.

The armies are repeating here the tactics which have resulted in such enormous loss of life, with so little comparative influence on the general result. Apparently the house-to-house fighting which marked the battlefields in the vicinity of Rheims will be re-enacted in this new "battle of the coalfields."

West of Dixmude the fighting is of a different character. The violent bombardment of Lampernisse was, it is reported unofficially, at such long range that the allies concluded that the Germans had again unlimbered their heaviest artillery. While this is not confirmed by the official reports, it is believed the reinforced German army depends more than ever on its artillery in its attempts to batter its way through to Dunkirk.

An Amsterdam despatch says: Reports reaching here yesterday declare that the Germans have evacuated several villages north of the Yser. They are believed to be concentrating large forces south of Ostend for a decisive battle. Reinforcements of 160,000 men are said to have arrived during the last few days.

The British have taken over command of the Yser region and, like the French, have been strongly reinforced. It is believed that on the first sign of a German movement in any considerable force to the east the allies will take the offensive in the west.

BATH IS SUGGESTED FOR J. McCARTHY

Looking even seedier than yesterday after another night's repose in a police cell, John McCarthy's visage again looked out from the dock today. McCarthy promised yesterday to leave for Montreal on a pass he had. He went out and got drunk before the day was over, and was run in last night.

"I remand you for a week," said His Worship. "By the look of you, I guess the greatest hardship they can impose is to put you in a bath for a week."

Frank Edwards, professional tramp on his own admission, came up from Port Hope searching for work, but got drunk instead. He drew the usual fine.

Dennis Coughlin did likewise for the same offence.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

(Special Correspondence.)

Norwood, Dec. 3. — Quite a number from Norwood attended the tea-meeting at South Dummer church on Monday evening of this week and spent a very enjoyable time.

The St. Andrew's concert and tea in the Norwood Presbyterian Church on Monday evening of this week was well attended and all present had a grand time.

The roads around Norwood have gotten into a terrible state during the recent mild spell. The mud is very deep and the roads are as bad as they were in the spring.

The frost has all gone out of the ground and the farmers are plowing again.

The Norwood high school concert and "at-home" will be held in the town hall on Monday evening of next week. The La Dell concert company of the Maple Leaf Lyceum Bureau, Toronto, consisting of Marietta La Dell, reciter and entertainer, Blanch Deering, violinist and concert pianist, and Ruth Thorn, lyric soprano, have been secured, and those who attend are assured of a real treat.

The management of the Norwood public library have just received from one of the wholesale book publishers of Toronto a good assortment of the latest productions in fiction and non-fiction. The books will be ready for circulation as soon as selections can be made and catalogued.

Mr. William Stares, of the second Canadian contingent, Kingston, paid Norwood friends a visit over Sunday. He looks as if the soldier life agreed with him, and says the boys are having a good time getting in shape for active service. While the drill is arduous, the men are being well cared for. He returned at noon on Tuesday.

The members of the Norwood home guard, 32 strong, attended service in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning and listened to a very fine sermon by the chaplain of the corps, Rev. A. M. Irwin.

The home guard, under the instruction of Mr. R. McKelvie, are making good headway and present a very smart appearance. They hold drill on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week. Last Friday evening after drill the members enjoyed a game of basketball in the armouries.

Mr. William J. Webster, of Alberta, arrived here a few days ago to attend the bedside of his father, Mr. William Webster, who is seriously ill.

Mr. E. B. Laing, who has been spending his vacation under the parental roof here, returned to his duties at Freelton on Saturday last.

Mr. Isaac Puffer has gone to Peterboro to visit Mrs. Puffer, who is at the home of her son, Mr. Will Puffer, under the care of a doctor, and her daughter, Miss Clara Puffer, trained nurse.

GURKHAS FIRM

German Plan to Sap Loyalty of Indians Failed

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A Daily Telegraph special by William Maxwell, dated from central France, says:—

Here is an amazing story told by a famous British officers who won the V.C.:

The trenches were occupied by the Gurkhas, who were devastated by one of the enemy's heavy shells. Fifty men were buried in the ruins. The Germasn dug them out and sent them back to the British lines to tell their comrades from India what good, kind fellows the Germans really are, and how scandalously they have been traduced. I wish, said the V.C., the Germans could have heard the Gurkhas' explanation of this indulgence, and how furious they would have been!

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 2.—Wheat prices opened ⅛c to ¼c higher; oats ⅛c higher, and flax ⅛c to 1⅛c advance. Trading was fairly active in futures, and the market strong generally. Foreign news was bullish, and heavy export sales were reported yesterday and today in southern markets, with foreigners keen buyers of futures. Wheat futures closed ⅛c to ⅝c higher, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower, and flax 2⅝c to 3c higher.

The cash demand was good, exporters buying, while offerings were light. Further export sales were made again this morning. Inspections Tuesday were 401 cars, as against 1878 last year, and in sight were 860.

The weather has been colder, with heavy local snowfalls in Manitoba.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—The foreign enquiry for Manitoba spring wheat was fairly good today, and cables were stronger in some cases at an advance of 1s 6d to 1s 9d per quarter. But at even these higher prices, exporters stated that they were still 1s out of line, and in consequence no business was done. There was no change in the condition of the local market for coarse grain, for which there is a steady demand for car-lots. In flour the feeling is firm, but the market is quieter than it has been of late, the demand having fallen off from all sources. The trade in mill feed continues active and prices are very firm.

The butter market is quiet and easier at a decline of one-half cent per pound. Cheese firm, but business is quiet. The stock on spot is only 35,000 boxes, which is the smallest for many years past at the close of navigation. Demand for eggs firm. Potatoes easier at a decline of 2½c per bag.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—At the C.P.R. live stock market there was a good demand from butchers and packers for cattle today and an active trade was done at steady prices. A DOCTOR'S WORK ON THE BATTLEFIELD

His Duties Begin Almost with Firing of First Shot -- He Crawls About With Hypodermics.

The army surgeon now does not wait for the end of a battle, nor does he remain in quarters some distance at the rear, expecting the wounded to be carried to him, for the number of wounded are entirely too great for that and the battle is waged too strenuously to permit such movements of the hospital corps.

Armed with a pocket surgical case, in which are contained a number of absolutely necessary instruments and ligatures, and with some antiseptics, especially iodine, and, above all, carrying a hypodermic syringe and a plentiful supply of morphine and other anodyne drugs, the surgeon on hands and knees makes his way along the rows of the dead and wounded even while the battle is raging, and, with the shots passing over him, stretches himself alongside those needing care and proceeds to help them in the best way that he can for the moment.

This is the keynote of the surgeon's new duties: temporary alleviation of pain and stoppage of loss of blood. It may be days before the men he relieves can be placed in comfortable wards in some field hospital; meanwhile the hospital is the field itself. No longer does the surgeon depend upon antiseptics alone. He has progressed beyond that, and now includes anesthetics invariably in his field equipment.

Made Unconscious of Pain

As soon as a wounded man is encountered he is given a full hypodermic dose of morphine and his position is made as comfortable as possible by supporting wounded members and putting a fold of one of his own garments under his head. Every soldier in a modern army carries in his knapsack a little packet of antiseptic gauze and a bandage or two. The surgeon examines the wound, particularly for any external bleeding, and relieves that by catching the artery, if one is spurting and tying it. Oozing of blood is prevented by packing with gauze and by pressure.

A tourniquet which was the old-fashioned mode, preventing bleeding by twisting a bandage so tightly around the limb as to prevent all blood from flowing through it, is now very seldom applied, because it may be many hours before more special attention can be paid to the wounded man, and in the meantime gangrene or very serious infective processes would be set up in the limb. Where an artery is not directly wounded the pressure of gauze can be depended on to cause stoppage of bleeding, especially in connection with the use of morphine, which lowers blood pressure and lessens the movements that might cause reopening of bleeding points.

Rifles Used For Splints

The fact that the gauze is antiseptic and carefully carried by each individual soldier in its original wrappings, that are meant to keep it aseptic, provides the proper material which the surgeon could not well take with him in sufficient quantity on his crawling errand of mercy, and which could not be well preserved from possible infection if it were carried in any considerable quantities. All that one soldier carries may not be needed for himself, and then some of this material is employed for those lying near him, so far as is necessary.

Where bones have been broken in the limbs by bullets the soldier's own bayonet or his rifle is used as a splint, so that when it becomes necessary to move him, whenever that will be possible, the soft tissues will be no further injured than they have been.

Wherever wounds are exposed to particular infection iodine is used as an antiseptic and a protective. Iodine is also employed as an antiseptic before the introduction of the hypodermic needle, so as to avoid the carrying in of infectious material from the skin, for soldiers have often not had the opportunity, even if they always had the inclination, to wash themselves for days before, and their resistive vitality is distinctly lowered so that infections readily take place.

The Use of Morphine

The antiseptic having played its part, the further services of the anesthetic combine to restore the victim and refresh his weakened forces.

A dose of morphine gives a wounded man courage and prevents him from worry and fear—for he may not know whether he is slightly or mortally wounded.

During a fainting spell bleeding usually stops because the heart beats slow and feebly, but when the wounded man recovers consciousness the restlessness and dread of consequences that ensue often cause serious effects. All these are dissipated by the use of morphine.

Besides, there is no worry about others, and none of that awful depression that comes as a consequence of seeing men all around, most of them crying and moaning. The surgeon proceeds to crawl from one to another, fixing up their wounds rapidly by first-aid methods, giving the consoling hypodermic, fixing them in the most comfortable attitudes, spending a few minutes with each one and succeeding in relieving sometimes a dozen an hour.

ALIEN ENEMIES TO CLEAR LAND

Men it is Said Are Willing to Work

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Gen. Sir William Otter, who has charge of interning the alien enemies in Canada, has arranged for employment during the winter months for the majority of them, in clearing land for agricultural purposes. Those in Quebec will shortly be removed to the Abitibi district, while those in Ontario will be put in the Algonquin Park and at the Petawawa training grounds. It is stated the men are willing to accept any kind of work during the winter, with employment conditions strained as they are in Canada at present.

Relatives To Be Told First.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3. — The explanation of the Militia Department respecting the rider that casualties in the Canadian contingent are not to be given out from the London Record Office is that relatives or next of kin of men who die or are killed on active service are entitled to first hand information on the subject, rather than learning the sad news through the papers. The course to be followed is to advise the relatives first and afterwards either at London or Ottawa the news will be made public.

Montreal Hospital In Straits.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3. — "Although we cannot conceive it possible that the public will allow the doors of the Montreal General Hospital closed, our financial position is so critical that we cannot continue operations after the first of January unless we get immediate help."

Mr. J. H. S. Peake, superintendent of the Montreal General Hospital, made this statement yesterday.

A deputation of the governors of the Montreal General, the Notre Dame and the Western hospitals waited on the Board of Control a week ago and asked that $85,000 be granted the three hospitals that they may be able to continue operations until the crisis is past.

German Steamer Slips Away.

HAVANA, Dec. 3.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Praesident, which formerly plied among the West Indian Islands, but which has been lying in Havana harbor since Sept. 25, slipped out of port last night without lights or papers.

The destination of the Praesident is unknown, but it is suspected that she intends to communicate with some German cruiser, although she is known to have on board a very small amount of coal and provisions.

HAMILTON ROWING CLUB GAVE ARGOS A BAD SCARE

Toronto Team Managed to Win by Two Points After Strenuous Battle — Ross Craig Played Best Game of His Career

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Hamilton Rowing Club were eliminated from the Canadian championship yesterday by Argonauts, but it was a close call for the locals. When the final whistle blew Argos led by 16 to 14, but they were on the defensive and Hamilton were coming strong. The visitors nearly duplicated the feat of their predecessors in the O.R.F.U., the Alerts, who two years ago defeated Argos with the latter overwhelming favorites. If the visitors had started their rush a little sooner, there is no denying that they would have defeated Argos.

Argos were off color, while the visitors played their best game of the season. The Big Four champions seemed to invariably do the wrong thing. In previous games Argos have suffered numerous penalties for infringements of the rules, but yesterday was their real bad day. Time and again the ball was lost for offside and interference, and as the officials were very strict, the Double Blue were penalized more often than their opponents, who, however, did not have any too much luck themselves in this respect.

Craig's Great Work.

Ross Craig., who failed to show a thing against University of Toronto here in their exhibition game, played one of the best games of his career. He tore big holes in the Argo line, and was the best ground gainer for Hamilton. Aside from his ability to gain ground, Craig wrought havoc with the Argo players. It was a common thing to see two and sometimes three local players "out" after Craig had gone through the line. On the defensive his work was just as effective. It is uncommon to see a man of Craig's size tackle low, but the big fellow stopped the Argo bucks by this method every time. He also broke through on several occasions and upset the working of the Argo plays. It certainly was a "big" day for Craig, and he demonstrated that he is far from a "has-been."

McKelvey, Stowe and McNeilly composed the Hamilton back division, but the first two played back when Argos had the ball. The former made several muffs, but the all-round work of the Hamilton backfield surprised the spectators. They caught and ran well, especially in the first and last quarters. McNeilly also kicked in good style, and the entire trio showed excellent judgment in returning kicks. In this respect they had it on the Argo backfield, and many times gained considerable ground by catching the Argo backfield off their guard.

O'Connor Prominent.

It had become a common thing for Jack O'Connor to kick goals from the field. Yesterday his efforts were successful on two occasions, but he missed the same number. Mills at quarter has developed into a great defensive player, and, no matter how big the opponents are, he is not afraid to tackle them. He stopped Craig's plunges a number of times, after the Argo huskies had failed.

Aside from Craig's good work, McKelvey was perhaps the most valuable man on the Hamilton team. He muffed on several occasions, but had a great burst of speed and used it to good advantage time and again. Harper had his team on their toes all the time, and this spirit had a great deal to do with the excellent showing of the O.R.F.U. champions.

WESTERN ONTARIO CITIES WANT FASTER HOCKEY

Hamilton, London, Sarnia and Preston May go in For Senior O.H.A.

London, Ont., Dec. 3.—The Preston Hockey Club is in favor of a senior district in Western Ontario, according to a letter received from the Preston club by Manager Stephens, of the Western University Hockey club. The Preston club urges the calling of a meeting of representatives from Berlin, Hamilton, Paris, Western University and Sarnia clubs, to be held before Saturday, when the annual meeting of the O.H.A. is held, for the purpose of arriving at some conclusion regarding what steps to request the O.H.A. to make for a grouping to accommodate such an undertaking.

The Preston club contends that, with practically Hamilton, London, Sarnia and Preston ready to go into a senior series, Berlin and Paris should fall in line for the proposition. With Preston playing senior hockey this winter the best attraction is gone from the intermediate series group, in which Berlin, last season's champions, is holding back for, in preference to playing the brand of hockey they are capable of.

Manager Stephens is communicating with the clubs above mentioned, towards getting representatives together for the meeting proposed above.

The strength of the six clubs, who are proposing the adoption of a faster variety of hockey, is well known. Berlin and Preston always have had strong intermediate teams, and at times have played the senior game, and if they co-operate towards this end there is no reason why such a district would not be the proper step to take. Paris and London have always battled to the last ditch in the district game, and are worthy of a place in the senior group, while Hamilton can provide and support better hockey than the intermediate class. Sarnia, on their last season's showing, will receive hearty support, not only in their home town, but throughout Western Ontario. The Imperial City wants faster hockey than the intermediate brand and are anxious for senior company this coming winter.

HOCKEY FOR JUNIORS AT KNOX CHURCH

Knox Church Junior Hockey Club was organised last evening with the following officers:—

Hon. Pres.—R. M. Waddell.
Pres.—H. J. McCannan.
Vice-Pres.—Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. M. N. Clark.

It was decided that the executive committee should consist of the officers elected and two representatives from the membership of the club, Roy Byers and W. Jackson being chosen for that purpose.

COMMENT As You Like it

THE O.H.A. annual meeting of Saturday will be presented with many proposals from the sub-committee headed by J. Ross Robertson. As mentioned before the idea of having the games divided into three 20-minute periods instead of two half-hour sessions will be given careful consideration, and it would not be surprising to see a rule to that effect passed. It would certainly tend toward making the game faster.

JIM SUTHERLAND, the Kingston orator, has a suggestion whereby each certificate issued by the O.H.A. will show where the player performed for three years previous. The idea is to keep track of ramblers Jim also has a plan up his sleeve which if worked out to good advantage would debar rink owners or employees from holding office in any club. Rink owned teams are always the cause of trouble.

THE RULE that will no doubt give the annual meeting of Hewitt's organization a little thinking exercise is one in which a player is not offside on a pass when the player passing it prevented by any interference or foul play by an opponent from skating his team mate on-side. There has been a good deal of that in late years and delays for off-sides are becoming too numerous.

TONIGHT WILL see the organisation of another amateur hockey team. The Hamilton Tigers are to take their first plunge into hockey. Junior and Intermediate teams are to be entered in the O.H.A.

EDDIE PLANK, the famous Athletic twirler, has signed with the Feds. Harry Goldman of the Baltimore team secured his John Henry yesterday.

THE SUGGESTION that all O.H.A. clubs play games during Christmas week for the Patriotic Fund is being endorsed from every quarter. It is truly a worthy idea.

FRED GERO, the Ottawa hurler, has been sold to Ashkosh. During the past season Gero worked in 31 games, completed 20, won 13, lost 12, for an average of .520.

YOUNG SHUGRUE, the Jersey City lightweight, outpointed Freddie Welsh, the world's champion in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

WHITBY re-organised last night and decided to have Junior and Intermediate teams.

JILTED LOVER LOSES

Young Lady Allowed to Keep Presents When Engagement Ended

Chief Justice Meredith had to decide who was entitled to engagement presents in the event of an engagement being broken. The action arose as an appeal made by a young lady of Berlin, Ont., against the decision of the Court of Waterloo, which said that she was to return the gifts she had received from a young man to whom she was formerly engaged.

It was a condition of the engagement that the youth should refrain from the use of liquor, and the appellant declared that on two occasions she smelled liquor on his breath, but this was denied, the defendant swearing that he had not tasted drink during the two-year engagement

The appellate division held that the engagement was a conditional one, and there was a conflict of evidence as to whether the conditions had been observed, and decided that any personal presents to the young lady could not be recovered. As a result the young man secured an order for a $25 candleabrum purchased for the prospective home, but the lady keeps a diamond ring and cut-glass set.

The English language, however, is generally conceded to have the largest number of word The following figures are taken from reliable dictionaries of the various languages and are fairly complete:—English, 450,000 words; German, 300,000 words; French, 140,000 words; Italian, 140,000 words; Spanish 120,000 words.

Mountain Scenery by Searchlight

One of the strong attractions for tourists at Niagara Falls has been the use of searchlights which play their light upon the foaming waters. An interesting proposal has been made to use a similar scheme at Banff, in the Canadian Rockies. There are enormous unused waterpowers in this district and the proposal is to generate electricity from the mountain streams to supply searchlights on the snow-clad peaks which surround this tourist resort. If carried to completion this would create a veritable fairyland in the mountains.

Care of Wounded Horses

On the battlefields of Europe hundreds of wounded horses are being tended day after day by the Army Veterinary Corps. The wounds of animals are as carefully treated as those of the soldiers, and base hospital and homes are utilised to nurse the injured chargers back to health.

The veterinary surgeon at the front needs to be a brave soldier, for he has to "round up" panic-stricken horses whilst shells are whistling over his head. Unless a horse is too badly mutilated to stand, it generally rushes blindly about the battlefield, maddened by the pain of its wound. It is these animals which the "vets." have to capture and place in special horse ambulances. A soldier-attendant generally sits on the head of the animal to keep it tranquil. Horse boxes are amongst the army field equipment, but they have proved too lumbersome to move about with any speed. Motor ambulances, in which the horse is laid flat, are generally used for conveying the suffering animals to the rear.

The veterinary surgeon has amongst his equipment a bell-shaped gun, which fires a bullet into the brain of an animal whose sufferings are too acute to allow it to live. The military "vet." has to be somewhat of a strategist, for in cavalry charges and similar military movements the enemy's horses are especially liable to rush wildly all over the field of battle when their riders fall. At such times the veterinary corps capture all the animals they can, for horses are very valuable at the moment.

Children Under Shell Fire

"They won't attack past about 400 yards. There their courage has as yet failed them. They are too discreet to take chances with British infantry." Thus a reservist in the Bedfords wrote to his wife. Mentioning the capture of two Maxims from the enemy, the writer continued:

"Oh, dear! I am pleased all my good women live in England. Often I see cottage homes a-smoke and in flames. Villages, too! Dogs forlorn, cats despondent on doorsteps. And yesterday I saw three little tots walking along the muddy road with a tiny wheelbarrow. We were, when we passed them, going under cover from a severe shell fire, whilst they were going in the direction whence we were coming."

The Orangemen of North Grey have sent forward this week to the soldiers from Grey of the first contingent at Salisbury Plain, England, a contribution of 200 pairs of hand-knitted woollen socks. The collection was gathered from the individual members of the Order and forwarded by the County Master, Robt. Ferguson.

The further kind offer of the Oriental management to give the "Daughters" the use of the tea room for one afternoon of each week, was accepted, for after the New Year.

A host of Canadian and American friends fear for the safety of Miss Daintry Yates, of Kingston, Ont., and New York, who on Oct. 31, sailed for Bombay, India, to wed a British army officer. Her trip, which takes her to the other side of the world, was through the Mediterranean ad the Suez canal, where the Turkish uprising has endangered the safety of vessels. Miss Yates was to have wedded on Nov. 28, Maj. W. H. Dickinson.

The romance of the Canadian girl and the army officer was begun in Cairo, Egypt, where both were vacationing. Miss Yates is a short story writer, and has made her mark in the magazines, and was seeking in Egypt material for her stories. She became herself the heroine of a pretty love story, and before Major Dickinson left for his post at Bombay, he had won the Canadian girl. The wedding was to have been celebrated at New York this month, but the breaking out of the war held the soldier in India, and his bride-to-be determined to go to India and fulfil there the plans they had made.

The Persia, on which she sailed from England, on Nov. 7, was bound for the Suez canal when the Turkish uprising came. Whether the vessel was safely held in some port or whether it passed through the canal has not been learned by the friends of Miss Yates.

HUNTERS HAVE THEIR EYES ON NICHOLLS' CUP

Officers are Elected for Company, With S. J. Keyes Provisional Commander

That silver cup offered for rifle efficiency is as good as won, in the minds of the hunters of the city, who decided last night to affiliate with the Peterborough Home Guard. They met, to the number of thirty-five, in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A., with Dr. C. H. Amys in the chair. When they get going, a company of fifty is expected, most of whom are good marksmen, with skill acquired in the pursuit of game from year to year. The hunters elected S. J. Keyes as provisional commander, Ray Best and J. E. A. Fitzgerald, lieutenants.

Lt.-Col. Goodwill addressed the gathering, explaining what the Home Guard stood for, and how it was proposed to conduct it. F. D. Kerr also lent enthusiasm to their project by a few suitable words.

The members were sworn in by ex-Mayor Rush.

As the W.C.T.U. has assumed the cost of one of the chaplains the Y.M.C.A. has sent to the front with the first contingent, each member was asked to contribute 1 cent a day for the month of November, the collection to be taken at the December meeting.

Mrs. (Rev.) Lewis was appointed auditor, and Mrs. S. Taylor, Press Reporter.

The discussion on "Medical Temperance," conducted by Mrs. Knapman, proved very interesting and instructive. It was shown that alcohol which is used by so many is very injurious.

Mrs. Knapman also spoke on the lumbermen's work for the last year. Two well filled bags had been sent to the northern camps. This year so many men have gone to the front, the camps are nearly vacant.

The next meeting of the Society will be a parlor meeting held at Mrs. Thornton's, George Street, on December the 18th.

The President closed with prayer.

MILLION DOLLAR BID SCORED HIGH

Over 2000 people saw the famous "Million Dollar Bid" film at the Empire Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The much talked of production is of the highest standard and it was very popular here. The management of the theatre was the recipient of many commendations. The Empire is securing an excellent run of films including the "Adventures of Kathlyn" in which Kathlyn Williams has endeared herself to the hearts of lovers of the movies. So prominent has the name of Kathlyn Williams been before the gay set that a waltz named "Kathlyn" and dedicated to her has made a big hit.

CONSECRATION OF CHURCHES

Gifts and Memorials Also Dedicated by Bishop Reeve

Two very interesting and impressive services took place Thursday, November 26th, when Bishop Reeve of Toronto consecrated the churches at Gore's Landing and Perrytown and dedicated the gifts and memorials so generously given by the congregation.

The service at Gore's Landing took place at 2.30 in the afternoon in the presence of a good congregation when the following gifts were dedicated to the use of the church:—

Chancel Window, "The Easter Morn"—The ladies of the congregation.
Holy Table—The late Mrs. Shoenberger, Toronto.
Bishop's Chair—Mrs. J. J. Daly, Cobourg.
Prayer Desk—Blonde Lumber Co.
Seating of Chancel and Church, Lectern, Clergy Seat and Prayer Desk—Ladies' Aid.
Hymn Board—Mrs. J. J. Daly, Cobourg.
Organ—Mr. and Mrs. Drayton and friends.
Collection Plate — Mrs. Charles Sorby.
Brass Tablet, in memory of Mrs. T. F. Summerhayes—Fom her husband.
Brass Cross—Rev. T. F. Summerhayes.
Lamps — Mr. Gerald Haywood, New York.
Holy Bible—Rev. T. F. Summerhayes.
Prayer Book — Late Mrs. T. F. Summerhayes.
Frontal for Lectern and Prayer Desk—Sisters of St. John the Divine, Toronto.
Bell—St. Peter's Church, Cobourg.
Motto for Porch—Mrs. E. H. Osler, Cobourg.
Carpet and Matting—Ladies.

The service at Perrytown took place at 7.30 in the evening, when the church was well filled. After the service of consecration the following were dedicated:—

N. E. Chancel Window, "Christ the Good Shepherd," "Christ the Light of the World," in memory of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson—From their son, Thomas, and grandchildren.
Centre Chancel Window, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Campbell—From their daughters, Mrs. Campbell and Miss Campbell.
S. E. Chancel Window, "Christ Blessing the Little Children," in memory of Margaret Rooney—From her husband, W. Dean, her brothers and sisters.
Two Sanctuary Chairs, in memory of the two sons of Mr. Patterson of Port Hope—From their father and mother.
Lectern, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. George Patterson—From their children.
Prayer Desk and Clergy Seat, in memory of Joseph Wilson—From his daughter, Miss Emma Wilson.
Five panels for Holy Table and Retable, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. McMurtry—From their daughter, Mrs. E. Choate.
Seating of Church and Chancel—From W. B. Campbell.
Gasoline Lighting System—Mr. P. C. Hanna.
Carpets and Matting — Women's Guild.

The Bishop addressed the congregations upon the consecration of the buildings and said that the consecration should be carried into the personal lives of the parishioners so that they themselves might set apart their bodies as temples of God. His sermons were much appreciated.

After the evening service an innovation was introduced when Bishop Reeve requested the congregation to remain seated. Mr. Fred Wilson, the people's warden, acting for the churchwardens and congregation read a letter to the Rev. Mr. Morris in token of their appreciation of his services and Mr. Mark Noble presented him with a Brass Tablet now affixed to the wall of the church on which was the following inscription.

This tablet is presented to the
Rev. Edward Morris, ...
During whose incumbency June 1912,
—Dec., 1914, the church was built and consecrated with grateful appreciation and high esteem.
Signed on behalf of the congregation.
F. Wilson,
M. Noble, Churchwardens.

Mr. Morris, who left Tuesday, December 1st, for work in Montreal, was overwhelmed by the unexpected presentation and responded very shortly to the address of the wardens. There is much evidence of deep feeling between the rector and his people, as was shown on Saturday night last, when his troop of Boy Scouts broke into a meeting to surprise him with the gift of a handsome club bag.

CALLED TOGETHER

Premier Hearst and Late Sir George Ross Became Lawyers In 1888.

There is a circumstance in the career of the Hon. W. H. Hearst, Ontario's new Premier, which will probably afford some entertainment to those who take an interest in working out coincidences. He was called to the Bar at the end of the Michaelmas term in 1888. As usual several other men were similarly honored on the same occasion, among them being quite a number who have subsequently distinguished themselves in public life. Of these, the most interesting, in view of recent developments, was the late Sir George W. Ross.

Sir George was of course a much older man than Mr. Hearst, and he was a member of the Provincial Government even then, but he took the Law Society's examinations and received his call to the Bar along with the young law student who was destined to follow him later on in the Premiership.

In the same class of 1888 there graduated among others, F. A. Anglin, now one of the puisne judges of the Supreme Court of Canada; Hugh Guthrie, now M.P. for South Wellington; C. R. Fitch, who became judge of the Rainy River District a few years ago, and N. F. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto. Those were the days before the Law School course had been regularly established, and Mr. Hearst, who had received his training in an Owen Sound office, was not brought into personal touch with many of the men who happened to be called at the same time.

The Sault Ste. Marie to which the young lawyer went, after receiving his call, was by no means the flourishing place it has since become. It was a mere village, containing only one or two thousand inhabitants. This in itself is significant, since it illustrates once again the fact that even a small town may afford a man opportunities for advancement in the long run, if he is only persistent and diligent. The spectacle of young Hearst, just turned twenty-five confidently settling himself in the crude new town at the Soo, and applying himself zealously to whatever work offered, is a good object-lesson for young Canada to-day.

Work has been the new Premier's obsession, and steady application to work is the secret of his advancement. It has been his sole employment, and at the Parliament Buildings it has been no uncommon thing for him to remain at his desk far into the night. Since he took office in 1911, it is said that he has not missed a day at his office, except when out of the city on departmental or private business.

One may search the membership lists of every golf, bowling, and athletic club in the city for his name, but in vain. He does not frequent any gymnasium or indulge in the pursuit of any sport or recreation. He has absolutely no hobbies. Up to last year he belonged to no social club in Toronto, and in consequence was unknown personally to any save a very small circle of acquaintances who had met him probably in a business way. Seemingly his sole effort of a physical culture nature latterly has been in the daily walk to and from his office at the Parliament Buildings.

In his younger days he was fond of athletics, and after he had become settled at the Soo, he bought some horses and took pleasure in driving. This mild form of recreation was, however, abandoned when he became a Cabinet Minister.

GREAT BATTLES IN EAST AND WEST

Increased Severity of Censorship Points to Larg Operations Now Underway or Pending

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 4—If the total stoppage of news be any criterion, there must be some large operations now under way or pending. On several previous occasions during the war there has been a sudden increase in the severity of the censorship, which always proved later to have been the herald of important events, and it is believed great battles are now in progress in both the eastern and western theatres.

THE PARIS STATEMENT

PARIS, Dec. 4. — The official statement this afternoon says:

"In Belgium there has been an intermittent but fairly spirited cannonade between the railroad from Ypres to Roulers and the highway between Becelaere and Pass-Chendaele, where infantry of the enemy endeavored to gain ground without success.

"From the Somme to the Argonne region there is quiet.

"In the Argonne there have been several attacks on the part of the German infantry, but all were repulsed by our troops."

BRITISH AIRSHIPS AT SINAI PENINSULA.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — Telegraphing from Cairo, the Reuter correspondent says that British airships have been making constant flights lately over the Sinai peninsula and that there is no sign of the enemy.

Bedouins who attacked a patrol a fortnight ago, the correspondent continues, received an unforgettable lesson and are now imprisoned at Jaffa.

BERLIN, Dec. 4. — An official announcement today credits the Russian military newspaper, the Russky Invalid, with the statement that thirty-three thousand Russian officers have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners since the war began.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — Melbourne advices state that Hon. Geo. Pearce, minister of defence in the Australian government, announced today that when the cruiser Sydney destroyed the Emden the latter was planning to intercept vessels carrying the Australian expeditionary force bound for the Mediterranean and was within one hundred miles of them.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — The steamer Zacapa, which arrived today at New York from Jamaica, reports the cruiser Karlsruhe has left the South Atlantic and is now chasing British and allied merchant vessels on the North Atlantic trade lines.

A MILITARY CRITIC'S OPINION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 4. — Colonel Roussett, military critic, says that fifty per cent. of the rumors regarding the situation in Flanders and Poland are fakes, and the remainder are hasty deductions from incomplete information. He disbelieves the reports that Germans are about to begin another great offensive movement in Flanders, firstly, because they are more likely to wait until the battle in Poland is decided, and, secondly, because both sides in Flanders are so entrenched that neither can for the present make a great massed movement.

He is sanguine about Poland, and claims that Berlin has admitted the uneasiness prevailing there, but, "Germany, though badly shaken," he remarks, "is not crushed."

POLICY ONE OF WATCHFUL READINESS

Armed Force Must be Kept up Says Italian Premier

A DEMONSTRATION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Dec. 4. — Many members of parliament consider that Premier Salandra's utterances in parliament yesterday mean that Italy is now ready. One deputy says: "One word more from Premier Salandra would have meant a declaration of war." Others think the phrase of the premier's regarding Italy's aspirations was misunderstood, and that he may have alluded to an agreement with Austria.

ROME, Dec. 4.—The Italian Parliament opened yesterday. The sitting of both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate were witnessed by a large gathering of deeply interested spectators. Among those present were the former Premiers Giolitti, Luzzatti and Pelloux. The diplomatic tribune was overcrowded.

Premier Salandra made a statement in which he explained the situation of Italy, and advised that she maintain an attitude of loyal but watchful and armed neutrality. He was frequently applauded.

When Premier Salandra alluded to what he termed the just aspirations of Italy, the whole extreme left arose, crying, "Viva Trent, Viva Trieste." The spectators in the tribunes joined in the demonstration. Cheers were also given for "heroic and unfortunate Belgium."

Premier Salandra said in his statement that the European conflict broke out suddenly, without involving Italy directly, and in spite of her efforts to avert the war for the sake of peace and civilisation. A careful study of the treaty obligations and the causes of the conflict convinced the Government that Italy was not called upon to participate, and she accordingly declared her neutrality. In view of the necessity of protecting Italian interests, however, a declaration of neutrality alone was not sufficient to safeguard the country against contingencies which might arise in consequence of such an enormous upheaval.

The political divisions of the continent of Europe, the Premier pointed out, were perhaps about to be modified. Italy, he added, has vital interests to protect and justly aspires to maintain her position as a great power and to preserve intact her policies. She must, therefore, be watchful, powerful and ready for any eventuality.

The Premier's statement was interrupted frequently with applause. It was noticed that former Premier Giolitti joined with the Deputies in their expressions of approval

FOUR TRAINS TO BE WITHDRAWN

Official Confiirmation of Changes on C.P.R. Line Through Peterboro

Some time ago the Review noted several changes scheduled to occur in the C.P.R. time card of trains going through Peterborough. Official confirmation of these changes has since been received by the company to the effect that four trains are to be withdrawn and operated on the Lake Shore line, the new arrangements to become effective December 13th.

There are two eastbound and two westbound trains to be discontinued under the new schedule. They are trains No. 19 and 21 going west at 3.31 p.m. and 5.24 a.m. and Nos. 20 and 22 going east at 11.22 a.m. and 2.03 a.m. This will leave eight daily trains still on this line.

Announcement of these changes when first noted aroused no small comment and inspired the Board of Trade to communicate with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific, asking what trains were to be discontinued and if it was correct what were the reasons. No reply has been received as yet.

While the news of these trains being withdrawn sounds as if Peterborough was going to suffer, it should not be construed thus as the company evidently feel that ample provision for handling traffic on this line is still provided in the eight daily trains to be operated. These consist of 4 trains going west at 4.22 a.m., 5.57 a.m., 7.34 a.m. and 4.23 p.m., and 4 going east at 12.13 p.m., 8.10 p.m., 12.15 a.m. and 1.07 a.m.

FLAG PRESENTED FOR HOME GUARD

Some Organizations Must Double up to Keep Within the Limit of Twelve Companies --- Sample of Ross Rifle is Received

TO THE familiar strains of Tipperary and other patriotic music, the home guard paraded last night and attracted the attention of large crowds of people who lined the streets. The parade demonstrated the fact that the strength of the guard is increasing and that the companies are improving under the instruction given at the armouries.

The showing was the best made yet. Both the 57th Regiment and the Temple band were out in force and while the music may have a lot to do with the enthusiasm created on the streets, the spectacle of hundreds of men marching behind the Union Jack, and without the bands, would have made the spectators crane their necks and take notice.

And by the way, the flag which was used for the first time, was presented by J. J. Turner and Sons. All the Turner "boys" and a number of the firm's employees have identified themselves with the movement.

At the armouries Lieut.-Colonel Goodwill expressed on behalf of the guard, their appreciation of the gift. Colonel Miller added a few words on the significance of the flag, what it represented and how it was jealously prized, guarded and shielded from dishonor.

A sample of the Ross military rifle has been received from the Ross rifle plant and will be tested tonight.

Twelve companies were on parade last night, some being out in almost full strength. It has been found that so many organizations have come in, who desired to be a company that more than 12 would result. As the number however cannot be overstepped, some organizations must double up in order to keep within the limit. Coats were discarded and the men were put through the rudiments of drill by the company captains. Nearly every captain is experienced in drilling and able to instruct, a fact that has won favorable comment.

PATRIOTIC FUND

THE Patriotic Fund Publicity Committee wants to gain the attention of the people. It is the function of this committee to put the facts arguments, pleadings, and if necessary imploring that will enable the goal of $50,000 to be reached.

"How," says an enquirer, "are you going to do it?" Here's a starter.

On Monday morning the employes of the Ackerman Company factory will donate their pay for that day, which will include the wages of the men and the salaries of the staff. Even Mr. B. F. Ackerman is to get into the line, takes off his coat, and will work with the men in order to be in line with the others.

Now, this idea of giving the day's work is the result of a proposition made to the men, and in fact all the employes, and which has been most heartily accepted. Approximately $175.00 will be added to the fund from this source. All honor to the men and women who are willing.

The General Committee of the fund are preparing a slate, setting out, in anticipation, what could be realised. Of course, the slate is in some respect conjectural, but includes the following:

Two at $5000.00	$10,000
Three at $2500.00	7,500
Ten at $1000.00	10,000
Ten at $500.00	5,000
Fifty at $100.00	5,000
Fifty at $50.00	2,500
Fifty at $40.00	2,000
One hundred at $25.00	2,500
Fifty at $20.00	1,000
Two hundred at $10.00	2,000
Small amounts	2,500

We can very well learn from the experience of others and from what has been done in other places. Take Berlin, for example, and a very good one, too. It probably heads the list of Canadian cities for extent of giving, population and resources considered. It is notably and magnificently good.

Berlin's Canadian Patriotic Fund.

The Berlin Patriotic Fund has now well nigh reached $100,000. This is a splendid showing for a city the size of Berlin. The figures below will show how this large amount of money was contributed:

From manufacturers	$28,000
From city council commission and officials	16,975
From mechanics and clerks	16,220
From business men other than manufacturers	12,113
From commercial travellers	2,929
From legal fraternity and officials	2,845
From Collegiate Institute staff and pupils	1,697
From hotelmen	1,500
From bank staffs	1,108
From physicians	940
From lodges and societies	850
From public school pupils	682
From dentists	450
From stret railway employes	380
From fire department	156
From St. Jerome College and students	116
From the Assyrians	76
From city clergymen	40
From the Chinese	10
From citizens not included in the foregoing	10,946
Total	$96,859

To have raised nearly $100,000 for a patriotic purpose in a city of 19,000 population is no small thing. It is an average of over $5 per head.

The mechanics, clerks and general public contributed $27,166, showing that the response on the part of our citizens was widespread.

Berlin may well congratulate itself on the outcome of its effort and those who so capably managed the campaign for it.

How well will Peterborough do? That remains to be seen. It will depend on the spirit and will of the people. If each one gives what he or they can easily spare the goal will not be reached. We must give until we feel hurt to accomplish the final sum.

Many associations and organizations are working to raise sums all to be devoted to the general good. Thes moneys will find a use along different channels. In connection with the detail of these efforts there is one feature that should be discontinued and that is the incessant assault made on the merchants to make donations of goods. It is not right, it is not seemly. By themselves these contributions are not large, but in the aggregate they amount up. The requests for goods or service come from customers to the stores where they trade. He must cut prices, and reluctantly, for he knows that the acquiescence is only the prelude for another attack.

In justice to the merchant he should get credit. He never will as long as he is importuned to make donations. Better if he, if all merchants would refuse to be bothered, but make one substantial subscription and be done with and receive the credit he deserves. There will be concerts, games, contests, in the future, and now is the time to shut down on this. Give a substantial amount to the Patriotic Fund and be in a position to say so and stand off all applicants.

A grant of $5000.00 to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund as a special war time grant, from the City Council, means on a total assessment of $10,000,000, approximately 50 cents on each one thousand dollars of assessment.

The citizen who pays taxes on a house and lot assessed for $1,000 would pay in taxes, as a special war contribution, fifty cents. Other assessment in proportion.

On this basis will any British citizen refuse to endorse the action of the City Council in making a grant of $5000 to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund.

There is a good deal of uncertainty and some anxiety with regard to the carriage and delivery of small parcels being sent to relatives and friends at Salisbury Plain, and on the Continent. Inquiry at a local Express Office showed that for delivery of a small parcel the Express company would charge $2.50. This charge seems excessive. If there is any organization taking charge of such service as the despatch of such parcels, the fact should be made known. We are informed that Mrs. Percy McLean has charge of such a service for the Daughters of the Empire, to whom inquiries may be addressed.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1914

THE KING GOES TO WAR.

GEORGE II. was the last English monarch to go to the firing lines with his army. The first time in nearly two hundred years that an English King has done so took place the other day, when George V. went to France to inspect his army at the front. When George II. went to war, he led his troops in person at the famous battle of Dettingen, where the British infantry performed the impossible, what Frederick the Great of Prussia, with whom we were allied then against France, said he would never have believed had he not seen with his own eyes. The feat was caused partly by a mistake, when the British infantry actually attacked a much superior body of French cavalry, and hurled it back in disorder and rout. Dettingen has always been a brilliant name in the history of British arms. However, the present King's journey to the battle-front is not so much in the hope to lead his men in a brilliant attack, much as he would like to; but to mark the fact that the Empire's highest interests are at stake in this war. The personal touch of King and soldiers will do much to cheer and strengthen the men, and shows that the British people are committed to this war until the cause of freedom is won.

WHAT TO DO WITH DE WET.

Despatches announce the capture of the Boer rebel leader, Gen. C. De Wet. The question now is, what are the authorities going to do with him? The proper procedure is a trial for treason, and, if such is done, it seems obvious that a verdict of guilty would be passed, in which case the death penalty would be exacted. That is the proper and safest course that the case now presents. There is really no excuse for De Wet, and an example should be made of him to impress the new state of things on the Union of South Africa. So long as there were Boer Republics, there was a plausible excuse for resisting British authority by force of arms. Having conquered the Boers, Britain set an example to the world by bestowing self-government on the South African territory, and, on the first occasion when the central authority of the Empire was threatened, this Boer general rewarded generous treatment by open rebellion. A measure of leniency for his followers is due, but De Wet himself is deserving of none. He was a leader in that country, and, to prevent any future buccaneering spirits misleading the people into revolt, it is important that De Wet receive the full sentence of law. When self-government is bestowed and accepted, there are accepted concurrently great responsibilities, one of which is to maintain the fundamental law of the land. De Wet agreed to this, for he was a member of Botha's cabinet. At the first opportunity he proved traitor to his trust. He defied the law. If the keystone of South Africa's political, legal, and social framework is to have any binding force, it must deal hardly with those who laugh at and defy its constitution so readily as did De Wet. If treason of so great a character is lightly punished, there cannot be a sufficient restraining power embodied in the majesty and authority of the law which is fundamental to the whole life of that or any British dominion.

"THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

THERE APPEARS in the Toronto newspapers a report to the effect that a young Jewess, fifteen years old, had her hair cut off in some mysterious manner on a Dundas street car. The girl can give no clues, and it is suposed that the crime was committed with the intention of selling the hair to a wig store, since it was singularly long and luxuriant. A detective said that it was not the first time such a thing had occurred in Toronto. About three years ago, four or five young girls had their hair cut off in a similar fashion in a downtown store. The guilty party was never discovered. The theory of the police was that some crazy person with a mania for hair-cutting was to blame. Another opinion was that somebody had done it because he or she had thin hair, and was jealous of anybody to whom Nature had been more kind with regard to hirsute adornment, while quite likely profit might have been the cause, as hair brings a good price.

Here is an actual case for a modern Alexander Pope. The original poem was a big hit in its day, and a story like this, dressed up by an imaginative artist ought to command widespread attention. In doing so, the meanness of the crime, the disfigurement caused thereby, the amount of damages sought, and the court scene for securing them would be interesting divisions of the subject. Aside from any literary capital that might be made out of this robbery, it is a distinctly underhand act, and the police should make every effort to locate the robber and deal with him severely.

SANITATION IN WAR.

UNTIL the Franco-Prussian war, says the New York Independent, armies suffered more from disease than from bullets. The Prussian campaign was successful largely because it was short, so that the troops were not kept long in camp.

It was long noted that whenever troops were moving they were very little troubled by disease. As soon as camp was broken, enteric affections diminished. The army seemed to march away from some source of poison. Hence arose the suspicion that the enemy had poisoned the wells. But the real source of the poison was the army itself. Bad sanitary arrangements polluted the water and bred swarms of flies and other insects which rapidly spread filth and disease.

Where millions of men are entrenched, as they now are in France, the problem of sanitation must be gigantic. We know what that problem means in a city, with ample time and security. It must be infinitely more difficult in trenches where men are constantly under fire and where the dead after a battle may number thousands or even tens of thousands. It is probable that a generation ago a battle prolonged over weeks between such enormous bodies of men confined to a small area would have been impossible. In old days, a siege was sometimes broken up by the appearance of a plague, which was ascribed to a miracle, but was really due to unsanitary conditions. Great progress has been made in dealing with microbes—except, perhaps, with the microbe of war.

DON'T GO INTO THE CORNER.

DECEMBER, the month of joy, giving, and of sacrifice is here. It is the month of all the months, in which the spirit of the Prince of Peace pervades all Christian countries. This year the joy of this happy season is marred by the great discord,, war. The screech of shells and desolation will be present in many parts of Europe this Christmas, but these things are not here. In Canada we are free to proceed as we have always done.

It is the duty of Canadians to make this Christmas as bright as possible. Conditions of trade and of labour have not been good. At the same time they are improving, and we should not go into corners just because there is a big war going on four thousand miles away. The stores and shops are replete with most excellent lines of Christmas goods, everything is ready, and the people should make an effort this year to spread the spirit of Christmas as much as possible. Keep money circulating, buy Christmas presents as usual, help to keep up trade and to improve prosperity. When the merchant benefits, everybody benefits. Keeping the flag flying means to keep up trade as much as maintaining armies, and we hope the people of Peterborough and of this locality will celebrate Christmas as usual.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE GLOBE has another attack of "Gameyitus." It will never forgive "the man from Manitoulin" for the part he played in putting the finishing touches to the corrupt Ross Government. It might be just as well for the Globe to delay its criticism until it learns the facts in connection with Mr. Gamey's private business.

Scotland's Patron Saint.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The feast of Scotland's patron saint is being celebrated by all true sons of the heather wherever located. The day has become one of social and national reunion to a greater extent perhaps than that of any people and St. Andrew's Day is one to be loyally anticipated and characteristically celebrated in song and story.

Like most of our national saints, the career of Scotia's patron is more or less obscured. We know that he was the son of Jonas, a fisherman of Bethsaida in Galilee, and was the brother of Simon Peter, but whether younger or older we are not informed in Scripture. After the Ascension the name of St. Andrew is not mentioned in the New Testament, but he is believed to have travelled as a missionary through Asiatic and European Scythia and to have suffered martyrdom at last at the city of Patra about 70 A. D. St. Andrew was crucified on an X-shaped cross, and instead of metal nails cords were used, death coming by hunger and thirst. Presumably the story of his burial is correct, that a Christian lady of rank, Maximela, caused the body of St. Andrew to be embalmed and honorably interred; and that in the fourth century it was removed by the Emperor Constantine to Constantinople, where it was deposited in a church erected to the Twelve Apostles. After thirty years the bones of the saint were transferred to Scotland by a Greek monk and deposited on the east coast of Fife, where a church was built and where afterwards arose the renowned city and church of St. Andrews.

It is noteworthy that, unlike St. Patrick, St. Andrew never saw the land of which he is the patron saint. But the story of the circumstances by which he became such are interesting, and the fact remains that from time immemorial he has been claimed by Scotland and by Scotland alone. And surely no day is more loyally observed.

A Mistaken Silence.

(London Times.)

Is this prolonged and excessive reticence necessary? Does it serve any useful purpose at all? Mr. Asquith stated in the House of Commons last night that the Government were prepared to divulge everything favourable or the reverse, subject only to military consideration. The public have always understood that the press censorship would be guided by that principle, and have cheerfully acquiesced in it. But to bury all our dead in a silence as unbroken as the graves wherein they lie is not demanded by that principle. Military considerations cannot have anything to do with it. If any valid reasons can be advanced for it, what are they? There are very good reasons against it. The friends and relatives long for the knowledge withheld, and the whole nation would be stimulated by it. We know that many and many a gallant deed has been done and many a man has died a noble death. Why should we not hear of them? There is a passage in Napier's "Peninsular War" which is worth recalling. "Ridge fell, and no man died that night with more glory; yet many fell, and there was much glory." It is very simple, but very thrilling. Why should we not hear of our Ridges in France and in Flanders? Nothing would do more to stimulate recruiting. The press censorship is overdone, and Mr. Bonar Law said no more last night than everybody is saying. The manner in which it is conducted — apart from actual absurdities — shows an extraordinary ignorance of the character and spirit of our people.

THE MILITARY SITUATION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I, and I presume, a great majority of our citizens were possessed with the idea that our vast military expenditures on armouries, city battalions, etc., were primary for the purpose of creating a force to defend our country in the hour of need. We looked upon the spectacular part of the business such as church parades, march outs, annual jaunting trips, club rooms and club life at the armouries, etc., as justifiable expenditure for the country to pay for in view of the noble sacrifices that our soldier boys were making in preparing themselves to defend our dear native land. But behold, we are compelled to admit that we have been laboring under a great delusion and the fact dawns on the country that it has been bled in order to pay for the amusements and recreation of a lot of fellows that have no idea of carrying out their solemn obligations attached to these vast expenditures. Of course we have a few noble exceptions such as Col. Clegg, Major Mills, Major Bennett and Lieut. Charles Ackerman and some men from the battalion but the great majority of men that have gone to the front are recruits and Old Country men. Though the former two officers were well advanced in years they felt that they should go in order to save the face of the battalion as none (except the two mentioned above) of the younger officers could be induced to. All honor to them all. It is no wonder that righteous indignation filled the breasts of so many of our best citizens and compelled them to form themselves into a home guard in order to let the outside world know that though our regular soldiers had failed to come out and prepare and offer themselves for the defense of the country that there was still stuff enough in the old guard to do so. But does it not seem passing strange, that here we are in the midst of the greatest war known in the history of man, that all our vast military appliances such as armouries, equipments, etc., for our city battalions are lying as quiet as door mice except what use and stir the home guards are making about them. Would it not be well for our member if he has not already done so, to lay the present condition of military matters here before the Minister of Militia and have such a farce ended. Have the present city battalion put on a proper basis or disbanded and have the home guard reform the battalion with properly trained officers and have a force that will be ready, trained and willing to go to the fighting line when the country calls them. I am told that when the last contingent left for Kingston though three officers were asked for by the militia department to command them not a single officer could be induced to go. This is a most serious state of affairs. We are passing through the gravest crisis in the lifetime of this generation and we should know exactly where we stand before it is too late.

Yours truly,
OLD GUARD.

"CONCRETE BEDS" ONLY WAR MYTH

(From the New York Post.)

It is hard to part with a war myth, but we are afraid that we shall have to give up those famous "concrete beds" which the Germans had prepared in England. The story of them is familiar. Here and there near London it had been discovered by various Sherlock Holmeses that an ostensible factory site, or even an innocent-appearing tennis-court, was in reality an emplacement for German howitzers, made ready in advance with secret and devilish ingenuity. So firmly convinced of this were many Englishmen that the War Office finally had the matter investigated. Major-Gen. O'Callaghan has reported on all the suspected places brought to public notice. He did, indeed, find some concrete floorings, but they were already giving way under the weight of mere machinery, without waiting for the heavy guns which they were to support. In a word, he completely disposes of the whole bugaboo. Moreover, Major-Gen. Cannaghan pointed out that if the Germans had made in England concrete bases for their heaviest guns, they would have done a foolish because entillery unnecessary thing. There are no forts in England which it would need the 42-centimetre guns to demolish. If the Germans ever land an army on English shores, they will need to bring with them only their ordinary field guns, which stand on their own wheels. So if there are really any "concrete beds" in England, they must have been made by the Russian soldiers on their way from Aberdeen to Dover.

Saved His Regiment

Men of the Dorset Regiment tell proudly of the exploits of one of their number, Private W. Jarvis, during a retreat. Jarvis stayed behind all by himself firing his gun rapidly to cover the retreat of his regiment. Eventually he had to carry the gun out of action on his back, as it was impossible to bring up a carriage because of the heavy German fire. He accounted for a great number of Germans and did much to save a battery of artillery.

GOOD BUSINESS

Steady Advertising and Enterprising Sales Methods Prove Effective

One of the most remarkable concerns in Canada to-day is the Berliner Gram-o-phone Company, Limited, of Montreal.

This Company far from feeling the ill-effects from the war is actually doing an increased business.

Since the middle of September, it has courageously increased its advertising throughout the Dominion and is now reaping the fortune which favors the brave.

Despite its name the Company is entirely a Canadian concern with a large factory in Montreal where it manufactures all the famous Victor "His Master's Voice" records for the Dominion.

An official of the Company recently interviewed made the statement that at present there was an enormous boom on for patriotic records, and that the sale of "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" had alone in six weeks exceeded the sale of any other record ever published by them previously.

"At the present time" he went on to say an even greater boom than Tipperary was under way for the song "Your King and Country Want You", published by special request of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, now Acting Premier, Sir George E. Foster."

PESTS IN FOREST TREES

Startling statements were made by Mr. J. M. Swaine, Ottawa, to the Entomological Society of Ontario, regarding the destruction by worms of the pine forests of parts of British Columbia. The lumber industry was in such a bad condition, he said, that nothing could be done at the present time to combat the great havoc to the pine trees. So many trees of these forests were killed by the worms that now the dead timber was a terrible fire menace to the remainder of the trees.

He referred to the killing off of the hemlock and pine trees in the great Stanley Park at Vancouver, and said these parts of the park would be reforested with Douglas fir. Mr. Swaine also uttered a word of warning to farmers to be on the lookout for more serious damage to trees.

He spoke particularly of the elm tree, telling of the deadly enemy to this species which had been found in the United States and was now so near Canada that its appearance might be expected at any time. If it came in, and all it has to do is cross the border, it would mean the destruction of practically all elm trees, said Mr. Swaine. He thought that farmers should be furnished with descriptions of these pests, that they might know them when they first made their appearance.

Spurious Honey In Canada

That ten out of 194 samples of honey examined in Canada by the Inland Revenue Department were not honey was the substance of a bulletin issued at Ottawa.

The regulations in regard to the purity of honey are very strict and preclude the use of the name in connection with an article which contains any adulteration. However, the bulletin stated that "it is certain no illegal manufacture of artificial honey upon any considerable scale exists in Canada."

They Shall Not Want

These must be Days of Brotherhood. These are times of standing together, working, thinking, fighting together. The challenge of an enemy provokes quick response in every breast and proclaims the brotherhood of rich and poor.

You can hear the tread of armed men in the streets. To-day they prepare; to-morrow they depart, and another day---they fight! They are not merely your sons who go, or our neighbors' sons, but OUR sons! We who remain here, thousands of miles from the reek of gun-fire, have no less a part to play than those who go. We are not excused because we cannot fight. We must fill the places of those who go.

IN THIS CRISIS THEY ARE AS MUCH OUR DEPENDENTS AS THOSE WHO LEAVE THEM TO GO TO WAR. SHALL THE HEROES, WHEN THEY COME MARCHING BACK, BRONZED AND SCARRED, FIND THAT WE, ACCEPTING THEIR DEFENCE FOR OURSELVES, HAVE YET NEGLECTED THE DEFENCE OF THEIR DEPENDENTS! THEIR STRUGGLE IS OUR STRUGGLE, THEIR SACRIFICE IS OUR SACRIFICE — AND THEIR WIVES AND BABIES, OUR CHARGE.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 3.—Wheat prices opened ½c to ⅝c higher, oats ¼c to ½c higher, while flax was unchanged to ½c lower. The feature of the future market was buying by exporters during the early hours, which caused prices to strengthen a little following the opening. When this demand was satisfied prices eased off around ⅝c. Oats and flax showed weaker after opening. Closing figures for wheat were ⅛c to ⅜c under Wednesday, oats unchanged and flax 1½c lower on both months.

The cash demand was fair for Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 grades of wheat, exporters being the chief buyers to fill space. Oats, barley and flax were slow generally. Sales continue to be made by exporters on a goodly scale, one house working from 200,000 to 300,000 bushels yesterday and early today for export.

Inspections Wednesday totalled 394 cars, as against 1198 last year, and in sight were 310.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.24⅝; No. 2 C. W., $1.21⅝.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—There was an improved demand from over the cable for Manitoba spring wheat today and as the cables were stronger at a further advance of 6d per quarter, sales of a few loads were made for December-January shipment. Coarse grains firmer under improved demand, 10,000 bushels extra No. 1 feed oats at 58¼c, and 10,000 No. 1 feed at 57½c per bushel, c.i.f. being sold.

There was some enquiry from English importers for spring wheat flour, but as prices bid were below millers' views, no sales were made. The local trade is quiet with a firm undertone. Millfeed in good demand. Butter continues quiet and easy. Cheese is strong. Eggs firm. Provisions steady.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 3.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.18⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.15 to $1.17⅝; No. 2 do., $1.11⅝ to $1.15⅝; Dec., $1.13.

ACT NOW ASSURES PURITY OF MAPLE SUGAR AND SYRUP

At the last session of Parliament an amendment was made to the Adulteration Act by which the purity of maple sugar and maple syrup is assured. Since the new law comes into force on January 1 it would be well if the public generally should become aware of its provisions and of the penalty for selling adulterated goods. Maple sugar shall be entirely the solid product resulting from the evaporation of maple sap and shall contain not more than 10 per cent. of water. In addition it must conform to certain chemical tests. Maple syrup must not contain more than 35 per cent. of water and an imperial gallon of maple syrup measured at ordinary temperature of the air shall weigh not less than thirteen pounds three ounces.

The use of the word maple on any compounds which are not genuine is absolutely prohibited. The word "maple" must not be used either alone or in combination with any other word or words on the label. Further than this it will be illegal to use a mark, illustration or device on a package containing any article of food which resembles maple syrup which would lead people to believe it is pure maple syrup.

In cases where adulterations are deemed to be injurious to health the penalty is a fine of not less than 50 dollars and not exceeding 500 dollars. If the adulteration is not injurious to health the penalty is a fine not exceeding 200 dollars.

IT'S A SHORT WAY TO CALAIS, BUT—

London, Dec. 4.—"Tipperary," the marching song of the British troops, has a rival on the other side of the trenches in Belgium.

Refugees tell of a new song heard in cafes and other places where German officers and soldiers gather, which in English runs like "It's a Short, Short March to Calais."

The refugees say the Germans are becoming adept at singing it.

A Lindsay merchant was fined $17 for selling adulterated ginger.

SENDING XMAS CHEER TO BOYS AT SALISBURY

Parcels Should be in Post Office or Express Offices not Later Than Dec. 14

Christmas is no time of leisure or smiles for express and post office employes. Already they are feeling the first throb of the approaching rush of mail, parcels and gifts going to loved ones.

This year, Salisbury Plain is going to be the Mecca for most Christmas gifts, from all indications. The friends of the soldiers are hourly inquiring at the express offices and the postoffice how and when to send parcels so that they will reach the soldiers by Christmas.

All persons who intend sending gifts to the soldiers in England should have them in the express or postoffice not later than December 14. It is preferable to have them in by December 10, but in any event by December 14; the earlier the better. All parcels going to the soldiers will of course require charges to be either prepaid or else have charges guaranteed. Parcels do not go free because intended for the soldiers, as some think.

"So many people come to me with anxious faces and ask what I think their sons or brothers or husbands desire most for Christmas," said Mr. A. G. Carruthers, Dominion express agent.

"Send them something they can eat or smoke," is Mr. Carruthers' answer. He says the boys don't want articles of apparel, as their wants are amply filled in this respect. They do not want things they will have to discard when orders come to pack up and move, which will be the case if inappropriate or unsuitable gifts are sent. When a soldier packs, not an ounce of unnecessary equipment is permitted to be carried, and as a general rule they have enough in any event.

"By all means send them something to consume, and it will be more than welcome," was Mr. Carruthers' injunction.

Steamship Sailings.

Steamers for England sail from St. John's on December 4th, 11th and 15th, and parcels that catch these sailings will reach its destination in time for Christmas. To reach St. John's, it is obvious that parcels should be in two or three days ahead in order to catch the steamships. Anything up to 11 pounds may be sent forward by parcel post at rates lower than express. Parcels over this weight, of course, can go by parcel post, but the rates are higher, and as the weight increases the express rates commence to be about the same. The Dominion Express is receiving shipments for Salisbury every day, and has sent out two large 300-pound consignments of articles prepared by Peterborough ladies for the soldiers.

CANADIAN SOLDIER WINS PROMOTION

Second Lieutenant Shergold, a Toronto man, who was mentioned in despatches by Sir John French for "coolness and bravery under heavy fire" was raised from the rank of Sergeant-Major and given a commission as second lieutenant in the Imperial army.

SALISBURY CAMP IS NEAR STONEHENGE AND TOMBS OF PREHISTORIC CHIEFS

The Canadian contingent will be at least a good eight miles north of the plain, for the great camp round Bulford and Ludghershall sees nothing of Salisbury except the distant spire, says William Conacher in Toronto Star Weekly. The plain itself in some ways is topographicaly not unlike the level country in Ontario, but it is almost treeless except for the wooded banks of the streams that traverse it. It is in reality a rolling upland stretch of down land from 400 to 600 feet above the sea. Two miles north of Salisbury "the plain" begins with the ramparts of the prehistoric camp of Old Sarum dominating it for miles. Here and there as the eye ranges over this silent expanse of pasture land, it is caught by a dome-shaped knoll standing out against the sky. There are the tombs of prehistoric chiefs which dot the plain promiscuously. Just south of the camp at Bulford is Stonehenge itself, which was only wired in when the military began to appear. From here the eye can wander in a full circle and see hardly anything but solitude save where the tin roofs of the encampment gleam. The wind, too, drives in no uncertain fashion across these levels, and the first troops sent here just after the Boer War pined even for the dust of the Long Valley at Aldershot. But doubtless Thomas Atkins has made things more homely by now. Certainly there is no town in England more homely or comfortable than Amesbury, just south of the camp, Amesbury where Guinevere was supposed to have ended her days in a nunnery. And doubtless the George is still blooming, the George where one used to get the finest cold beef and draught ale in England in a fine old inn that recalls coaching days and coaching ways.

The climate on the plain is fresh and bracing. One accustomed to these clear skies will find it hazy, but the plain is rarely close or oppressive. Even in winter the thermometer rarely registers more than a few degrees of frost, and snow is of rare occurrence. On the other hand, in January and the early spring there are wont to be piercing cold, raw winds, although it may not be actually freesing. Altogether it should be a very interesting spot to obtain one's first experiences of England in, although the soldier is apt to pine for a big town, in which to spend his free time. Very likely Kitchener intends to make free time an almost negligible quantity.

For anyone with at all an eye to history the country cannot fail to be of the highest interest. There are monuments of the remotest past scattered with the greatest profusion, and there are the old Roman roads which mark the day when those islands first came into history. There is beside the beautiful Gothic cathedral of Salisbury built in the fifteen century, and looking now with its almost over spruceness as if it had been just set down in the close. "If you lived beneath that spire," said Kingsley, "surely it would be hard to do anything mean or base." Fifty years ago there lived an old prebendary, who at any rate found it possible to stretch the truth. His name was Greenly, and he was chaplain to Hardy on the Victory. To his dying day he declared that Nelson's last words were: "Greenly, take command of the fleet."

FOUR TOOK SEVENTEEN.

A trooper of the Royal Horse Guards writes:—"one amusing incident that happened was with our civ transport men. They were in a little village, well behind the firing line, and one morning an old lady who dared to go into the wood for some faggots gave the alarm that some 'allemans' (Germans) were in the wood. Instead of these men getting on their motors and shifting, four of them got their rifles (which they are all armed with). Two of them had never fired a shot in their lives, and as bold as brass they got into the wood, only to run against an officer and sixteen Germans with their hands above their heads—and they were only too glad to partake of a tin of bully beef and biscuits which these lads gave them. They were congratulated by the officer commanding the transport, but told never to do such a silly action again, that their motors were of more value than sixteen Germans.

RAY CLANCY IN PRESENTATION OF COMEDY-DRAMA

A Berlin, Ont., paper, giving an account of the presentation of a comedy-drama by the students of St. Jerome's College recently, makes special reference to the work of Mr. Ray Clancy, the well known local young man attending that institution. The report says:—

"Mr. Ray Clancy as Jack Farquhar, a miscast, in the drama of life, scored a great success. Mr. Clancy appeared last year in the role of an Irish Eden and his splendid work of that time was duplicated last evening. He sang "Happy Days," and the number received a ready response from the audience.

Role of French Girls

"As I write, German shells are bursting only about 200 yards away," says Bombardier Charles McCarthy, 129th Battery, 30th Brigade, R.F.A., 3rd Division R.A., with the British Expeditionary Force in France, in a letter to his sister, who lives in Montreal.

"I think this war will last a little longer than people think," the letter continues. "We must have Germany a helpless nation both as regards her army and navy before we stop fighting, and that we will do, please God."

Bombardier McCarthy is loud in his praises of French hospitality.

"Some of the French girls go right to the front of the firing line to the infantry trenches, distributing fruit and cigarettes among the men," he says.

License Fees May be Higher

Toronto, Dec. 4. — It is generally understood that when the House meets next session liquor license legislation shortening the hours of sale and possibly the increasing of license fees, will come up for consideration as war measures, but official circles are absolutely silent upon the matter.

Hon. Mr. Hearst was asked if the Ontario Government proposed to bring forward emergency measures touching the license system. He expressed himself in non-committal fashion.

Amendments to the Liquor License Act, if any, will be given due consideration by the government at the proper time, he said.

LEAD FOR SHRAPNEL

Through the efforts of Hon. W.T. White, Minister of Finance, the manufacture of shrapnel in Canada is going to be the means of materially benefiting the silver lead industry in the Kootenay. The bullets for the shrapnel are to be made from Canadian lead. Hon. Mr. White took the matter up with the committee of the Cabinet, placing orders for shells, and satisfactory arrangements have been made with the smelting companies at Trail, B.C.

The Finance Minister, with the assistance of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., a short time ago was instrumental in securing the continuance of smelting operations and of shipments from the leading mines in the Kootenay country, which otherwise would have been largely stopped because of the present business and financial conditions.

Was Engineer on Boat Which Took the Late King Across Rice Lake

Adolphus Marchand, the last of the early steamboat men of the Trent, passed away recently at Stirling.

Mr. Marchand had been engineer on various boats on the Trent river for over fifty years, and, with the late Captain Lambert, was the last of the first steamboat men of the district. He was engineer of the steamer Otonabee when it took the late King Edward, then Prince of Wales, across Rice Lake from Harwood to Hiawatha in 1861. Captain Lambert being in command of the boat. Born at Three Rivers, Quebec, he was for many years a resident of Hastings, and one of the best known of the boat men on the river. He leaves to mourn his demise, two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Barrigan and Miss Edna of Stirling, and three sons, William, of South Porcupine, Adolphus, of Muskoka Falls, and Louis, of Hungerford.

EXCITING VIGIL ON THE DEEP

An officer of one of the ships of the Grand Fleet on the North Sea writes:—

The other evening we sighted a big liner all lit up and going away from us. It was about 10.30 on a Sunday night, a lovely night, and we were going along quietly about 6 knots. We increased to 18 knots and after her.

Silently we crept up on her; not a light was to be seen from us, all hands at action and ready to hurl projectiles of deadly lyddite at her. Up we came within a mile, and bang went our gun with a blank charge. All you could see was a glare of fire; then we challenged and closed on her. She was a large French liner bound home, full of passengers and also many hundreds of reservists.

When they found out who we were they chered, and then broke into the "Marseillaise," and cheered again as we slowly steamed round her with our searchlights on her. Then we cheered and broke into the National Anthem of France. Suddenly we turned on fighting lights all along the decks, and they for the first time saw all our guns manned. They cheered again and sang French songs.

After this we said "Bon voyage"; out went our lights and off we went on our job nothing but a black object, and she went on her way brilliantly lighted up. If she had been an armed German liner how different all would have been!

DOMINION NOT SEEKING BELGIANS

It is hardly probable that the Government will bring out to Canada any Belgian refugees. It was thought at first that this would be an excellent move in order to provide help for farmers who are in need of men.

Several reasons are urged against any action by the Canadian Government. One is that the Belgian Government has ordered every subject between 18 and 35 to join the colors.

Another is that when the war is over the Belgian Government will require all its available people to rebuild the country, and if the Canadian Government took steps to bring Belgians to Canada it might be regarded as unfriendly.

Adulterated Honey Sold.

A report of the Inland Revenue Department on the purity of the honey sold in Canada states that out of 194 samples examined ten were not honey at all, and the vendors were liable to prosecution. One vendor said he sold it not as honey, but as honeymoon syrup. On another case the manufacturers admitted that it was imitation honey. In 22 other cases the honey contained a slight excess of mineral matters.

The examinations for the first aid class of the Y. W. C. A. will be held in the Y. W. C. A. parlors Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

WHY SHOULD WE BUY AT HOME?

Because our interests are here.

Because the community that is good enough for us to live in, is good enough for us to buy in.

Because we believe in transacting business with our friends.

Because we want to see the goods we are buying.

Because we want to get what we buy when we pay for it.

Because some part of every dollar we spend at home stays at home and helps work for the welfare of our home town.

Because the home man we buy from stands back of the goods, thus always giving value received.

Because the man we buy from pays his share of taxes.

Because the man we buy from helps to support our poor and needy, our schools, our churches, and our homes.

Because, when luck, misfortune or bereavement comes the man we buy from is here with his kindly expressions of greeting, his words of cheer, and, if need be, his pocketbook.

Let us make Peterboro a good place in which to work and live.

It's easy and certain if each one will contribute his share.

Map showing how the Russians have enveloped a whole German army in Poland. The black triangle reaching from Lodz to Koluski is a large German army. The grey crescent shows how the Russians are gradually forming circle about the entrapped forces. The arrow indicates the path of reinforcements which had they arrived in time, might have saved the imperilled divisions.

INVADERS FALLING BACK TO FRONTIER

Last Furious Attack on Russian Positions is Without Effect and Another Battle is Developing Southward of Lodz---Fall of Cracow, Which is Near, Will Lay Open Southern Germany to Slavs.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The following official statement was issued last night from General Headquarters at Petrograd:—

"Fighting continues in certain districts along the front in the region of Lowicz. Important forces of the enemy, chiefly the troops transported in November from the German west front, opened an offensive on Dec. 2, in the direction of Lioutomersk and Szerzow.

"On the rest of the front on the left bank of the Vistula there is no particular modification in the situation.

"Beyond the Carpathians our troops have taken Bartfeld, capturing eight officers, 1,200 men and six machine guns."

The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily News, Frederick Rennet, cables:

The Germans to the northwest of Lowicz have abandoned their active defensive under pressure from the Russians, who are well above Plock, on the left bank of the Vistula.

All the Germans columns north of Lodz are now falling back towards the frontier. At midnight and in the early hours of the morning the Germans north of Lodz, in massed columns, made a succession of furious onslaughts on the Russian position. This final attempt the military commentator of a Russian newspaper ascribes to the failure of Hindenburg's effort in Poland, which was intended to culminate in the determined outflanking of the Russian position, and to the fact that its preparation was too visible and the execution too slow. Hence, from an early stage of the fighting the Germans had to use all their energies in parrying the counter-manoeuvres by the Russians, who had seized the general initiative.

The Petrograd correspondent of The Times points out that by retaking Strykow the Russians have regained possession of the Lodz-Warsaw railway.

The fall of Cracow would lay open the roads to Vienna, Breslau and Berlin, but the main interest in the east continues to rest with the operations on the irregular front from Czenstochowa through Lodz and Lowicz to the East Prussian border. Official pronouncements as to the progress here are guarded and indefinite, and it is thus difficult to arrive at a conclusion with regard to the course of events.

It is apparent, however, that a new battle has developed to the southwest of Lodz, where the Germans have formed a new line with fresh forces brought from Kalisz, and are again trying to penetrate the Russian centre.

The Russians, too, have bad time to straighten out their line, and, in the eyes of the allies, another battle following so closely that just concluded in this region must help them in the long run.

It is argued that, win or lose, the Germans will be further weakened, and, in addition, will soon have to turn their attention to the Russian offensive against Silesia and around Cracow.

However, the battle must last for some days and the opposing troops may be counted upon to fight with the same intensity as they did in the previous conflict, when the losses in killed, wounded and missing reached enormous numbers.

The London Telegraph's correspondent says:—

The great size of the Russian army will mar the German scheme of engaging the Czar's forces so that they will have to abandon the idea of invading Silesia. When Cracow falls it will checkmate the German-Austrian offensive.

Another 1,200,000 men have been called to the colors, and Rusian would generously send some of her sons to France to help her ally were it possible.

The Russian army is taking a hint from the enemy and now it also uses the Vistula as a line of transport, and thus moves quickly to its objective, Wloclowek, to the west of Plock.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Orangeism lost a firm supporter and the opponents of Home Rule a valued friend in the death yesterday of the Earl of Erne, fourth of the line and one of the most distinguished of Dublinites. He served in the South African war where he distinguished himself.

The late Lord Erne sat for twenty years as the member for Enniskillen and for four years did good service as a whip.

SHIPS ARE ADDED

German Fleet in Atlantic Now Number Ten

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 4.—It is reported that the Germans have increased their South Atlantic fleet by adding the battle-cruiser Von der Tann, making a total of about ten warships in this fleet. The British are said to have added the battle-cruiser Invincible to their fleet. The Lamport and Holt Lines are said to have cancelled their sailings from here until Dec. 17. The situation is serious. Rumors that the Japanese fleet is off Uruguay are not believed.

Portugal Is Mobilizing.

LISBON, Dec. 4—Portugal has acted in complete accord with Great Britain, her ancient ally, since the beginning of the present war, declared Prime Minister Machado in his address at the opening of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. Great excitement was created by his announcement also that four expeditions have been prepared for service in Portuguese West Africa against the Germans. He also read a decree, which was published in the official journals yesterday afternoon, providing for the preparatory mobilization of a division of troops which will be ready for service anywhere it may be needed to serve the best interests of the country.

FRONT SHORTENED

Britain's Share of Task of Checking Germans is Reduced

LONDON, Dec. 4—Col. E. D. Swinton, of the Intelligence Department of the General Staff of the British Expeditionary Force in France and Belgium, in a narrative dated Nov. 26, gives a general review of the development of the situation of the force for six weeks preceding that date.

"There has recently been a lull in the active operations," he says. "No progress has been made by either side and yet there has come about an important modification comprising a readjustment in the scope of the part played by the British as a whole." He explains the movement from the River Aisne to the Belgian frontier to prolong the left flank of the French army, and says that in attempting this the British force was compelled to assume responsibility for a very extended section of the front. He points out, as did Gen. French, commander-in-chief of the British forces, that the British held only one-twelfth of the line, so that the greater share of the common task of opposing the enemy fell and still falls to the French, while the Belgians played an almost vital part.

With the fall of Antwerp the Germans made every effort to push forward a besieging force toward the west and hastened to bring up a new army corps, which had been hastily raised and trained, their object being to drive the allies out of Belgium and break through to Dunkirk and Calais. Altogether they had a quarter of a million of fresh men. Eventually the Germans had north of La Bassee about fourteen army corps and eight cavalry divisions, that is, "a force of three-quarters of a million men, with which to attempt to drive the allies into the sea. In addition, there was immensely powerful armament and heavy siege artillery, which also had been brought up from around Antwerp."

The official eye-witness tells of the blows delivered by the Germans at Nieuport, Dixmude and Ypres, where "at first the allies were greatly outnumbered."

REVOLT NOW UNDER CONTROL

Only Beyers' Commando is Left in South Africa

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The receipt of official news of the surrender of Gen. Christian De Wet on Dec. 1, following the capture of Col. Maritz and the defeat of the commando under Gen. Beyers early in November, has assured the Colonial Office that the revolt in South Africa is under control and will not assume proportions of a military action of the first-class.

Both Cape Colony and Orange Free State are now cleared of rebels, and only the small commando under Gen. Beyers is left at large near the border of the Transvaal. The capture of De Wet was effected in the Transvaal. The text of the official despatch to the Colonial Secretary, Lewis Harcourt, from Cape Town says:—

"Gen. De Wet surrendered on Tuesday at a lonely farm near Waterburg, in the Transvaal. He was taken by Commandant Conrad Britz, who, with a considerable force, had been scouring the district for some time.

"Col. Britz and his force finally found trace of De Wet's commando, which had dwindled to fifty-two men, and followed it to Waterburg, where the farm house and kraal in which they had taken refuge was surrounded.

"No resistance was offered by the rebels in the final action. The prisoners were taken to Vryburg. Charges of treason will be brought against De Wet and his officers."

There has been no news for some days of the fighting in the Caucasus or in Egypt, but throughout the whole of Africa more liveliness is anticipated now that Gen. De Wet is captured, and Gen. Louis Botha can carry out his original plans of moving against German Southwest Africa. The first Australian and New Zealand contingents have been landed in Egypt for operations against the Turks, and Portuguese reinforcements have reached Angola to take the offensive against the Germans on their African borders.

LIEBKNECHT CENSURED.

German Social Democrats Say Position Didn't Represent Party.

BERLIN, Dec. 4. — The Socialist Democratic faction of the Reichstag yesterday issued a statement which says that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, Socialist, in voting against the new war credit, which was approved by the Reichstag Wednesday, acted against party discipline as especially reiterated in case of the war credit measure. Dr. Liebknecht was the only member of the Reichstag voting against the proposition. The statement expresses the deepest regret at the occurrence, which, it is said, will be investigated further.

Emperor of Austria Ill.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — The report is again current in London that the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary is desperately ill. In an article in Truth it is declared that private advices from Austria are that his death may be expected daily.

In the early part of October a weekly journal in London declared that it had authentic information that the Austrian Emperor had died two weeks previous and that his death was being kept secret because of the fear of an uprising of Mgayars in Hungary. This report was denied in an official statement from Berlin a short time afterward.

Tempered with Common-sense

The charge of the "Light Brigade" at Balaclava was a magnificent display of courage, the acme of patriotism,---but it accomplished nothing. It was a useless sacrifice.

Be sure that you do not make useless sacrifices on the altar of your country. Be sure that you temper your patriotism with common-sense.

We must remember, in connection with our efforts to buy nothing but "Made in Canada" goods, that there are some articles necessary to every-day life that are not and cannot be made as well and as economically in Canada as they can elsewhere.

No amount of insisting that these be "Made in Canada" could establish such industries on a permanent, profitable basis in Canada. It would only result in inconvenience, the acceptance of an inferior article by the consumer.

In lines where competition is practicable, there are enough industries in Canada turning out goods that are the equal of those imported to support every Canadian workman, if these industries are supported by every Canadian consumer.

Everything Else Being Equal, "Say Made in Canada"

NIGHT ATTACK MADE ON RAFTS FRUSTRATED

Tremendous Losses Are Inflicted Upon the Enemy by Allies' Guns When Under Cover of Darkness the Germans Try to Punt Broad Rafts to Franco-British Side---Fighting at Many Points.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The News has the following from its correspondent in France:—

"Fierce fighting is now taking place along a considerable portion of the battle line. The Germans have anticipated the concerted forward movement of the allies by making a spirited attack themselves. The allies have not been taken by surprise; never was an army more ready to defend itself. The allies are now in a position to bide their time, and the new German offensive will probably not cause them to change their well-matured plans. The new German attack so far has met with no success. It has to extend more or less along the whole line, but has concentrated principally to the north of Ypres and on towards Dixmude. Fighting has been most severe here, but all attacks have been successfully repulsed. In the dark hours before dawn yesterday morning a large force of Germans crossed the flood waters of the Yser by means of big broad rafts. The venture was a desperate one, for not a man who set out on it could have been ignorant of the fact that death was almost certainly awaiting him. The rafts were punted through the shallow waters in dead silence and in utter darkness. Each carried about fifty or sixty men, and some mitrailleuses in preparation for the dawn. A further fleet of rafts drawn by motor-boats was waiting on the German side of the muddy waters.

But before dawn came the plot was discovered, and when daybreak did arrive the artillery of the allies met the advancing Germans with devastating effect. Yet in spite of their losses these Germans, brave even to madness, still essayed the crossing. They were partially covered by the heavy cannonade of their field artillery and until midday still persisted in their plan. Several rafts were upset in midstream by the fire of the French guns, and great numbers of Germans were drowned as well as shot. Once again the Yser claimed heavy toll; once again German blood stained its waters crimson. The attack eventually ceased after the Germans had suffered immense losses in men and mitrailleuses, but the artillery kept up a determined bombardment of the allied positions, meeting with a vigorous, well-directed reply.

The following official statement was issued by the French War Office last night:—

"The only interesting news relates to our right wing and to the day of Dec. 2. On the right bank of the River Moselle we have occupied Lesmenils and the Signal of Xon.

"In the Vosges our troops have captured the Tete-De-Faux, to the south of the Village of Bonhomme, which dominates the range of hills on the frontier and has served as an observatory for the Germans.

"In Alsace the station of Burnhaupt has been occupied and we have established ourselves on a line comprising Aspach, the bridge of Aspach and Burnhaupt."

Yesterday afternoon's communique says:—

"In Belgium there was a rather lively artillery fire directed against Nieuport, and to the south of Ypres. The inundations have extended to the south of Dixmude.

"From the Lys to the Somme there has been a violent bombardment, particularly at Aix-Noulette, to the west of Lens. There was quiet along the entire front from the Somme to the Aisne and in Champagne.

"In the Argonne several attacks on the part of the enemy were repulsed, and we made slight progress.

"In the Woevre district the German artillery evidenced a certain activity, but with insignificant results.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges there is nothing important to report."

SENTRIES DESERT GARRISON SUFFERS

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Rome correspondent of The Morning Post says:—

Further fighting is reported from Fezzan, in Tripoli, where Italians were suddenly attacked at Fort Garadi Sebiia. The native sentinels who were recently recruited deserted to the enemy, but the little garrison withdrew in good order after losing four officers and twenty-seven men.

Von Moltke In Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—(By wireless to London.)—Field Marshal Count Helmuth von Moltke, the chief of the German General Staff, who has been in ill-health, yesterday conferred in Berlin with a number of high military dignitaries from the German headquarters in the field.

Casualties of Servians.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—(By wireless to London.) — Nineteen thousand Servian prisoners have been taken since the Austrians began the present offensive movement, according to a report received here yesterday from Vienna. News from other sources indicates that Servia's casualties since the beginning of the war will reach about 100,000 or virtually one-third of her entire strength.

Reports of further Servian defeats to the east of Kolubara and Ljid rivers tend to confirm the prediction of military observers that the end of Servian resistance cannot be far off.

German Pulpit "Kultur."

PARIS, Dec. 4.—A representative of The Temps, who has just returned from a journey into Germany, which he made incognito, declares that the very priests in their pulpits thunder tirades against England.

"No one shall disarm Germany because she is under the protection of the Almighty," says the priests. "May France die, England disappear and Russia be annihilated. It is the will of our German god."

Interned Belgians Revolt.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 4. — A telegram from Zeist, in the Dutch Province of Utrecht, says that yesterday morning a number of Belgian soldiers who had crossed the borders into Holland and had been interned in a camp near Zeist, revolted. The guard of Dutch soldiers was forced to engage in a fight with the interned Belgians, and was compelled to kill five and wound six before they were subdued.

HUNG UP AND SET ON FIRE.

Montreal Man Narrowly Escapes Death at Hands of Robbers.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4. — Led by a woman, four masked robbers tied, gagged and burned Eugene Dubreuil, nightwatchman of the Cote de Liesse Convent, yesterday after he had refused to hand over his pay, according to the story Dubreuil told the police.

After the burglars had hung him to a water pipe in the boiler room so that his toes just touched the floor, they poured coal oil over his arms and set fire to him.

However, be escaped with a few slight burns on the left arm, but the robbers took from him $30.85 and his watch and chain and sped away in an automobile.

He was rescued an hour later.

Another Battle With Prisoners.

LANCASTER, Dec. 4. — (Via London.)—An attempt to escape made Wednesday night by a thousand prisoners in the concentration camp here was thwarted by the guards, who charged the mobs with fixed bayonets, wounding several.

The reserves fixed bayonets, charged at the double quick and soon subdued the mutineers. The ringleaders were arrested and placed in solitary confinement. Only one man was seriously injured in the melee.

More Comforts for Soldiers.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — The Canadian War Contingent Association, in order to promote unity of action both in Canada and the United Kingdom, have made arrangements for distribution of field comforts as and when required by the Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plain to supplement those supplied by Government authorities.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Magnates Meet in Toronto This Afternoon — Erie, St. Thomas and Peterboro Said to be Dropping Out — Local Club May Remain

The Canadian League magnates draw around the annual meeting table this afternoon in Toronto for what is heralded as being one of the most interesting sessions the circuit ever held.

Many matters of importance are coming up for consideration. In the first place the question of changing the circuit is one that will occupy a great deal of the attention of the various representatives. Erie has practically dropped out, so at the present time there are really only seven teams on the circuit. Dopesters in other towns claim Peterboro is to throw up the sponge and rumors from St. Thomas state that the directors there are endeavoring to dispose of their baseball stock.

President Denham of the local club gave every promise a month or so ago that this city would be represented but any step to be taken will undoubtedly be governed by the decision as to whether the parks will be open next summer or not and whether or not the league goes back to class C. It is said that many magnates are opposed to closing the league next year and all feel that some steps should be taken to run the league on a more economical basis.

Mr. Denham left for Toronto this morning. Messrs. Stevely of London and Nelson of Brantford arived at the Queen City yesterday to audit the books of the league.

VARSITY CALLED TO WIN FROM THE ARGOS

Big Four Champs Will be Affected by Injuries — Dr. Lawson May be Used on the Back Division

Toronto, Dec. 4. — Toronto will have things its own way on Saturday, there being nothing else on the sporting calendar of anything like the importance of the national final between University of Toronto and the Argonauts. Sentiment is gradually veering in favor of the Blue and White to win the title.

The Argonauts had a light work yesterday and another is on the cards for this afternoon. The Double Blue squad turned out at Rosedale field and galloped around the track a few times. No ball entered into the practice and none will be introduced into today's work. A "scull practice" will be held in the clubhouse after the work this afternoon, with chalk and blackboard doing service. The Oarsmen have not recovered from their two strenuous games Saturday and Wednesday with the Hamilton teams. Many of the men are more or less sore and bruised, while some of them suffer from more serious injuries. It is feared that the players will be slightly stale for the momentous struggle, and that is why some of the enthusiasts are inclined to favor University of Toronto.

The Blue and White have not had a game for two weeks, and the men are eager for the kick-off. Physically, Captain Gage's lads are ready for the battle. They have been carefully drilled in all their plays, and the signals are said to be working with the utmost precision. It is predicted that Canada's record football crowd will be at the stadium on Saturday.

There is more or less uncertainty regarding the lineup of the Argonaut back field, but it is expected that the rest of the team, with the possible exception of Motley, will be in the struggle. O'Connor and Everett Smith are fit and will certainly play. Bickle, Gonter and Holmes are far from at their best, owing to injuries. Dr. Lawson, lame ankle and all, seems to be the best selection, and he may be called upon to play one of the back field positions.

JOHNSON IS A FED.

Famous Washington Twirler Signs With Chicago

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. Louis, Dec. 4.—Vice-president Ball of the St. Louis Federals says Walter Johnson who yesterday signed with the Chicago Federals will receive twenty thousand dollars a year.

Kansas City, Dec. 4. — Walter Johnson, over the telephone from his Coffeyville farm, confirmed late yesterday the statement of President Weeghman, of the Chicago Feds. that he had been signed by the Chicago club for two years, but refused to say what his salary was to be.

"Is it more than $16,000 a year?" he was asked.

"It is," said the pitcher, but added that the figure should be announced by Mr. Weeghman.

"I had a long conference with Tinker today," continued Johnson. "He made me a very interesting offer—quite the best I have yet received—and I took him up. That's all. I'm ready to report to Chicago whenever they want me."

Immediately after the conference Tinker took a train for Chicago and Johnson motored back to his farm.

Washington Will Fight.

Washington, Dec. 4. — Walter Johnson will not go to the Federal League without a fight in the courts with the Washington American team, of which he has been the hope and mainstay for seven years. Manager Clark Griffith, learning last night without great surprise, but with frankly admitted regret of the famous pitcher's deal with the Chicago Federals, declared he had an option on Johnson's services for another year and "would sue him to the end of the earth" before he would allow it to be broken.

"There was a provision in the 1914 contract," said Griffith, "whereby I obtained an option on Johnson's services for the 1915 season. Twenty-five hundred dollars of the $12,000 salary which he has received was given for the specific purpose of reserving an option in 1915 upon Johnson. I am convinced that he has violated the agreement, and I will sue him to the end of the earth before I will recognize his right to sign with the Federals."

"JIMMY" COLLINS, considered by many as the best guardian of the difficult corner that ever donned a uniform is dying of pneumonia in Buffalo. Collins played for the first Boston team in the American League and was captain when that team won the world series from Pittsburg in 1903. He broke into the game in Buffalo and it is there he is ending his days.

RUGBY PLAYER'S LEG AMPUTATED

"Dug" Palmer Loses Limb as Result of Injuries

Galt, Dec. 4. — Douglas Palmer, halfback of the Hamilton Tigers, who for a month past has been confined to his home here suffering from blood poisoning, had his right leg amputated half way between the ankle and the knee, at the local hospital.

Palmer played in the Montreal game at Hamilton, suffering with boils. One of the boils broke, and he had his foot injured, blood poisoning setting in. As a last effort to save the young athlete's leg, Dr. Hawke, the attending physician, called in Dr. Geo. Bingham, a specialist, of Toronto; but the blood poisoning had developed to such an extent that it was necessary to amputate. "Dug" is well known in Toronto, having played hockey there while attending St. Andrew's College.

COMMENT

As You Like it

"THRIFT" BURNSIDE has passed away. To the average athlete of today the sentence means practically nothing but th those who remember rugby, when the names of Counsell, Burwash, Mallock, McCallum, Hobbs, Kingston, Barr, Bradely and Elliott were prominent on the sporting pages, the fact is hard to believe. J. M. T. Burnside known from coast to coast as "Thrift" captained the University of Toronto team some eighteen years ago and was the originator of the "Burnside Rules." He did away with the scrimmage and put the ball in play by means of the snap-back system. Many other changes were brought in by the same man, most of which are found in the game as played today.

At the University of Toronto he took his degree in engineering. After a course at the Royal Military College he was attached to the 48th Highlanders at Toronto and was later transferred to the Imperial Service. He served on the Gold Coast of Africa and in China. Of late years he was mining in Cobalt and went to Asheville, N.C., sometime ago hoping that he could win back his health. He was forty years of age.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Ingersoll Hockey Club was held last evening and officers elected. The executive will decide whether the team will be entered in the Northern League or the O.H.A.

CHARLIE HERZOG is about to create a record in Cincinnati by signing to manage the Reds for the second time. Many men have signed to manage the Reds but no one ever repeated the operation.

LEEMING CARR the Varsity halfback who announced his retirement from the game a couple of weeks ago is back with a uniform on. He will help the back division out.

ARGOS ARE weakened through injuries says reports from the Queen City. That may be true but they still look good to cop the big cup.

CALL 435 FOR SCORE OF GAME

In consideration of this fact The Review has made arrangements to get the score at regular intervals during the game. Information of this nature will be available at Phone 435.

WON GAME BY SINGLE POINT

Cressmans Had to Hustle to Beat Excelsiors

The league basket ball game, Thursday evening at the Y.M.C.A. between the Cressmans and Excelsiors teams was won by the Cressmans by the close score of 20-19. The Excelsiors had lead by the score of 10-9 in the first half and played such a fast game in the second half that the result was in doubt up to the call of time. Knapman and Long did all the shooting for the Excelsiors and latter having 6 goals from floor and three from fouls to his credit. Goals were rather evenly divided among the merchants of the Cressman team. The men represented the Cressmans last night were F. Cressman, H. Cressman, Raynor, Palmer and Hunter. Players on the Excelsiors were Knapman, Long, Stewart, Lewis and Darling.

Saturday evening of this week two games are scheduled. At 8 o'clock Jr. Business Men versus the Pirates, 8.45 Bankers versus St. Pauls.

Every evening sees three or four events under way at the same time. A man who visited the building the other evening and found some two hundred young men amusing themselves in different ways throughout the building asked us if this was not something extra and was surprised when we informed him that he could find from one hundred and fifty to two hundred young men in the building almost every evening at the present season. It seems as though the young men are crowding the building as never before, the day time attendance being also increased by the fact that so many men are out of work.

Some thirty Collegiate students met Thursday afternoon to take preliminary steps toward organizing a Collegiate bowling team. Fred Soward was elected president. Douglas MacDonald, Sec.-Treas. The young men are very enthusiastic over the project and will hold another meeting this afternoon to draw up a schedule and select teams.

KINGS IN BATTLE

No English king has led his troops in person since Dettingen, where George II.'s narrow escape when his horse ran away with him decided public opinion against further risks in that line. Louis Napoleon led his troops in Italy, and at one stage of the Crimean War talked of going to take over the command there. The proposal scared the authorities in Great Britain, and was averted only by Clarendon's tact. Later on he went to Sedan and sealed his own fate.

When Prussia beat Austria the present Duchess of Connaught's father was a dashing and successful commander, and the Royal princes played their part in the Franco-German War. The heirs of King Peter and the Austrian Emperor are in the field, and the Austrian generalissimo is an archduke. It is long since a reigning Sovereign was slain in battle.

A Motorist's Dash

Some idea of the hazardous work of the motor corps in action may be gathered from the story of a lieutenant who was told to accompany three aeroplanes which were making a raid on the German lines. Getting as close as he could to the enemy, he lay in wait all day for the return of the aviators. Ultimately he heard from some fleeing Belgian soldiers that an aeroplane had dropped, and, following their directions, he dashed through the German fire and rescued all three aviators and one of the observers, the other two staying behind to wreck the engines of the 'planes, so that they should not be of any use to the enemy.

KITCHENER IN FRANCE.

King George's Stay May Be Considerably Prolonged.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Times this morning says that Lord Kitchener is at present in France, consulting with King George, King Albert of Belgium and the French officials.

Other despatches record the visit of the King to the trenches in the firing line, while The Chronicle says:

The King's visit to the expeditionary force is proving a most interesting one, and the date of his Majesty's return appears not to be definitely fixed. The visit may possibly be extended to considerably beyond the limits originally contemplated.

Big Ones For Little Ones.

"Years ago there lived a certain backwoods farmer who had a singular faculty for overlooking the most obvious things. Once he swam his horse across a river and stopped at a house near by to borrow a bucket.

"I want to water my hoss down here at the river," he explained.

On another occasion he approached a neighbor and surprised him with the offer of a trade.

"I'd like to swap my three big pigs," he said, "for three little pigs."

"What's that?" demanded the astonished neighbor.

"Well, you see," answered the other, "my pigs have got too big for their pen."

JUDGMENTS IN DIVISION COURT

At the sitting of the Division Court today C. R. Banks was given judgment against Frank Fountaine for $61.69 an amount due on account. The cases of A. J. Rose vs. J. Collins for $51.25 and that of A. Trotter vs. Hector Nelson were settled out of court.

The main case of the morning sitting was that of William Irwin vs. Robert Davis and G. Davis for $50. The case arose from a realty transaction. Irwin owned a hotel in Chemong and R. and G. Davis leased it. It is allegd that according to the agreement the purchasers were to leave the ice house filled with ice when their lease expired. The hotel was burned a short time after the Davis men took charge and the business was discontinued. Irwin claimed that the ice box should have been filled by the defendants and put in a claim for $50. The defence entered a counter claim for $35 alleged due as a result of the plaintiff selling furniture which belonged to them. Judge Huycke gave judgment for the plaintiff for $15 in the first case and gave R. and G. Davis judgment for $15 in the counter claim.

Dr. Gordon Hits Hard at Meeting In Woodstock

Dr. Gordon, who is in Woodstock conducting a campaign similar to that held in Peterboro, has evidently trodden on somebody's corns, as the following letter appeared in the Sentinel-Review:

Editor, Sentinel-Review:

Dear Sir,—In deference to the well-meaning local Christian gentlemen by whose arrangement a reverend gentleman from Winnipeg is just now holding a series of meetings in some of our city churches, I shall offer no comment upon the general character of the reverend gentleman's service.

But I desire to enter an emphatic protest against a wholly unfounded, grossly irreverent and shocking irreverent comment flippantly made by him last night with reference to some of the people of Knox Church. That a perfect stranger, to whom, as he himself admitted, not a single member of Knox Church was known, should gratuitously assume that there were people in Knox church from whom it would be as difficult to extract contributions for missionary or other high purposes as it would be to perform one of the miracles of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, seems to be not merely grossly insulting and impertinent, but absolutely shocking. The more so, when the speaker and the outside financial syndicate of which he is understood to be the spokesman and servant, were enjoying the hospitality of Knox church congregation. Comment under such circumstances seems unnecessary.

May I add that the musical part of the entertainment at these meetings is excellent and wholly unobjectionable. Albert Greenlaw is quite an exceptional singer. Many of his old friends and many new ones have heard him with unalloyed pleasure, and they feel a measure of local pride that he is a product of Woodstock.

Respectfully yours,
ONE NIGHT ONLY.

THE WAR OF THE LILLIPUTIANS AT EMPIRE THEATRE

A special, secured at extra cost for the benefit of school children, students as well as adults.

This is an exceptionally fine instructive play. The dwarf or Lilliputians as they are called, the tallest of whom, only 3 feet, 2½ inches, while the smallest is 22 inches in height, all full grown, live contentedly under the reign of their beloved King Miros in their own little peaceful kingdom.

Princess Piccolina whose engagement to Prince Colibri has been announced is attending a circus performance given in honor of the event to his loyal subjects. At the close of the entertainment the Princess is kidnapped by the soldiers of their neighboring king who are giants. The Lilliputians demand the release of their princess and being refused declare war on the giants. The artillery of the dwarfs soon rent a hole in the wall of the palace of the giants, the infantry charge, and capture the king and release the princess. The dwarfs return to their own country, the wedding taking place in due time and without further trouble from their neighbors the giants.

Saturday afternoon, 5 cents to all, 5 cents.

READING MATTER BEARING ON THE WAR

In a letter to The Review, F. M. Dela Fosse, public librarian, says:

Dear Sir,—I would like to bring to the attention of the public that the library has lately received a considerable amount of reading matter bearing on the war. Some of the material should be especially serviceable for any school debates, as facts are presented in a concrete form and in a way that should be easily intelligible to youthful readers and to such as are not well up in European or world politics.

AN ACT OF GALLANTRY.

The account of an act of gallantry performed by troop-sergeant-major A. B. Lloyd of Llanwrtyd Wells, has been received from Pte. Patrick O'Connell, of Dublin Fusiliers. Sergt. Major Lloyd belongs to the 17th Lancers, known as the "Death or Glory Boys."

"It was at the Aisne, in the trenches," he writes, "Lieut. Feary of the 9th Lancers was about 300 yards away from our trench. We having had the order to retire to the trench we were previously in we jumped down and then on looking back saw Lieut. Feary fall. The shells and bullets were simply raining over us. Sergt.-Major Lloyd jumped up and ran for his dear life and succeeded in reaching Lieut. Feary, brought him back in his arms. The poor fellow dropped just as he reached the trench with about nine bullets in him. Lieut. Feary and Sergt.-Major Lloyd were then taken away to the main body and then to the hospital. After that I was wounded in the leg, and when I arrived at the hospital who should I see but the dear old Sergt-Major, full of life and anxious to get back to the fighting line. Colonel Warlow of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons saw the brave deed done, and the sergt.-major will be recommended for the V.C. and I hope he will get it. They wanted to send him home, but he would not have it."

Arthur Bertram Lloyd, is the youngest son of the late Capt. Penry Lloyd and of Mrs. Penry Lloyd of Ffynonan, and the Bungalow, Victoria Wells, Llanwrtyd Wells. He served through the Boer War.

CHANGING THE TUNE.

One of our officers writes home as follows:—

There has been a big battle going on for the last two days; guns banging all over the place, and many aeroplanes of both nationalities overhead. I hate to see our good fellows brought in wounded, and am only happy in the knowledge that they give back with interest, which I know for a fact to be the case. We had lots of German prisoners here yesterday—poor miserable devils; very young, most of them. On the Aisne rather an amusing incident occurred. The Germans had the insolence to start a band playing the "Wacht am Rhein" in their trenches one night. The Irish Guards, who were in trenches not far away, did not like this, so asked us if we could stop it. We fired four rounds, when we got the following from them: "Many thanks. Music stopped. Meeting hurriedly dispersed." No more bands after that.

A CRUDE LADY BARBER.

Lance-Corporal McCann, motor-driver, writes:—

I had a very amusing experience this morning. My chum and myself, on our chins, went for a shave. Arriving at the shop (which, by the way, was a private house), the chap was out, so the "missus" took on the job. She started by giving my chum, who went first, a basin to hold under his chin, while she wetted his face. She then got hold of about two pounds of ordinary floor-scrubbing soap and scrubbed it hard all over his face. Then picking up the shaving brush began to lather him. After giving him a good feed of soap, she started to use the razor, which pretty nearly pulled his head off. When finished, he had to wash his face in a rain tub outside the house. I asked him if it was all right, and he said it was—but it was not. I had a similar shave to him and well I know it, for I am not going to have another for some time to come. But she made a good job of it, anyway, and once again we are clean little mother's boys. England may well be proud of her Indian army, for they are a magnificent body of men, and shortly I expect they will make the people of England thrill with their deeds.

The New Lord Clarendon

Canada has now an earl among her permanent residents in the person of the new Lord Clarendon, who has just succeeded to the title. The late Earl of Clarendon died recently at his seat, The Grove, Watford, Herts. Lord Clarendon, who was sixty-eight, had a record of long service at Court. He was a lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria. As Lord Chamberlain he was responsible for all the details of the coronation of King Edward. He had been aide-de-camp to King George since 1910. A perfect host and a good sportsman, his shooting parties were famous. An art connoisseur, he enriched the magnificent collection which he inherited, including the copy of the Gobelin tapestry of Raphael's cartoon "The Miraculous Draught of Fishes," presented to his father, the Victorian statesman, by Napoleon III. at the signing of the Treaty of Paris. He was a felicitous and cultured speaker.

Lord Hyde, his only son and heir, who is aged thirty-seven, married a sister of Lord Somers. With their two children they settled in Canada just over two years ago on a farm of over 200 acres at Pickering near Toronto. Lady Hyde said she intended to become a practical farmer's wife and do all the work she possibly could herself.

LONG LINE OF PUBLIC MEN

Hon. T. C. Casgrain, the New P.M.G., Comes of a Distinguished Family.

Few families in Canada enjoy a record of public service superior to that of the distinguished French-Canadian family to which the new Postmaster-General, the Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., belongs. While many of the famous old-time Quebec families have become decadent in these days, the Casgrains have continued to flourish and to grow ever more influential. In the person of the new Cabinet Minister they attain to the highest point of their advancement.

Mr. Casgrain's father, the late Dr. C. E. Casgrain, of Windsor, Ontario, was the first French-Canadian to be elevated to the Senate. He was a medical man of considerable distinction, who occupied a prominent place among his compatriots in the western counties of Ontario. His father in turn was the Hon. C. E. Casgrain, of Riviere-Ouelle, Quebec, who at the time of his death was one of the two Commissioners of Public Works of the Province of Canada. Earlier in life he had been a member of Parliament for Lower Canada.

The Postmaster-General's great-grandfather, Pierre Casgrain, was in early life a coureur de bois, who eventually settled at Riviere-Ouelle, where he purchased a seigniory and became a seigneur and a man of great influence in his part of the country. His father before him, Jean Casgrain, was the founder of the family, who settled in Quebec before the conquest, and did his best to defend the ancient capital against the British in 1750. He had been in his early days a soldier in Europe.

Collateral branches of the family have also contributed notable names to Canadian history. Mr. Casgrain's uncle, P. B. Casgrain, who is still living at an advanced age in Quebec City, was for twenty years M. P. for L'Islet. Oddly enough he is a Liberal, and his son, the Hon. J. S. B. Casgrain, is to-day a Liberal Senator. Another uncle was the famous Abbe Casgrain, the Canadian historian, whose books are well known to students of history.

One of Mr. Casgrain's great aunts married Francois Letellier de St. Just, and was the mother of the Hon. Luc Letellier de St. Just, former Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and another became the wife of the Hon. Phillippe Panet and mother of the late Senator Panet, who was for many years Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence. A sister of his father was married to the late Sir C. A. P. Pelletier, another of the Lieutenant-Governors of Quebec, and her son is Col. Oscar Pelletier, of the Canadian regular military forces. Incidentally there is another gallant soldier in the family, Philippe Henri du Perron Casgrain, who after a brilliant career as an officer of the Royal Engineers resigned his commission to take holy orders. It is now reported that this Abbe Casgrain has again taken up arms for his sovereign in the present crisis.

The circumstance that the Postmaster-General was born in Detroit was probably due to the fact that his grandmother's family, the Babys, has been old residents of that city. His father, when he had completed his medical course at McGill University and had come to the point of securing a place in which to practice, quite naturally was led to choose Detroit, as having a certain appeal through early associations of the Baby family with it. Here he resided for several years, marrying a Detroit girl, Miss Mary Chase, and building up a fair practice. Soon after his eldest son's birth, he returned to Canadian soil, living first in Sandwich and then in Windsor.

The Casgrains have always been noted for brain power, and such of them as attended college invariably stood high in point of scholarship. The new Postmaster-General was no exception. He was sent to Quebec for his education, and there at the Little Seminary and later at Laval University he distinguished himself for his intellectual ability.

He first came into prominence as junior counsel for the Crown in the trial of Louis Riel at Regina in 1885, and later, as Attorney-General of the province, strengthened his position in legal circles. He subsequently sat for two terms at Ottawa, but for the past ten years has devoted himself to his practice in Montreal.—W. A. Craick in Toronto Star Weekly.

Go to Church For News!

Recognising the desirability of promptly acquainting the public with what is taking place on the battlefield in Europe during the present crisis, but deprecating the publication of sensational extra editions of newspapers, the Presbytery of Calgary has approved that Presbyterian ministers who care to do so may announce at their Sunday services authorized war news of importance.

Would Help Canada.

Peter Smirlies, of Grand Rapids, Mich., the millionaire Greek pool room man, while on a business trip to London, Ont., recently declared that throughout Canada and the United States there are 100,000 Greeks who could be easily mobilized to help in the defence of Canada from any invasion of Germans.

FRENCH INFANTRYMEN LYING IN AMBUSH, WAITING FOR SKY SPY TO COME WITHIN RANGE OF THEIR RIFLES!

GERMANS VIOLATE LAW OF NATIONS IN CAPTURED TOWNS

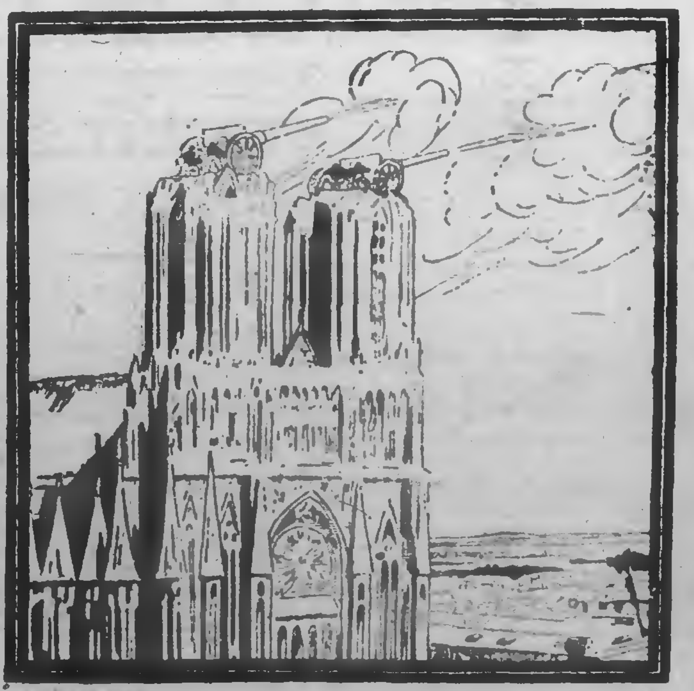
When a conquering army triumphantly marches into a captured town it cannot do just what it likes with the city and its inhabitants. The commander of the invading army is bound by war laws respected by the Powers to recognise the rights of citizens in certain directions.

For instance, he cannot compell the inhabitants to take up arms against a local State or its ally. The power of the commander in this direction stops at obtaining an oath of neutrality from the conquered citizens, which represents a promise not to take part in hostilities against his forces whilst the war lasts. The commander of a conquered city, however, has it in his power to make things very unpleasant for the citizens of the town. He may force them to aid in the building of roads, bridges, railways, telegraphs, or other works, necessary for his military operations, on the ground that these are of general utility to the inhabitants.

An invader cannot or, at least, is not supposed to, levy heavy war fines on a town indiscriminately. His demands must be in keeping with the resources of the city. Such fines are not supposed to be utilized as a means of crippling an enemy financially, or for adding to the war chest of the conquerors.

The Germans seem to consider that anything they care to confiscate is legally theirs when they capture a city. This policy of wholesale looting, however, is against the laws recognized by most of the Great Powers. An invading army should only demand articles actually needed by the troops, such as provisions, forage, clothing, or transport wagons. Articles of luxury, such as cigars, wines, and valuable house decorations cannot be legitimately be confiscated, as they do not represent actual needs of an army.

Formal requisition can be made for such requirements, but they must be paid for in cash, and the transactions must be specified only by the commander of the army in the locality.



"THE MIRACLE OF RHEIMS."

This is a German paper's excuse for the bombardment of Rheims Cathedral. But the days of miracles being past, it is childish to suggest, says the London Mirror, which reproduced the picture, that the French could have mounted big guns on the towers, and it is difficult to imagine any readers of the paper being deceived by such a picture.

OUR ARTISTS NEGLECTED?

John Lane Says Canadian Connoisseurs go to Far Abroad.

Mr. John Lane, the eminent English publisher and connoisseur, who was in Toronto a few days ago, saw most of the private collections of pictures in Toronto and in Montreal, and expressed the greatest admiration of the taste and discernment of Canadian collectors. But there is, he says, one thing lacking in all of them—the work of Canadian artists. Mr. Lane wonders that these native artists, who rank, as a whole, with the modern Dutch school, do not receive more recognition. Such artists as Horatio Walker, Homer Watson, Edmund Morris, Gagnon, William Brymner, and James Frazer, have no peers in their own field.

Mr. Lane visited the galleries of Sir William Van Horne, Lady Drummond, and Mrs. Angus, in Montreal, and of Sir Edmund Walker, Sir Edmund Osler, Mrs. Timothy Eaton, Mr. D. R. Wilkie, and Mr. Chester D. Massey, in Toronto.

"These connoisseurs have fine representative collections of the modern Dutch and French schools," said Mr. Lane. "There is a sprinkling of the work of British artists, such as Hornel, McTaggart, Swan, Melville, and Lavery. I was somewhat disappointed at not finding more of the British school, and so few pictures of Canadian artists. One would like to see the same appreciation of Canadian art as Canadians show to their great humorist, Prof. Stephen Leacock."

Speaking of Leacock, Mr. Lane said that perhaps the professor's early recognition in Canada might be due to his endorsement by England and America!

Mr. Lane has noticed a great increase in Canada's demand for English books. There has been an awakening in this country's interest in the life and letters of England and Europe, and not only English fiction, but English biography and English essays and political writings are being called for in surprising numbers.

Just at present, fewer serious books are being published owing to the sudden demand for books relating to the war in all its phases. Books that have long lain dead, books of obscure modern history and diplomacy, of description of the various countries involved in war, are being revived. One volume that was suppressed by the Kaiser, and which had a doubtful popularity ten years ago — "Life in a Garrison Town," by Lieut. Bilse — is now receiving world-wide interest, as being a true picture of military and civilian life in Germany under the military regime. Books like "The Iron Year" and "When William Came," novels that had indifferent success heretofore, are now among the "best sellers." "It is interesting to note," said Mr. Lane, "that the most notable contribution to serious literature this year is the work of a Canadian, the study of the economic history of Russia by Prof. James Mavor, of the University of Toronto.

THE KAISER'S INCOME WAR LORD WEALTHY

Thanks to the advice of financiers who, for obvious reasons, he admitted to his friendship, the Kaiser's private fortune has increased to such an extent of late years that it was estimated a short time ago by the eminent German authority, Herr Rudolph Martin, that he is easily the richest man in Germany, having an annual income of $5,000,000 derived from possessions valued at approximately $100,000,000.

Apart from the Kaiser's fortune, his son, the Crown Prince, has a separate income of $250,000, drawn from property valued at nearly $5,000,000, while the Kaiser's brother, Prince Henry, enjoys some $150,000 a year on account of an estate worth $2,500,000.

The Kaiser's fortune has been mainly built up by investments in many businesses. He has some very large holdings in the big German steamship lines, is extensively interested in the diamond mine enterprises of German West Africa, owns forests and lands to the value of $18,000,000, carries on a large lumber business, and has a horse-breeding establishment in Western Prussia which brings him in a handsome revenue. Furthermore, he is interested in other smaller enterprises.

Altogether the Kaiser owns about forty castles and country houses, valued at $10,000,000, and various property in Berlin, approximately worth $5,000,000. In seven different provinces he owns seventy-four estates comprising close on half a million acres.

It is interesting to note that ever since Germany began to make preparations for a great war the Kaiser has been investing immense sums of money on the other side of the Atlantic. He is one of the largest land owners in the Western States—not in his own name, of course—and owns a considerable section of property in British Columbia. So notorious is the fact that it was at one time a standing joke at Vancouver that, although the Kaiser was a large owner of property in a certain district, he declined to join the local ratepayers' association, which would have been materially assisted in its propaganda by the use of his name.

Origin of Canada's Name

There is a great deal of dispute as to how Canada came to get its name, but many are disposed to the belief that Canada is a perverted Spanish phrase. The Spaniards visited here previous to the French and made search for gold and silver, and, finding none, they often said amongst themselves, "Aca nada," meaning, "There is nothing here."

The Indians, who watched closely, learned this sentence and its meaning. Then came the French, and the Indians, who did not want them, supposing they had come on the same mission as the Spanish, kept pouring into their ears the Spanish sentence, "Aca nada." The French, who knew as little of the Spanish language as they, supposed that the incessently recurring sound was the name of the country, and ultimately christened it Canada, which it has borne ever since.

McGill To Pass Soldier Boys.

Following the example of several of the English universities, the faculty of arts at McGill will grant degrees to fourth year students who enlist with the Canadian expeditionary forces before the conclusion of the present college term. Students of the first, second and third years will be given credit for a full term academic work. On their return they will be admitted to the class immediately above that in which they were enrolled previously to their enlisting.

Great Modern Guns

Tremendous Rain of Steel Fired From the Largest Guns.

Most wars produce an armament surprise of one kind or another. In the present case it is the colossal siege guns of the Germans. Never before has there been known a movable arm so immense. One report states that the German guns are of a type of 17-inch howitzer, weighing about fifty or sixty tons. Another states that they are only 11-inch howitzers, but even these fire a shell of 700 pounds weight containing high explosive. Such a shell will pierce 8 inches of steel. Imagine, then, the devastation that could be wrought with the shells of 17-inch weapons. What wonder that four discharges only are said to have annihilated one of the great forts at Namur. The Germans are said to have, or to have had, fifty of these 17-inch siege guns. Their range is about six miles, but it is stated that they can fire only twenty times each.

The British navy has now 15-inch guns which weigh ninety-six tons and fire a shell of 1,950 pounds weight. A broadside of the Royal Sovereign weighs no less than 17,200 pounds—about eight tons and a half.

Ten lemon-soles (a fisherman's offering to a Lowestoft auction on behalf of the Belgian Refugees' Fund) were sold again and again until the figure of $420 had been reached.

TALE OF AN ARCTIC WALK

Captain Bartlett Describes Tramp Over The Ice.

After a bitter experience in the northern wastes, nine survivors of the Canadian Arctic expedition, which left Esquimalt in June, 1913, arrived a few days ago at Victoria, B. C. They were brought from Nome, Alaska, on the United States revenue cutter Bear. The party was headed by Captain Robert A. Bartlett, the famous explorer.

Eight of the exploration party were lost on the journey from the point where their ship Karluk was crushed by the ice to Wrangel Island, and three died in camp at the island, one from an accident.

Captain Bartlett told the story of the Karluk's last voyage in bare facts. Relating a few of the obstacles he had to overcome on his tramp across the ice from Wrangel Island to Emma Harbor, Siberia, he dismissed most questions as to his perils with a nonchalant "Well, it's all in the day's work."

Realizing that help must be summoned from somewhere or the entire party on Wrangel Island would succumb through starvation, Captain Bartlett decided to set out on a walk which would bring him to the outside world. He knew the journey meant terrible hardships and possibly death.

"On March 18," he said, "I left the camp with an Eskimo boy, Kattovick, seven dogs and a sledge made by Mr. Hadley, the exact copy of a sledge used by Peary in his trips. We had supplies for ourselves and dogs for thirty-eight days. I intended to get to East Cape, Siberia. We had difficulty in crossing the strait which separates Wrangell Island from the mainland, the air line distance being 100 miles.

"I thought when I left the island that I would make it in seven days, but strong easterly and westerly gales and the moving ice retarded our progress. As we neared the Siberian coast we had considerable difficulty with the rafted ice and deep, soft snow.

"On one occasion I was seventeen days making a distance of 90 miles. In some places the young ice was barely strong enough to support our sledge, and the ice would not support us in walking, so we had to cross it by lying flat on our stomachs and crawling across. Owing to the hardship of the journey several of my dogs gave out completely, and my native boy showed signs of losing his nerve.

"Early one morning I sighted land and hoped to reach it that evening. On seeing the land Kattovick became very active. More leads were encountered during the day, and I had to spend another night on the ice. The next day northerly winds set in and raftered the ice up on the Siberian shore. By working hard all day we managed to reach North Cape, Siberia.

"I saw no signs of habitation, so we camped for the night. The next morning we started along the Siberian coast for East Cape. One lone igloo was sighted, and we went in. In the ice hut I found a Siberian native, his wife and one child.

"I came across the first white man at Koluchin Bay. He made both of us at home, and we got considerable bread and tea. Being in need of a couple of good dogs I traded my binoculars to a native for two huskies. At Cape Serdze, Siberia, I met a trader who, after taking us in and feeding us, assisted us in getting to East Cape.

"Both Kattovick and myself were beginning to feel the effects of our hardships. My legs were swelling, and at times I experienced difficulty in walking. After more hardships I reached East Cape and there met an English trader. It was here that I met Baron Kliest, the Russian district commissioner for that part of Siberia.

"The baron offered to take me to Emma Harbor, Siberia, where his headquarters were located.

"The whaler Herman reached Emma Harbor during the latter part of May, and I immediately made arrangements to have the whaler take me to Nome, Alaska. When we arrived off Nome the roadstead was blocked with ice, so we headed for St. Michael.

"Ariving there, I was still suffering from swollen legs and feet, and my eyes also were giving me trouble. After notifying the Canadian Government by telegraph I received medical attention. In a week's time I had nearly recovered from my illness.

"While I was recuperating at St. Michael the cutter Bear arrived on June 5. She reached Nome Aug. 30. Four days later we started out on our second attempt to rescue the men at Wrangel Island.

"On Sept. 8, we met the schooner King and Wing, and she informed us that she had the eight survivors from Wrangel Island on board. The men were transferred to the Bear in order to receive medical attention. We then returned to Nome."

New Postoffices.

One hundred and eight new postoffices were established in Canada in August, September and October. By provinces these were as follows: Saskatchewan 28, British Columbia 18, Alberta 15, Quebec 15, Manitoba 13, Ontario 8, New Brunswick 6, Nova Scotia 4, and Yukon 1.

"Like Father Like Son"

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"Yer green sweater? Now, l'ave me think a minute, dearie. Sure, I've had me eyes on ut somewheres lately. Take a look in the cellar stairway. I've a mind ye'll find ut hangin' on wan av the pegs there."

"Yep; here it is, covered up be three aprons and a bag av clothespins," said he, turning back to the spotless kitchen while he drew the sweater over his big shoulders.

Mary Mooney ran an appraising eye up and down her son's stalwart figure. She did it not without a certain quiet pride.

"Ye sure do be lookin' very fit, Eddie," said she.

"And fit I am, mama," he returned lightly. "Never was I fitter in my life."

Doubling his right fist, he slowly bent his right arm until the biceps made a great curving swelling beneath the sleeve of the green sweater.

"The things I'll be doin' to that Doheeny guy at the South armory a coupla hours from now!" he threatened, laughing.

"That's the way to talk," said his mother approvingly. "'Tis yer first real bona fide fight. Yer must make good, Eddie. Don't forget that yer father was Cal Mooney, the best fighter of his weight that ever lived, so the papers was always tellin' time and time ag'in."

Again Eddie laughed. He stooped to run his fingers caressingly through her sparse gray hair, a trick he had had since childhood.

"Here's Flicker Shea now in the taxi they've sent for me. So it's off wit' me right away. Goodby, muma. Think of how me name'll be spread headed in the mornin' papers like the old man's used to be often."

He kissed her again.

"Hello, Flicker!" Young Mooney addressed the stoop shouldered man waiting on the steps outside. "The taxi's all ready. Then l'ave us be off!"

They went down the steps to the waiting taxi and climbed in.

"The South armory," Flicker instructed the chauffeur, and the car lurched away from the curb.

Eddie leaned across the portly figure of Flicker Shea to wave a hand to his mother.

"Old lady's strong for yer, son, ain't she?" he observed to the younger man beside him.

"Uh-huh!" he grunted shortly without turning his eyes to his companion. "Fact is, Flicker, if she wa'n't quite so strong"—

He paused.

"Well, what?" Flicker prompted after a patient period of silence.

"If she wa'n't quite so strong for me, if she wa'n't quite so set on me doin' this and upholdin' the fame that the old man brought to the name yer wouldn't never catch me foolin' wit' no crooked game like this."

"Wot?" he gurgled in bewilderment, as if he could not credit his ears.

"If it wa'n't for her I wouldn't have nothin' to do wit' this game," Eddie repeated.

"Shame on yer!" hissed Flicker dramatically. "A man wit' yer build and yer speed and the blood of Cal Mooney in yer veins too! Fie!"

"'Tis true," said Eddie doggedly. "I'd ruther work in a foundry or dig in a ditch or do anything useful. But she thinks it's the finest game in the world. She has always been eggin' me on to it ever since I was a kid. I can see it now. She wants me to folly in the old man's footsteps and get famous and wrote about in the papers and all that.

"And so, because she's lookin' for it and because it would be sorter slingin' mud at the old man's memory if I didn't, I'm goin' to make good!"

Mr. Shea, being neither of facile nor analytical mind, puckered his bushy brows as he pondered those words. He was still puckering them when their equipage drew up before the South armory.

As the taxi came to a sputtering stop he placed one pudgy hand on Mooney's shoulder.

"Say, Eddie," he said thickly, "ye're in wrong. Yer won't never be makin' no headway wit' nothin' like that on yer mind. I never yet see a felly make good at anything that his whole heart wa'n't in, and if yer whole heart ain't in this"—

"Can it," said Eddie very crisply. "Even if me heart ain't in this thing I've got a blamed good substitute for it. It's what she's lookin' for and expectin' me to do. And yer'd better forget what I've just said to yer—see?"

"All right! I ain't never heard it, Eddie," Flicker declared magnanimously. "Come on in! We ain't none too early. Better hustle into yer ring duds. No use keepin' a bunch waitin'."

It was after 11 that evening when the taxi again came purring into the little street of the wooden tenements and stopped before the particular one which Cal Mooney's savings had bought some years ago.

Eddie Mooney got wearily out, said good night to Flicker Shea lounging on the cushions within and stood watching the cab as it spun about and went chugging up the street.

All in all, young Mr. Mooney was not a pleasing presence as he stood there under the flickering light of the street lamp.

But there was something like a grim smile on Mooney's battered features as he drew out his bunch of jangling keys, selected his latchkey and climbed the steps to the little stoop.

Before he could insert the latchkey in the lock, however, the front door flew open.

"Oh, Eddie!" cried Mary Mooney, both her arms about her big son. "It seemed as if ye was never comin'."

Gently Eddie disengaged himself.

"Come into the parley," he said somberly, leading the way into the very ornate little front room and touching a match to the gas jet.

"Eddie," she cried with sudden anxiety, catching sight of his battered features in the light with which the room was flooded as one after another he lighted all the jets in the little chandelier, "ye've been hurted!"

Eddie said nothing. Slowly he turned about that she might get the full effect of his sadly damaged face.

She came a trembling step nearer to him. Her thin hands were clasped tightly together. A light, pitying, compassionate anger flamed in her eyes.

"Ye've—ye've," came her faltering tones, "been licked!"

"And what if I have?" he said shortly, almost sullenly.

His mother stood looking fixedly at his big frame, and in her eyes, much to his surprise, was neither the anger nor the disgust nor the disappointment he had expected.

Then, with a little choking cry, she flew to him. She forced him gently down into a big, gaudy rocker of yellow brocaded plush. She bent over him, gathering his head in both her arms, pressing it close to her, mothering him as if he were some tired and hurt and disillusioned little child.

"Oh, Eddie! Oh, Eddie!" she said over and over. "Oh, I'm so sorry for ye, ye poor, poor b'y—so sorry, dearie, so sorry! But for me own sake, Eddie, I'm glad, glad—oh, so glad!"

"Huh!" Mooney managed finally to gurgle, all but speechless with astonishment.

"Mind how sorry I am for ye, dearie, won't ye?" she went on hurriedly. "For I am sorry for the cruel, bitter disappointment that this'll be to yer. But ye'll soon get over that, and if ye was licked this bad in yer very first fight ye won't be kapin' on wit' the game, will yer? And that's what makes me so glad.

"I never wanted yer to be a fighter like yer fa-ather was, but he was set on ut. He was forever talkin' about the fine build of yer and the speed of yer and the clever way yer could handle yerself even when yer was nothin' but a tiny kid. He was always dreamin' about the great name yer'd be makin' for yerself in the ring when yer grew up, a name that was to put his own clane in the shade, accordin' to his way of thinkin'.

"And when his time come he called me to him just before he dies and 'Mary,' says he, 'make me wan promise,' says he. 'Promise me ye'll never stand in Eddie's way, and if he wants to go into the ring when he grows up promise me ye'll be to him what ye've always been to me in that way—that ye'll stand behind him and cheer him on and encourage him, like ye've always done for me.'

"So I promised, and, though ut near broke me heart when ye first began to do yer boxin' at the clubs and yer name got talked around as Cal Mooney's clever son and a comer in the game, I remembered the promise I'd made yer fa-ather, and I stood by ut and kep' a smilin' face to yer to cheer yer on even though the heart av me was like lead within me. But now ye won't want to be fightin' anny more—not after this, will yer, Eddie?"

Eddie Mooney suddenly jumped to his feet. He caught his mother by the shoulders and gently held her off at arm's length.

He pretended to be looking at her very sternly and accusingly, but even on his bruised and battered face there was no mistaking the look of infinite relief that rested there.

"Muma," he said, with mock severity, "do yer mean to tell me you'd like me just as well—me, the son of Cal Mooney, that was the greatest fighter of his weight that ever lived—if I worked in a foundry or took the job that Spillane, the contractor, offered me awhile back—a job at the bottom, diggin' in a ditch?"

"Do yer mane," she asked, with tremulous eagerness, "that ye are goin' to give ut up and do somethin' like that? Oh, the thought of ut makes me so happy, Eddie, so happy!"

"Then listen to me for a minute," said he. "Tomorrer I'll see Spillane and take the job. Spillane was one of the best friends the old man ever had, and, what's more, he's strong for me. I'll have to start at the bottom, but he'll put me up the line just as fast as I make good. Now I'm goin' to bed."

"L'ave me fix yer cheek and that poor eye for yer before yer go," said she.

"Aw, them little welts don't amount to nothin' at all," said he.

"And, Eddie," she pleaded, clutching his sleeve as he made as if to leave the room, "don't take this thing too hard. Maybe now 'tis all for the best. Maybe ut was meant"—

He turned to her with a smile. Once more he exercised that childhood trick of his—running his fingers gently through her hair, rumpling it softly and smiling down at her the while.

"Of course it's all for the best, muma," he chuckled. "And as for takin' it too hard, don't let that bother yer for a minute. Yer see, I knocked out Doheeny in the tenth round down to the South armory tonight."

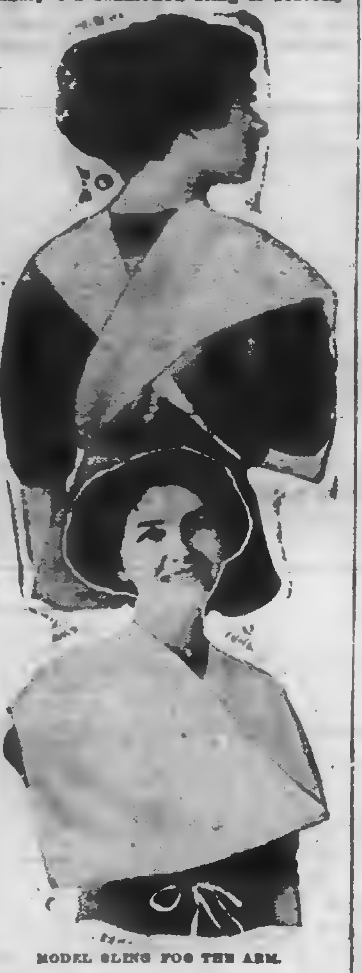
SAFE AND SANE WAY TO BANDAGE AN ARM.

We may not all be Florence Nightingales and go off to the wars to minister to the wounded and the dying, but there are many helpful things that may be accomplished at home.

If you do not believe it study the picture, which shows how a broken arm may be swung to the body by means of a sling that is both comfortable and firm.

Miss Lily H. Gilson of Montclair, N. J., recently devised the sling to meet the requirements of a sister who suffered from a broken arm. The ordinary old fashioned sling is scarcely comfortable, and it has a nasty way of slipping, so Miss Gilson put on her thinking cap and invented a sling for her sister which would overcome these difficulties. The sling is of one thickness of heavy white material hemmed along the edges. Where widest it is cut the length of the arm from finger tips to elbow. It is sewed up at the elbow and finger ends so that the elbow and hand may rest in a case that prevents the arm from slipping.



MODEL SLING FOR THE ARM.

The back of the bandage is narrowed to a point where tapes are attached. It is crossed over in the back and tied firmly about the waist by means of the tapes.

The convenience and comfort of this arrangement are so great that it received the hearty commendation of the surgeon attending the sister. Medical friends praised it and suggested to Miss Gilson that her clever invention might be of great service to the wounded in the great European war, and with true philanthropy she submitted her idea to the Red Cross society, authorizing the organization to make any use of it that it saw fit.

New Pension Act Likely.

Next session of Parliament will see a new pension act passed. The Pension Act now in force has been found inadequate to meet the conditions resulting from the present war. The Cabinet and the militia council have indicated the amounts which will be paid to the widows and families of those who lose their lives in active service and also to disabled soldiers.

Larger pensions will be paid than the Imperial Government allows. It is expected that at the very least it will be 50 per cent. of the soldier's pay for the widow and extra for children and dependents, whereas in Great Britain it is only three-tenths. This is the amount paid by the Imperial Government to widows of Canadians who lost their lives in the South African war.

The pensions following upon casualties to volunteers in active service will be dealt with in a special act, but pensions for those in the permanent force and members of the militia department will be dealt with in the civil service pension bill which will come up next session.

A Chaste Compliment.

The late Chief Justice Chase was noted for his gallantry. While on a visit to the south shortly after the war he was introduced to a very beautiful woman who prided herself upon her devotion to the "lost cause." Anxious that the chief justice should know her sentiments, she remarked as she gave him her hand, "Mr. Chase, you see before you a rebel who has not been reconstructed."

"Madam," he replied with a profound bow, "reconstruction in your case would be blasphemous."—Everybody's Magazine.

A Rare Product.

"Do you believe in the supernatural?"
I asked of the genius who Directs and shapes the play and tells
The actors what to do,
And he answered, "Though I've spent my life
In the theater, I regret
To say I have never, never seen
A 'super' natural yet."

Keeping Up Appearances.

Husband (suddenly waking up at dead of night)—What in the world was that noise?

Wife (calmly)—It's all right, dear. The guests of the Moneybags' ball are just coming home, and I slipped down and gave our front door a slam so the neighbors would think we were there.—New York Journal.

Sensible Fellow.

"Are you fond of realism?"

"Yes."

"I thought I heard you raving over the beauties of an inland lake in rather a slushy fashion the other day."

"It's like this: I am fond of realism in literature. Only there do I care for the real rub. In actual affairs I like them tuned to the ideal."

Subject For Extras.

"I want to check three trunks," said the proprietor of the traveling menagerie.

"Where are they?" asked the polite baggageman.

"Out there by the platform. You will know them because each one has an elephant attached."

Innocent.

"You've seen a game of baseball?"

"Of course I have."

"How do they play it?"

"How do they play it? They sit in the parlor and wiggle their thumbs to the music of a jewsharp."

Beyond Him.

"How do you like strictly fresh eggs?"

"Well, I hardly know. You see, I live in a boarding house, and I never have had a chance to taste one. I suppose they are all right."

Never.

"I hate to do things."

"What of that?"

"They don't reciprocate."

"Don't understand."

"All sorts of things do me."

Mountains.

"Don't worry over trifles."

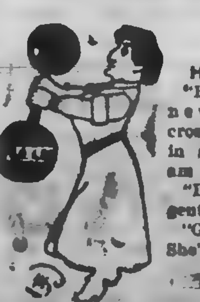
"I don't."

"No?"

"No. They aren't trifles when I get to worrying over them."

How He Found It.

The flying man a mishap had.
His engine went amiss.
He murmured as they picked him up,
"A hard old world is this."

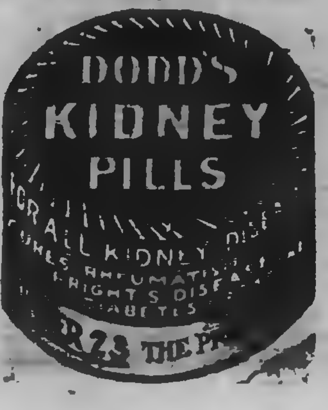


He Knew Her.

"He says he never spoke a cross word to her in all his life. I am not surprised."

"He is very gentle, I suppose."

"Gentle nothing. She's an athlete."



Canada Life Service

The Canada Life management studies to extend and broaden its service to the policyholders, while constantly aiming at increased efficiency. The Company is quick to adopt any measure which will promote either.

An Example of Canada Life Usefulness

By means of an annual deposit with the Company, a man may now arrange that in the event of his death his wife, or other dependent, will at once enter on an income of, say, $50 per month. This sum is beyond the reach of poor investments and is absolutely assured to her for life—or for a minimum of 240 payments to the estate should the beneficiary die. The amount of the guaranteed monthly payment may be adjusted to suit the means of the assured.

This is the ideal provision in that it furnishes a guaranteed income for life, payable every month. As it may be provided through moderate annual payments to the Company, it is within the reach of every business man.

PUTTING A VALUE ON TEARS.

A Dicker In Cows Which Shows What a Man Will Do For Money.

Innocently the two old fellows looked at each other as they chatted in the busy market place, talking of potatoes, turnips and agricultural affairs in general.

And then, as if it had just occurred to him, old Pontin asked Steele if he still felt inclined to sell that Shorthorn cow.

"Will you take $60 for her?" he suggested offhandedly.

"No, no," murmured Steele stoically as he lovingly fingered his watch chain. "Couldn't by a long way."

"Oh, but I thought you said last market day as how you might let her go for that," suggested Pontin.

"Maybe. But something's happened to her since then."

"She isn't dead?" said the prospective buyer, looking up quickly.

"No, but the missus, she's dead set on that cow. She'd sob her eyes out."

"Um! Suppose that ends it, then?" said Pontin, as he prepared to move along.

"Well, I don't know. Look here, Pont, make it $65, and let the missus sob!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Various Graces For Various Places.

"Of course," said the young husband who is trying to be humble and take instructions, "I'll admit that my ballroom and reception manners are pretty broad gauge and fortissimo."

"They are," she commented.

"But let me tell you one thing."

"What's that?"

Just Like a Man.

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

Motor cars have perhaps deprived war of much of its picturesqueness, but they have undeniably added to its speed.

Two little shoes, found in the pockets of a mortally wounded Belgian soldier, have touched the heart-strings of the nurses, attendants and physicians in the French hospital, where he lies at the point of death.

The story of the shoes is a heart-stirring one. With a letter they were found in this Belgian soldier's pocket. The letter was addressed to his wife, from whom he had been separated since the destruction of Termonde, their home.

In tender words he penned the message, stating that he was enclosing a pair of shoes (hanging at the head of his hospital cot) for their three-year-old baby with the money he had earned as a scout in King Albert's army.

The tenderness of the letter and the mute pathos of the little shoes have moved every one in the hospital to employ every known agency of skill, science and hard work to snatch the brave soldier from the pathway of the "Grim Reaper," and restore him, if possible, to his little family.

DIVORCE IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Eastern Province Can Deal With Cases Independent of Government.

Recently a number of applications for divorce in New Brunswick were disposed of by the Judge of the Divorce Court of that Province. Such cases may come up there at any time, and as a matter of fact they do occur with considerable frequency, says The Toronto Globe. There is no divorce court in either Ontario or Quebec, and all applications for divorce in either of these Provinces must be made to the Dominion Parliament, which can grant relief only by enacting a private statute dealing with an individual case.

The explanation of this anomalous state of affairs is that New Brunswick had a divorce court in operation before she became part of the Dominion of Canada in 1867. In the British North America Act it was provided that "all laws in force in Canada, Nova Scotia, or New Brunswick at the union, and all courts of civil and criminal jurisdiction, and all legal commissions, powers, and authorities, and all offices, judicial, administrative, and Ministerial, existing therein at the union, shall continue in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, respectively, as if the union had not been made." Provision was made also for the repeal of such laws and the abolition or alteration of such courts by either the Dominion Parliament or a Provincial Legislature.

MACHINE PICKS POULTRY

A machine for picking poultry has been invented which possesses many admirable features, chief of which is that it does not require an operator to hold the fowl against the pickers. The fowls are attached to a belt which travels through the machine, and the picking is done automatically. The endless belt on which the fowls are hung passes upward through the picking chamber. Within the latter are two types of pickers. The lower pickers consist of a tubular member with a picking comb, flexibly connected with a tubular spindle which passes through a frame arranged within the picking chamber. The picker may be moved out of its normal position in any direction required by the passage of the fowl through the chamber. The feathers and down on the fowl are grasped between the folds of a bellows and pulled off as the fowl is fed upward by the belt. Suction through a slot serves to hold the feathers fast to the pickers and causes them to be torn from the fowl. Immediately thereafter a supply of compressed air passes through the picker, causing it to release the feathers which are then blown out of the top of the chamber by means of a continuous draught of compressed air.

But there's a limit, you'll admit,

Just spring.

There may be other things as nice
If pushed, I would allow.
But I can't think of anything
To equal it just now.
I'd like to see the snow banks rise
And for the north take wing.
That we might have in place of them
Just spring.

Oh, joyous days of daffodils
And so forth without end,
Come in a hurry, if you can,
And you will find a friend.
Your praises in the choicest words
Most gladly I will sing.
Come, cunning, sweet affinity—
Just spring.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

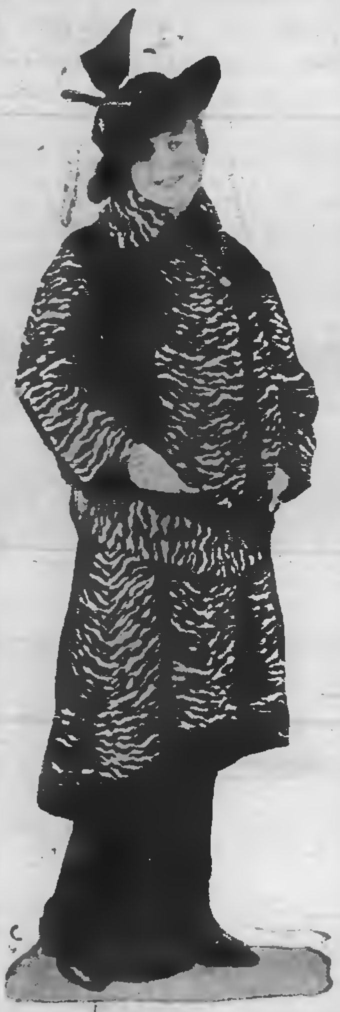
BARBARIC ELEGANCE.

Milady Wears the Skin of the King of the Jungle.



TIGER SKIN COAT.

Barbaric elegance is suggested by the very smart coat of tiger skin here pictured. The high collar, wide belt and sloped line of the wrap are all on the most advanced lines.

Fur and velvet coats are of voluminous proportions. The long fur coat is always more interesting in appearance than the short one. And the early models, with wide, flaring skirts, often edged with a contrasting fur, are especially luxurious looking.

Some of the new evening cloaks are made of velvet or velours and are cut on very generous lines.

HARMONIOUS COLOR SCHEMES

In Working These Out a Pretty Rug Gives Charm to the Barest Room.

Every room in the house should have a color scheme, walls, hangings, furniture, carpets or rugs so harmonizing as to give a delightful and restful effect. Whatever this color scheme may be, a good rug is a crowning point of beauty, adding a charm to the barest room which nothing else can give.

Oriental rugs are most popular and wear better than any, the price varying according to size and design. And, though rather expensive, they are not out of reach of the average moderate income, for, once purchased, they will wear for years and years. Deal with a firm of good repute that can show selections of various kinds and guarantee the wear of each.

Japanese rugs can be bought in charming shades to tone with almost any color. For bedrooms they are particularly suitable, either in color combined with white or in the one tone color now so much in demand. The Japanese jute rugs come in handy for laying in front of washstands or for use out of doors. They are cheap, but do not wear as well, as the edges fray rather easily.

MENNONITES IN WEST ARE THRIFTY SETTLERS

Persevering People Who Overcome all Difficulties—Moved a Whole Town Piecemeal.

Though most of the Mennonites in Western Canada came from Russia, where their people had lived for nearly a hundred years, they still speak German. Very few understood or spoke Russian and when they migrated to Canada it was on an understanding with the Government that they should have their own schools and enjoy the use of their own language. Only within the last few years, has the Union Jack floated over their schools. The neglect to raise the flag, however, was due not to any disloyalty; it arose entirely from their anti-militarist principles, says "G. H. B.," writing in Church Life.

The Mennonites went to Western Canada in the early '70's and settled on a reserve set apart for them in the valley of the Red River. Some ten years later these colonists were brought to the verge of ruin by a disastrous flood. The waters of the Red River rose to such a height that their farms were inundated, their buildings swept away and their cattle and horses drowned. A Benevolent Trust, however, in existence among their brethren elsewhere, in co-operation with the Government, helped the majority of the stricken settlers to take up farms in a new district to the southwest of the former holdings. Here by thrift and hard work they prospered exceedingly and their numbers grew. This increase of population, with the arrival of many new Mennonite immigrants, led to the formation of colonies further west. Representatives were sent to choose suitable locations and the care with which this was done is shown by the fact that on one occasion nearly two years was spent on this task. Once established they rarely leave the farms they have chosen.

Some years ago a number of them settled in a district of British Columbia with newcomers of other nationalities. The difficulty of clearing the land and meanwhile supplying the necessities of life was immense. Overcome by hardship and disappointment, almost all the other settlers gave up in despair, while the Mennonites persevered and are to-day enjoying a very considerable prosperity.

Such success, enjoyed by all their colonies, is due largely to their thrift and frugality. In early days their stoves were made of baked clay mixed with straw and their fuel consisted of straw or hay and dried manure. The same qualities were shown in the use made of the buildings from a deserted town in southern Manitoba. This place had enjoyed great prosperity as a gateway of communication with the outer world. With the building of the railway, however, its advantage of location disappeared and it was, to a large extent, forsaken by its population. The Mennonites soon saw their opportunity. They bought the buildings for a fraction of their value and as they had not the appliances to move the house bodily, they did it piecemeal. With a huge saw they first cut the building into halves from the ridge of the roof to the ground; they then divided them into sections by transverse cuts running all round the buildings. Where it was necessary to tear these sections apart, the protruding nails were carefully drawn and saved. Everything, to the last scrap, was then loaded on wagons and carried away to be re-erected in their villages, where many of the original buildings can be seen with the joints where the sections were put together still visible.

In these villages the farmers have their homes and thus enjoy a social life with their neighbors that is difficult, if not impossible, with the isolated farm houses of other communities. Their original homes were long, low buildings with the entrance at one end and a door at the other leading into the stable. The stable is an important factor in their lives, as the Mennonites are famous for their success in breeding horses and cattle. It is interesting to note that from the first this peculiar people have engaged in the mixed farming that has of recent years been strongly advocated by our leading agriculturists as more advantageous than exclusive growing of wheat.

TIMBER WEALTH ON COAST

Rich Limits in British Columbia Acquired by United States Firm

It is reported that timber limits extending over 115 square miles along the foreshore of Seymour Inlet and adjacent waters in British Columbia, including 3,000,000,000 feet of high grade cedar, were recently transferred to a syndicate of capitalists from the United States. It is said to be the intention of the purchasers to begin logging operations on the limits in the near future, and the plane contemplate placing several sawmills on the property. The scarcity of cedar and the increasing price of high grade timber in the United States have caused American millmen to turn their attention to British Columbia, which has the largest compact area of merchantable timber on the continent. The abolition of the duty on Canadian shingles and other forest products has encouraged and given impetus to the shingle industry, which has made great progress in the province recently.—Canadian Engineer.

LANGUAGES OF THE WORLD

How many persons, if asked how many languages there were in the world, could give anything like an accurate answer?

It may appear an exaggerated statement, but it is nevertheless true that there are over four thousand languages spoken by mankind, while the number of dialects exceeds this. There are more than sixty vocabularies in Brazil, and in Mexico the Nahua is broken up into some seven hundred dialects. There are hundreds in Borneo, while in Australia there is no classifying the complexions. Let us assume that fifty dialects on an average belong to each language, and we have the colossal total of a quarter of a million linguistic abilities.

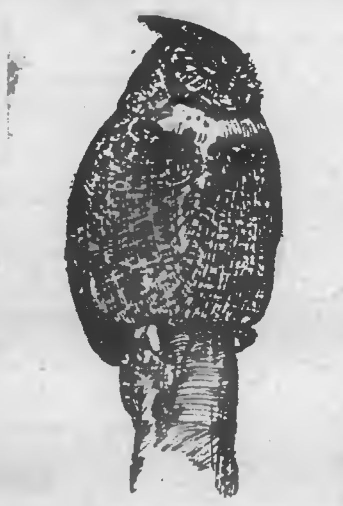
AN UNPOPULAR BIRD

His Dismal Hoot and Sneaky Ways Make Enemies For Him

Nobody loves the great horned owl. Even the good little children who promise to love each living thing forget their good intentions when they hear the hoot of the owl, and they act just like other children and throw sticks and stones at the ugly creature.

Even the squirrels and birds have no love for the owl, and birds have been known to band together and mob the drowsy old chap who keeps them awake nights with his "too-who-to-wit."

The owl can blame no one but himself for his lack of friends. He sleeps all day and goes roaming about at night singing his dismal song, and he lives in old houses and barns or in the darkest hollows in the woods. He has a sneaky way, too, of moving without making noise with his wings or feet, and he's very apt to frighten birds as well as men when he comes on them unexpectedly in the dark.



Some day, maybe, the foolish bird will see the error of his ways and change them and give everyone a chance to get acquainted with him and perhaps to like him and treat him as all birds should be treated, with gentleness and kindness.

Compromise Report.

At one time a great many years ago so much counterfeit money was in circulation that business men found it advantageous to use a counterfeit banknote detector.

A storekeeper in a Nova Scotian village came into possession of a banknote which he strongly suspected to be counterfeit, so he sent it to a nearby city in charge of an old stage driver for examination.

On two successive trips the old fellow forgot this particular errand. A third time he was charged with it in terms unmistakably strong. Again he forgot. Fearing to confess his carelessness, he resolved to brave it out somehow.

"Well," said the storekeeper anxiously, "did they say it was a bad bill?"

"Why, no," responded the stage driver deliberately, "not exactly."

"Not exactly?" ejaculated the other. "What do you mean? Was it good?"

"No, not exactly that either," and the old man brightened a little. "They said they guessed it was 'bout middlin'."

Unsophisticated.

"He must be a kind hearted man."

"Think so?"

"Well, I just judged from fragments of his conversation that I heard last night that he has taken one of his aunties to raise."

The New Definition.

"It is a poor rule that won't work both ways."

"No?"

"Not by any means. It is a poor rule that won't efface itself when desirable."

Queer.

"It is funny."

"What is?"

"A man never knows it when he has a good wife, but when he has a poor one he finds it out mighty quick."

Out of Sight.

"He has a large bump of selfishness all right."

"Where is that located?"

"In the hip pocket in his case."

Aggravating.

For the Children

Master Possum Is a Queer Little Beast.

One of the queerest animals that have their home in the United States is the opossum, usually abbreviated to possum in the southern part of the country, where he is best known. He is the only member of the marsupial family known outside of Australia, although there are many species of his family in Central and South America. The possum as we know him is about the size of a cat. His head is long, muzzle pointed, and he has a long prehensile tail. That is the little animal that can use his tail as a sort of fifth foot. He is able to grasp the limb of a tree with it and frequently hangs from it suspended head down. The flesh of the possum is considered a delicacy in the southern states, where it is baked and eaten with roasted sweet potatoes. One of the peculiar things about the possum is that when threatened with harm he pretends to be dead. The expression "playing possum" comes from this trait of the animal. The illustration shows a possum in a tree. He was snapped in Pennsylvania. Farmers say that possums are great poultry thieves. Perhaps some of our young friends who live where he thrives know whether he is or not.

Game of Jumbles.

Each person selects the name of some bird, fish or animal and quickly jumbles the letters so as to spell other words. Thus one choosing hippopotamus might make out of the letters map hoop sit up, a panther might become ben part, while porpoise might turn to o sire pop. When all are ready each player may, in turn, read his "confusion" to the rest of the party and note carefully how long they are in guessing. Since the one wins whose puzzle takes longest to guess, it is important to mix the letters as much as possible.

If preferred, sides may be chosen after each player is ready with his jumble. The first player on the left side then offers his puzzle to all the players on the right side to be guessed. Next the offer comes from the first player on the right side to those on the left, and so on alternately, giving each player his turn. A timekeeper marks the exact number of minutes and seconds for each guess. If there are only a few players each may offer two or more jumbles. When all have been guessed the side whose total guessing time is least is the winner.

Game of Homonyms.

In this game two persons are sent from the room and they select two words which are pronounced alike but have different meanings, such as bear-bare, see-sea, etc. Suppose they settle upon the words bear and bare. Then they re-enter the room, and one says, thinking of bear, "It has a thick coat." The other says, thinking of bare, "It has no coat at all." Then they continue to contradict each other, telling the truth about his own word, until the players guess what the word is. The first one guessing must choose his partner and leave the room to think up another homonym, and the game is repeated till the children want to play something else.

The Offended Bee.

A fairy sat in a buttercup
To rest for a little while.
Her weary wings were folded up
In quite the latest style.

The soft breeze rocked her tenderly
Until she fell asleep.
And by and by a hungry bee
Came near enough to peep.

He buzzed around the tiny sprite,
As cross as cross could be
To think a fairy should have sipped
His honey for her tea.

Out came his sting, but just in time
The fairy showed her head,
And when he saw her magic wand
The bee in terror fled.

Air Towel for Hands

An "air towel" used in the large public lavatory in the District Building at Washington, D.C., resembles a rectangular box eleven inches by three, set in a base having twelve-inch legs, with an opening in the top of the case in which the wet hands are held while being dried. The device consists of a blower that forces air through an electric heating element to ducts and deflectors suitably placed for distributing the warmed air to all parts of the hands at the same time, and is operated by a foot-lever or pedal, which in turn operates a quick acting switch, thereby setting the blower in motion. By removing the foot the device is put out of operation. The hands come in contact with no part of the device, thus assuring a perfectly sanitary operation. It takes just thirty seconds to dry the hands, and, says the "Scientific American," although this seems a long while standing with the hands in the drier and practically unoccupied, tests have shown that the ordinary operation of drying the hands with a towel consumes more time if the hands are to be dried as thoroughly as by the electrical drier.

WENT THROUGH ICE TO HIS DEATH SISTER WAS SAVED

Lawrence Pammett, Aged Twelve Years is Drowned When Ice in Canal Gave Way--- Men Rescued His Sister

Lawrence Pammett, twelve-year-old son of Robert J. Pammett, 272 Euclid avenue, was drowned today when skating on the canal. Though in the water less than five minutes, life was extinct when he was pulled out. A sister, ten years old, who was with him, barely missed sharing a similar death, she being rescued in the nick of time.

Pammett and his sister went skating this morning on the canal, about one hundred yards above the bridge on the Warsaw road. There is a boat moored at this spot, around which the ice was very thin and unsafe. The water is about seven feet deep. The two children were alone and were apparently ignorant of the peril they were incurring when skating in that vicinity. The worst happened when both suddenly went through into the icy water.

Men Hear Cries.

Their cries attracted attention from three men nearby, named Albert Curtis, L. Kemp and Samuel Edwards, who rushed to the rescue. Though they worked in imminent danger to themselves, they managed to pull the little girl out first, comparatively uninjured save for the cold shock. But the boy was not secured for almost five minutes, and when Dr. Brown arrived about fifteen minutes later he pronounced life extinct. He believed the shock of the cold water had affected the boy's heart and contributed to his death.

After being pulled out, the boy was carried to the home of Mr. Edwards, and aid summoned by telephone. No attempt to resuscitate him was made on the doctor's arrival, because no heart action was going on.

Sincere sympathy will be extended the bereaved parents. Mr. Pammett is head chef on the Trent canal yacht "Bessie Butler." There is a large family, and to make the circumstances even sadder, it is learned that Mrs. Pammett is very ill. Mr. Pammett was in Lakefield when the fatality occurred, and has since been informed.

No funeral arrangements have been made. Belleghem & Sons have charge of the latter.

EARNEST EFFORTS ARE BEING MADE

Committees Boosting Patriotic Fund Are Hard at Work and Look Forward to Success

Last night was a field night for the several committees of the Patriotic Fund movement. The headquarters was filled with an earnest and helpful lot of men, seriously bent on pushing the fund up to high-water mark.

There is a great deal to arrange. The team captains were on hand and made reports of selections and that the teams were well organized. The publicity committee had some things to say as to the progress of that end of the work. With the help that is offered, all details will be in smooth running order for the active days of the campaign.

It is desired that as many people as possible shall hear the speakers on Tuesday night next. It is felt that the Opera House will be thronged. There is no doubt of that. When such able speakers as Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance, Rev. Father Minehan and Lt.-Col. Ponton deliver addresses it is more than a treat to be able to hear them. The committee are making, in anticipation of a full house, arrangements that an overflow meeting may be held in the Market Hall. This would afford opportunity for those who might not get to the Opera House in time to hear the speakers. But of this, further anouncement will be made.

The Oriental Hotel comes forward to join as an institution in the ranks of those who are really doing something. That is what is needed. Hearty work by all will land the fund at the top. For a time, not stated, and it may go on for a considerable time, the hotel will make a subscription to the fund of fifty cents for every guest who patronizes the hotel. The regular rates will be charged, and these are very reasonable. The sum mentioned is a gift from the hotel, and will run into a considerable amount, which is what is needed. The hotel will make announcement of its plan.

Following is a sheet of rules which are being issued for the use of the canvassers. The arguments used are such as should appeal to the citizen and it would be well to look the paragraphs over in anticipation of the visit of the canvassers.

Some Good Reasons Why I Am Subscribing to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund to the Extent of My Ability.

1. I owe to my country, and to the Empire of which we are a part, either to fight myself or help to make it possible for others to fight in this supreme struggle.

2. As a Canadian, I have enjoyed the protection and privilege of British citizenship and have never yet been called upon in the defence of the Empire.

3. I have paid no war tax. My Mother Country has borne the burden of my protection alone.

4. In the hour of trial I desire Great Britain to realize that every Canadian is supporting and upholding her cause.

5. The war in which we are engaged is a righteous cause, a struggle for truth, liberty and for the sacredness of treaties and the given word.

6. I can't go myself, but I can help to make it possible for others to go by guaranteeing that their families will be provided for in their absence.

7. Every soldier who has gone from Canada is as truly my representative as he who went from Peterboro.

8. The object of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is to make provision for ALL families of soldiers going from Canada to take part in the present war.

9. I know I am subscribing to a fund that will assist the family whose breadwinner is out of work in Peterboro, and at the same time provide relief for the family whose breadwinner has answered his country's call.

10. Those who have gone to the front are making greater sacrifices than anything I can do at home.

11. An unparalleled crisis in the world's history calls for supreme sacrifice on my part. I MUST DO MY DUTY. I MUST FIGHT OR PAY.

This morning, Mr. O'Connell received a letter from Hon. W. T. White, saying that he would be pleased to be at Peterboro and speak at the meeting, and that he considered it a pleasure as well as a duty to come. While in the city he will be the guest of Mr. James Kendry. He will be accompanied by Mrs. White.

Here is an idea. A friend of the fund calls in and says that in his family they have decided to call off the giving of Christmas presents one to another and possibly to friends outside. The money that would be thus saved will be given to the Patriotic Fund. Why not, for once, go thou and do likewise.

TITANIC LOSSES OF THE ENEMY.

LONDON, Dec. 5. — A despatch to the Times from Copenhagen gives the latest German casualty list of thirteen thousand seven hundred names, which brings the total to six hundred and fifty-eight thousand, not including former previous Wurtemberg, Saxon and Bavarian lists. The despatch says that examination of the casualty lists shows that the Teutonic allies have lost at the rate of thirty thousand daily for four months. This would make an almost incredible total of three and a half millions of men.

EX-OFFICERS OF BRITISH FORCES

Provision Made for Them by Canadian Military Authorities

The Canadian Military authorities have received through His Royal Highness the Governor General an important notification from the Army Council, London, regarding the mobilization for the war of ex-officers of the British regular and territorial forces.

The Army Council have reason to believe that there are several ex-officers of the Regular Army and Territorial forces between twenty-five and forty years of age residing in Canada who have not joined the Canadian contingent but who would rejoin their old corps. The Army Council are prepared to offer such persons, including retired officers of the Special Reserve and ex-militia officers if certified medically fit temporary commissions for the duration of the war. Free passage to and from Great Britain and an allowance of thirty pounds sterling made for provision of uniform and one of seven pounds ten shillings for camp kit.

TWO SKATERS ARE DROWNED

Train Despatcher and School Teacher go Through Ice

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

North Bay, Dec. 5.—Ralph Smith, a despatcher on the T. and N. O. Railway, who came here from Oshawa, and Miss White of Bracebridge, who has been teaching school in the nearby settlement of Feronia, were drowned last night while skating on Lake Nipissing.

They ventured out too far, the ice broke and before their companions had time to respond to their calls for help, they had disappeared in the icy waters.

Both bodies were recovered.

CHANGES IN O.H.A. RULES

Clubs Must Give Fuller Particulars About Their Players

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Dec. 5.—The twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association was held this morning. A motion by John Ross Robertson to make it obligatory on a student not only to register but also to be a legitimate student was carried. It is aimed at doing away with "occasional" students who register at college to evade the residence rule.

A motion allowing players living in villages to play with the nearest O.H.A. team war carried, but when Mr. Aurey proposed to extend the liberty to towns where there was no O.H.A. team, his motion only received three votes.

A motion carried unanimously that each player's certificate shall have attached to it, a form showing where he has played during the past three years.

Ross Robertson's motion for two referees in the semi-final and final games; a referee and an assistant to be named by the executive if they deemed the double appointment advisabl and limiting overtime play to thirty minutes, both carried.

Clubs hereafter agreeing to abandon games shall each be credited with a loss.

ALL DIPHTHERIA CARDS ARE DOWN

No Cases Reported for Two Weeks

Dr. McPherson, the M.H.O. informed the Review today that at the present time there is not a single house adorned by a diphtheria card. It is two weeks since any cases have been reported. But two cases are in the Isolation Hospital, so it appears as though the recent outbreak has been checked.

GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

German Professors at Toronto Relieved of Duties

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—The University of Toronto has given leave of absence with full pay to the three German professors who had not taken out naturalization papers at the outbreak of the war. An official statement was issued last night by Sir Edmund Walker on behalf of the board of governors, which read as follows:

"The charges against the professors were not substantiated, but in view of all the difficulties surrounding the situation the board has given leave of absence until the end of the session to Professors Mueller, Benzinger and Herr Tapper."

"Does this mean leave of absence with salary?" asked a reporter.

"Certainly," replied Sir Edmund "that is what leave of absence means."

Further than this no statement was made by any other member of the board of governors. The announcement came at the end of a two-days' decision by the board.

"President Falconer did not recommend the dismissal of these men," said Sir Edmund, "and it would be necessary for him to make that recommendation before the board could act. That is specified in the university act."

President Falconer had nothing to say.

It is felt that the announcement by the board was the result of a compromise between the president, who would not dismiss the German professors, and those members of the board who thought they should not be in the employ of any publicly-supported institution in Canada.

ONE DAY'S PAY FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND

The employees of the Matthews-Blackwell, including factory help, office hands, store employes and salesmen will donate one day's pay to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund. This was decided upon at a meeting of the employes held in the factory today at twelve o'clock. T. F. Matthews addressed the meeting pointing out how it is the duties of those at home to assist the dependants of the men at the front. The men were unanimous in their resolution to adopt the above mentioned course.

It is expected that the sum will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $200.

ADDRESS ON TELESCOPES WAS INTERESTING

Prof. Plasket Delighted the Students of Astronomy at Normal School

The lecture which Professor Plasket delivered before a largely attended meeting of the local centre of the Royal Astronomical Society last night in the Normal School lecture hall dealt chiefly with the observatory being built by the Dominion Government, about seven miles from Victoria, B.C., where there are about 50 acres of land on which provision is made for extensive grounds and driveways surrounding the main building in which the observatory telescope will be housed. There is to be a reflector in this gigantic telescope that weighs two tons of a special kind of glass. It was made in Belgium and shipped to Canada luckily, three days before war was declared.

Professor Plasket said this telescope was to be the biggest in the world. The object glass through which objects are discerned is seventy-two inches in diameter.

Professor Plasket related several other interesting points about the telescope, his address being one of the most interesting the society has heard for some time.

It is the intention of the local astronomical society to further interest in the study of heavenly bodies as much as possible in Peterboro. To this end they will lend one of their two telescopes to members of the society who care to make use of it. They will also leave one at the Normal School available for observation purposes, from the enclosed space on the top of the building. This is an ideal position. Following the lecture a business meeting was held when the following officers were elected:

President—Mr. W. A. Logan.
Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. S. J. Keyes.
Vice-President—Mr. C. Fessenden.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay was chairman for the meeting.

KEEP MONEY CIRCULATED

Board of Trade Calls Meeting for Tuesday Night Dec. 15th

HELP MERCHANTS

People should not freeze on to their money this Christmas or hoard it up, in the opinion of the officers of the board of trade, who announce a meeting for one week from Next Tuesday night to discuss ways and means for helping the merchants by keeping money in circulation this year as far as possible. Every member of the board is asked to attend this meeting, as opinions are desired on the matter and suggestions for stimulating a better spending spirit, in view of the tendency of many people to cling to their money and thus retard its circulation in the city.

It is felt by many that quite a large sum of money will be tied up soon to meet demands that are about to be made, and while backing any reasonable undertaking, the board are desirous that the business of the merchants who depend upon the people for their business, should not suffer as a consequence. They want the public to loosen up and keep the money in circulation.

DEPARTMENT HAS MATTER IN HAND

Is Making Inquiries Regarding Accommodation for Soldiers

J. H. Burnham, M. P., received a letter from Major-General Hughes this morning which was a reply to a letter written the minister of militia and defence some time ago. The communication received today stated that the department is inquiring into the possibility of Peterboro and other places affording accommodation for soldiers.

The suggestion made by an evening contemporary last evening is just such an item as one would expect to find in a journal of that kind. Evidently the writer did not consider the department of militia capable of looking after the military affairs, and that advice should be given from city councils. The next thing that journal will be doing is advising Kitchener how to manage his troops.

CATHEDRALS IN THE WAR ZONE

Many Fine Pictures Shown at Collegiate Hall

Pictures that were a treat and an inspiration to all who beheld them were thrown on canvas last night in the Collegiate Institute assembly hall, showing some of the beautiful public buildings and cathedrals of Belgium and France that have suffered from the ruthless bombardment of the German artillery since the outbreak of the war.

Professor Squair, lecturer of the University of Toronto, showed the pictures, accompanying each with a few descriptive remarks that made the evening most interesting. He touched upon the pride which Belgium has always had in her beautiful buildings, principally her town halls and cathedrals. He showed that famous and wonderful piece of architecture, the Cathedral of Rheims which was battered and wrecked by German guns. The cathedral of Antwerp and Bruges and beautiful artistic masterpieces by Rubens and the Vaneke brothers that hang within these churches were also shown. Every one gained a clearer conception of the massive grandeur wrapped up in these buildings while watching the pictures and hearing the professor's illuminating talk than they could acquire in any other way save by an actual visit to the places shown. Professor Squair threw in plenty of remarks concerning German heartlessness and disregard for architectural works that found a responsive chord in the hearts of his audience.

His lecture was given under the auspices of the Women's Art Association.

Mr. Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School presided. At the close of the lecture a hearty motion of appreciation was tendered Professor Squair.

THE VISION OF SMALL MEN.

LEADING LIBERALS, almost up to the declaration of war, would not believe there was any real emergency in Britain as to a war with Germany. The Toronto Globe was diligent in denying an emergency, and, when war was actually declared, took pains to state (a matter which it did not prove) that the emergency spoken of in 1911-12 was not the emergency of 1914. The Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, one of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's ministers, told the Canadian Club of Toronto, as late as March, 10th, 1913, that "The emergency does not exist; there is no doubt about that." He also opposed on "ethical" grounds the construction by Canada of powerful battleships. His argument was that instead of leading the world in building engines of destruction, Canadians should be content with smaller vessels.

Such was the attitude of the Liberal party in Canada at the very time when Lord Roberts was predicting war and advising conscription. Dr. Dillon was among those who continually warned his countrymen of what was coming. Dr. Dillon was thoroughly conversant with Germany and its aims, yet he was not heeded by many people.

In April, 1914, Dr. Dillon wrote in the Contemporary Review:

> "Among the new or newly intensified currents of political life now traversing the continent of Europe, none can be compared in its cultural and political bearings and influence with the rivalry between the Slav and Teutonic races. This is no mere dispute about territorial expansion, political designs, or commercial advantages. It is a ruthless struggle for mastery in all domains of national and international existence, which, so far as one can now see, may at most be retarded by diplomatic good-will on both sides, but can hardly be settled with finality by any treaty or convention. For here we are dealing with an instinctive, semi-conscious movement which obeys natural laws, and not with a deliberate self-determining agency which may be modified by argument or swayed by persuasion."

That means that one method alone, war, would be sufficient to settle European affairs in view of Germany's attitude. Yet, in spite of this and other emphatic and previous warnings, there was, so far as the Globe and Liberals in Canada were concerned, no emergency, no need to prepare for the wrath to come. The case of the Liberals points unerringly to the small range of vision of their prominent party leaders.

THE PLEASURE OF BUYING.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON is essentially a buying season. The poor are made glad by the gifts bought for them by those more fortunate in this world's goods. The well-off and rich are pleased by presents which were bought in part or in whole. All this buying does not represent trading so much as the fact that gifts are not free things, costing nothing, but instead represent various degrees of sacrifice. The cost may be small, yet it may mean a substantial sacrifice to the giver. It is well that there is such a season when things are bought and money is expended, not for self, but for others. Such a season helps to create a broader public spirit, helps to exalt the state and society rather than merely individual desires. By all means, let there be as much buying as possible this Christmas season, for war is a contradiction of this season, and, while we must wage war sternly until our foes are defeated, let us not forget this beautiful season by failing to buy gifts. War makes many homes desolate and unhappy. Let us make as many pleasant firesides this season as we can.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

ANOTHER BANK MANAGER has been assigned to Kingston for a three-year term. This time it was western real estate that caused the trouble—at least, that was the excuse presented. At the trial, the presiding judge severely censured the chartered bank of which this man was a manager, for the very loose methods of banking that they used. A branch of this bank operates in Peterborough. The amount, involved totalled about $18,000. This amount is small, and will make no difference as to the status of the bank in question, but what is important is that a Canadian chartered bank has been condemned at a trial in which it is reasonable to suppose that competent authorities so condemned it. The question arises whether this bank is the only one that employs loose methods of banking, and whether that fact is a danger signal as to the solvency of the institution. The fact that a bank manager steals or embezzles some money does not concern the character of a bank a great deal. Such a case exhibits, usually, a weakness in morals, not in management, but when a bank's methods are also condemned, the charge assumes a serious character. The Canadian banking system, usually considered one of the strongest and most efficient systems in the world, has received, during recent years, two or three knocks of a dangerous character, and a very vigilant eye will have to be maintained if public confidence in banks chartered by the Government is to be maintained. In this country the note-holder is well protected, but the depositor has really no protection, and, in case of a failure, those who have banked the savings of years suffer heavily, in fact next to the stockholders. The charge in this case should at once be investigated. A mere adjustment in bookkeeping may be all that is required, but, if such is allowed to go uncorrected, other, more alarming symptoms, may develop, which might imperil the fortunes of a large number of Canadian people.

A PREDICTION UNFULFILLED.

A MARQUETTE, MICHIGAN, correspondent has kindly sent to the Mail and Empire a clipping from the Chicago Tribune, containing a signed statement from Max Annenberg, circulation manager of the Tribune, who happened to be in Europe the first week in August. Annenberg said that he studied the situation there at first hand, his observations covering the centres in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, and as a result he declared upon Saturday, August 15: "Here and now I forecast that a week from Sunday will find France and Belgium conquered by Germany, England suing for peace, and Russia not even in the fight." It is hardly necessary to say, the Toronto paper adds, that his prediction has not been fulfilled. This, we are sure, is not the fault of Mr. Annenberg, who is strongly pro-German in his sympathies. He goes on to say:

> "Inside of a week the Germans will march through Belgium and France as a giant would stride through a kindergarten. Germany has nothing to fear from England. England can aid the Allies only by sending its territorials into France and Belgium. The English army is not the equal of the army of the United States, and we have a poor army. The Territorials constitute no army at all. They are far inferior to the American militia. Chicago's first regiment of I. N. G. is much better than the best of the Territorials. They are mere boys, they never saw action, and they know nothing about service."

If the Territorials are mere boys who know nothing about service, we must say that the first of them who got into action, namely, the London Scottish, played the man. It must have been a great disappointment to Mr. Annenberg and the other German sympathizers in the United States to observe day after day how the "contemptible little army" of Great Britain held back the German avalanche, maintained the greatest traditions of its history, and added new and equally glorious traditions that for all time will inspire the British Empire. The veracious circulation manager goes on to say that the people of England are against the war, but that they were tricked into it by the Government, who sought a temporary solution of the Irish problem. Thousands of men, he said, were starving in the streets of London. Mr. Annenberg's remarkable statement, which was prominently displayed by the Chicago Tribune, must cause advertisers in that paper serious misgivings concerning its circulation claims.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IN ORILLIA they get good audiences for the lectures relative to the war being given there. They even disagree with the speaker and get the people interested. Evidently there is a good public spirit in Orillia.

REMEMBER, this year it's Christmas presents as usual.

WHAT IS CHRISTMAS without presents?

ENGLAND, MOTHER ENGLAND.

(The author of this beautiful song is Mr. Edwin C. Booth. It is printed with high appreciation in the yearbook of the Royal Society of St. George.)

Little lonely woman watching o'er the waters,
Tell me what you look for with your wistful eyes of grey.
What a mother's heart can love her eyes can see alway.
Day by day I see them—day by day I hear them—
Hear the murmur of their voices ever in the sea.
And my heart is yearning, yearning to be near them.
Children, I your mother am: cry "Mother" back to me.
Make me proud, my children, that one word my heart shall fill;
Grey hair'd England is your mother, call her "Mother" still.

Little lonely woman watching o'er the waters.
Let your bosom swell with pride, your mother's heart rejoice.
Far beyond the ocean you have sons and daughters;
Sons and daughters swift as flame to leap up at your voice.
Whisper but a summons, sigh to them in need.
East and West and North and South sound back the answering hum.
Stir of children marching; beat of hearts that bleed:
Thunder of ten thousand lips: O, mother, here we come.
England, Mother England, all our blood cries back to thee;
Blood of Kinship beats to blood like waves that seek the shore.
Bind us close, oh Mother; let us gather at thy knee:
Hand in hand there let us stand, thy children evermore.

Another Knock for Toronto.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

While General Sam Hughes has never been noted for the discretion of his utterances, it would appear that in the present furore in Toronto, so far as it is possible to judge from this distance, he is in the right, in disapproving of the sudden mobilisation of the whole militia force in that city, without any intimation to the public that it was simply a test mobilization.

A Disputed Conveyance.

FAIR PLAY ASKED.

Editor, the Review:

Sir, — Our attention has been drawn to a large poster regarding Peterborough's Patriotic Fund, said poster being the product of a Montreal printing house. It is apparent that the fact of this work being produced out of town is not in keeping with the trend of the editorials which we have read in recent issues of your paper. "Patronize home industry and keep the people of Peterborough employed" should be the slogan of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund committee, as well as the slogan, "$50,000 for the Peterborough Patriotic Fund."

We have no desire whatever to knock the local Patriotic Fund committee, but would like to remind that the printed matter could be produced right here in this city probably at as low a cost as elsewhere. There are printers now walking the streets of Peterborough, in addition to others unemployed. If the work was done free of charge, of course the situation is altered. We understand the local newspapers are inserting the Patriotic Fund advertisements free of charge. If so, why not give them a chance to do remunerative work rather than that Montreal printing houses should benefit?

Yours truly,
G. L. MYLAND, Pres.,
G. J. JOHNSON, Sec.
Peterborough Typographical Union, No. 248.

When Friendship Ceased

It is impossible for British people not to be interested in the German Emperor and his destiny, for he is the cousin of our own King George V and he was for many years a frequent visitor to the British Royal family. His coming to the throne in 1887 was the signal for a great outburst of anti-British feeling in Berlin, but this was toned down as the result of his visit to London in 1889, and he was in each of the next six years a guest of Queen Victoria, the relations between the two nations becoming both intimate and friendly. It was in 1890, during the Emperor's visit to Hatfield House, that the transfer of Heligoland to Germany was agreed to by Lord Salisbury. After 1895 there developed a gradual estrangement between the two powers. In that year there was proclaimed by the Emperor a purpose to make Germany a great sea power, and almost contemporaneously there was sent to President Kruger the celebrated message of congratulation on the outcome of the Jameson Raid. The breach thus begun has never been closed up. The Emperor's speeches have from time to time kept alive the British people's suspicion of his good faith. He visited London in 1901 to attend the funeral of his grandmother, Queen Victoria, and his visit in 1902 was probably connected with the ailment of King Edward, on account of which his coronation had been deferred.

Keep Bees Only as Side-line

In an address to the members of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association at Toronto, President J. L. Byers said that a crop failure had taught him that there were two sides to the business of beekeeping, and that failures were just as sure as bumper crops. Regarding inspection work he said it was becoming harder to get qualified beekeepers to engage in the work, and as a result the work was being done by students from Guelph College. Discussing beekeeping as a business, the president declared it was very foolish for any young man with money and looking for a means for profitable investment to enter on beekeeping. Taking everything into consideration he had no hesitation in advising a young man to go slow and combine his hobby with some other business.

The Queen's Friend

Lady Mount Stephen is probably the Queen's oldest and most intimate friend. Before her marriage in 1897 to the Canadian millionaire peer she was Miss Gian Tufnell, and was lady-in-waiting and the favorite companion of the late Duchess of Teck. She has been the friend and confidante of the Queen from her girlhood, as well as a great favorite with all the members of the Teck family. Prince Alexander spent his honeymoon at her house, Brocket Hall, and the King and Queen have stayed there frequently.

An Interesting Old Union Jack

General Sam Hughes presented to a Toronto militia regiment a flag which has rather an interesting history. It was given to him in New York by an old Britisher named Harry Piper, once a resident of Toronto. It is a Union Jack, and was presented to Mr. Piper in 1862 by an old Indian chief in the Northwest, who had in return received it from Lord Strathcona. Mr. Piper desired that it be presented to some Toronto regiment.

These dense fogs we have been having may be an attempt of Nature to fool the Zeppelins and make a whole lot of places look like London.

FARMER HOLDS HIGH POSITION

It is something of a novelty to find a Minister of Public Works who is a farmer, but such is the case in the Ontario Government where Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid fills that important post. While the soil yields him a living, one would never suspect it from the appearance of the man. Early in life he learned that to be a successful agriculturist one need not carry its brands about with him, and his sixteen years of Parliamentary life polished him into an experienced man of the world.

HON. FINLAY G. MACDIARMID

Mr. Macdiarmid has won something of a reputation as a public speaker, always presenting his arguments in a brief but logical manner.

Even if it took sixteen years of testing, Mr. Macdiarmid was still the youngest Minister in the Ontario Cabinet when he entered it, and his forty-five years rest upon him lightly. Still young in appearance, tall, of athletic build, and ruddy countenance, outwardly he is the type of man who is able to weather the stress of office.

His appointment to the chair of Public Works came as a distinct surprise to those who were not on the inside. Doubtless his work has been done in silence. At least he is not the flashy type of man, who constantly proclaims his political patriotism.

SELECTING TREES

In nearly all cases it will pay to procure good nursery-grown trees. They have two distinct advantages over trees dug up from the fields or woods. In the first place they generally have a larger number of feeding roots, enabling them to withstand the transplanting process better, and they are better able also to withstand heat and light conditions which prevail in towns and cities, young trees growing in woods generally being weakened by the shade of surrounding trees.

The question of the size of the tree is of some importance. Greater success is possible when small or medium-size trees are used. A large-sized tree requires more attention after it is planted, to tide it over the critical period following transplanting. Elms and maples are generally procurable in larger sizes, and are more likely to succeed than most other varieties.

For wide streets, avenues, or boulevards, trees of the type of the elm, which is remarkable for its vase-like and graceful form, are more suitable than compact round-headed trees, of the type of the Norway maple.

Trees of the type of the Silver maple or even the Carolina poplar should not be selected except for some special purpose. The wood of such trees is soft and brittle, and limbs are easily broken off in sleet or wind storms. The risk of damage to life and property at such times must be considered in selecting such trees.

Trees which have a natural beauty which is spoiled when they are pruned of their lower branches, such as the beech, the Weeping Silver maple, or the Weeping birch, are not suitable for streets or avenues.

Trees which shed their flowering or fruiting organs, such as the Balsam and Carolina poplar, the Horse chestnut, or the Catalpa, and keep the sidewalks untidy for some weeks each year, are not desirable street trees.

Trees which are short-lived, or subject to insect attacks, are difficult to transplant, are not as a rule desirable for city streets.

Timber Supply Across Line

In the United States as a whole four-fifths of the standing timber is privately owned, and one-fifth is owned by various states and the Federal Government. New York owns one-fifth of the forest land of the state, and one-fourth of the standing timber. Owing to a clause in the Constitution, this timber can not be cut, even though it is dying, or dead, and a menace to healthy timber abo [illegible]

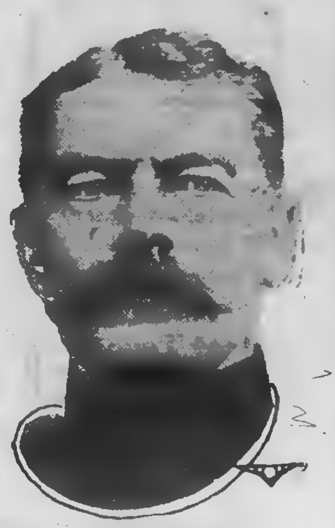
KING GEORGE

This is a National Movement

We're In It!



LORD KITCHENER

Peterboro's Patriotic Fund

$50,000

And We're Going to Get It!

The following specific statement of the Aims and Objects of the Movement is placed before the People to afford full information. Read Carefully:

To the Citizens of Peterboro:

Peterboro has decided to raise $50,000 for the Patriotic Fund. You should therefore know all the facts in order that your enthusiastic support may be assured.

This is a National Movement.

Its object is to see that no one in Canada, in the families of our soldiers who have gone to the front shall suffer want, and 25 per cent. of the fund to be raised here will be set apart to provide assistance to those in reduced circumstances indirectly through the war.

Do not confuse this fund with the ordinary local charity relief fund. That fund will be dispensed this year as usual by the city and from the regular sources.

The Canadian Patriotic Fund deals only with cases where assistance has become necessary to the families of those who have gone to the front.

How the Fund will be Administered

The wardens of the National Patriotic Fund have decided that the fund shall be administered on the following basis:

Every case will be investigated separately.

Where families do not need assistance, none will be extended.

Where assistance is required its extension will be governed by considerations given herewith.

The basis of relief adopted for families is as follows:

A wife, $1.00 per day, or $30.00 per month.

A child under five years, 10c per day, or $3.00 per month.

A child between five and ten years, 15c per day, or $4.50 per month.

A child between ten and fifteen years, 25c per day, or $7.50 per month.

Thus, a family of a mother, and three children of the ages of 3, 8 and 13 years, respectively(would receive a total of $45.00.

From this is deducted the amount which the Canadian Government pays to the families of soldiers who have gone to the front (termed separation allowance), $20.00 per month; also any earnings of the family or any other assistance it may be receiving, such as remittance of rent, continuation of wages paid by former employer to soldier, etc. The balance is paid out of the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

When soldiers are reported to have been killed or to be missing after a battle, their government pay ceases forthwith.

In such cases, the Patriotic Relief Fund will provide all the funds necessary to look after their families' welfare until such time as the Government is ready to commence payment to them of the regular pension, which it is expected will be provided in due course.

Why a National Fund?

This is not just a Peterboro movement. It is national in scope.

Some small municipalities and rural districts in Canada have sent a large number of soldiers to the front.

Some large centres have sent a comparatively few soldiers to the front.

All these soldiers, no matter where they are from, are fighting for our defence just as truly as are the soldiers who have gone directly from Peterboro.

Some of the small municipalities may not be able to provide adequately for the needs of all the families of the soldiers whom they have sent forward.

Other municipalities may be able to over-provide for their local needs.

Therefore, it has been decided to establish a National Patriotic Fund for the purpose of providing adequately on the same basis of relief for the assistance of every family of every soldier from Canada that has gone to the front.

Special Cases Needing Assistance

The war has thrown many men and women out of work. Some of these people are suffering want. Many never needed aid before.

It has been decided to allocate 25 per cent. of the money raised as a special local fund for their relief.

A Dominion Organization

The National Patriotic Fund was incorporated at the last session of Parliament.

The President is His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught.

The Honorary Secretary is Mr. H. B. Ames, M. P., of Montreal.

The Honorary Treasurer is Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance.

The Honorary Auditor is the Auditor General for Canada.

This committee supervises the expenditure of the National Fund.

What Peterboro Proposes To Do

Peterboro proposes to raise all told (including the money already subscribed) $50,000. Of this sum, $37,500 will be deposited in a Peterboro bank to the credit of the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

$12,500 will be retained in a separate account to be used locally for the relief of families whose breadwinners are out of work on account of conditions created by the war.

How the Money will be Paid Out

Each month the Peterboro Relief Committee will prepare an estimate of the funds that will be required during the coming month for the assistance of families of soldiers from Peterboro who have gone to the front.

This statement will be sent to the Canadian Patriotic Fund at Ottawa to secure a cheque for amount required, which will come as an order on the Peterboro bank to the credit of the Peterboro Patriotic Committee for the required sum of money. This money will be handled directly by the Peterboro Committee.

Should Peterboro raise more money than is required locally, the surplus will be used by the National Committee. Should Peterboro not raise enough for its own needs, the National Fund will be drawn upon for whatever sum may be necessary.

We desire to raise much more than will be required locally.

The Special Local Relief Fund

The $12,500 will be handled entirely by a local committee for the assistance of families, other than those of soldiers, needing temporary assistance on account of war conditions.

What Other Cities Have Done

The $50,000 we propose to raise is a comparatively small sum for a city like Peterboro. In round figures

Kingston	raised	$52,000
Berlin	"	$95,000
London	"	100,000
Hamilton	"	200,000
Ottawa	"	300,000
Toronto	"	1,000,000
Montreal	"	2,000,000

Let us therefore raise as much more than $50,000 as we can. Because of the great issues that are at stake, let each of us give until it hurts. There will be no real blessing to us if we do anything less than that.

How the Funds will be Raised

On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, December 9, 10 and 11, the citizens of Peterboro will be given the privilege of contributing to the fund.

The canvass will be conducted by ten or more teams of citizens, each composed of ten members — 100 in all.

Headquarters have been established at No. 431 George Street.

Each day the citizens of Peterboro will be kept posted as to how the canvass is succeeding.

Should the canvassers fail to call on you, hand your contribution to some officer of the committee, to some of the team captains, or leave it at the Headquarters, No. 431 George Street.

The payments will be optional with the giver, whether to make payment in a lump sum or to spread the payment over periods during several months.

It is the hope that people who are willing, but not able to make a substantial payment in one sum, may thus have time to spread the payments over several instalments in the future. Let this fact be borne in mind.

CANADIAN CHEESE

Now is the Time for Home Manufacturers to Score

In Europe the making of cheese is a fine art. In Canada cheese is, or has been, a matter of commerce. The war on the continent is Canada's chance. Competition's wings are clipped. To-day there is the opportunity to establish a reputation for Canadian made cheese. This is the opportunity which the Dominion Department of Agriculture urges our cheesemakers to make the most of.

Canada is rich in fallacies. One of the most thriving of these fallacies is the idea that the domestic product cannot possibly equal the European born article. Experts agree that some of our home-made products are in a class with the foreign-made. But the label "home-made" is the thing that damns our cheeses.

There is Limburger cheese. Its quality is superior to and its price cheaper than the European product. Long ago it drove its European rival out of the market. As a matter of fact little foreign Limburger has been imported into this country for years. But Limburger consuming persons continue to consume, blissfully ignorant of the facts in the case. They still believe they are eating a foreign cheese. Well, they are not eating foreign cheese. Most of it is made in Western Ontario in the German districts.

Then there is Swiss cheese, which has done much to add to life's gayety. It can be made in Canada with the same degree of tastiness and with just as many holes as the foreign product.

Camembert of the best quality always commands a good price, but it has suffered in this country through opposition on the part of the promoter of the imported article.

In addition to Camembert there are a number of other fancy foreign cheese which are popular here and which could doubtless be imitated successfully by Canadian cheesemakers after a little experimental work. Among these varieties are Edam, Gouda, Parmesan, Roquefort, Stilton and Gorgonzola.

It has been the custom among Canadian manufacturers to turn out one or two varieties of cheese and stick to that. This is the fault of the public that pins its faith to the imported product. It would be a wise move on the part of Canadian manufacturers to label their cheeses very frankly as Canadian goods. The consumer can then judge for himself. But if the Canadian manufacturer is to win and keep Canadian custom he must think more of quality in the future. Otherwise the advantage will be only temporary.

RELIEF FOR THE DESTITUTE INHABITANTS OF LABRADOR

Shipment of Provisions Has Been Sent by Government of Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 5.—Relief for the destitute inhabitants of the barren Labrador region has been undertaken by the Newfoundland Government, and the steamer Kyle is now ploughing her way through the ice-laden waters off the Labrador coast with a cargo of provisions for Sandwich Bay, which is about a hundred miles north of Battle Harbor, where Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell maintains his mission station and hospital.

Because the coast was choked with ice as late as August 1, with resultant low temperature on land, the cod and other large fish were too torpid to mesh in the nets or take bait, the smaller fish held far off shore, potato plants did not appear above the ground and the berry crop was practically a failure. The people had nothing to live on but bread and tea. There was a month of good fishing then winter set in again.

DR. WILFRED T. GRENFELL

The Hero of Labrador.

With the outbreak of the war in Europe, the market for Labrador fish was almost completely cut off and there was a rise in the price of foodstuffs. The war also led to the suspension of operations in railway construction in Newfoundland and the closing of mines at Sydney, and Belle Isle, where many of the Labrador men have gone in recent years for winter employment. The big fur companies, too, are hesitating to buy any pelts in the present condition of the market.

Many a face is made with beautiful contour and artistically lined, but when the skin is discolored one cannot see the beauty of the face lines. One notices only the skin blemishes.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often clear the complexion in a few days' time. That's the wonderful part of it—they act right off—in a hurry. That's because they're made of just the ingredients needed to drive all poisons and impurities from the blood. That's why doctors prescribe them so constantly.

EXTENSIVE OPERATIONS AT C.P.R. SHOPS

A description of the enlargement of the Canadian Pacific Railway's divisional shops at North Bay shows how extensive the alterations and extensions are. Work on these was commenced early in 1913, and required about a year to complete. The project included not only the extension of the shops but also the mechanical yards, involving the reclamation of a small section of land along the shore of Lake Nipissing. The motive power, prior to the change, consisted of a 23 stall locomotive house, with small machine and blacksmith shop attached to the west end. This combined building was of a heavy masonry construction, and has been retained in the new layout. To the west there has been added a combined machine and erecting shop, served by a transfer table, along the west frontage of the shop. The erecting shop contains 10 tracks, the depth of the erecting shop being 70 feet. The alterations have, indeed, been so extensive as to almost produce the feeling of entire newness as to appearance and size. The normal monthly production is eight locomotives. Repairs of all kinds are made. Old engines are made to look like new; more men have been employed; and under the direction of Mr. A. H. Kenfall excellent work is turned out at these augmented shops, the presence of which, by the way, have made North Bay the bustling city it is—as the C.P.R. from the start made it a junctional point and had their repair shops there. The added enlargement, with consequent increase of men, gives life and the circulation of money to the ambitious city.

Boastful as they are, you will notice that the cheaty Germans have never said anything about taking the rock of Gibraltar away from the Prudential Life Insurance Co.

EFFORT TO EXPEL THE ENEMY DEVELOPING

Vigorous Offensive is Beginning on Three Se-ctions of the Front, in Flanders, the Aisne and Alsace, and Great Battles Are in Their Early Stages---French in Alsace Making Swift Progress.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Gen. Joffre's allied forces, it is said here, are marshalled for a final test of strength with the Germans. The counter-offensive, which will be the supreme effort of the French commander-in-chief to expel the invaders from France, Alsace and West Flanders, is gradually developing, and the arrival of the psychological moment is all that is awaited for the great drive.

Simultaneously in Flanders, along the Aisne and in Alsace — on three distinct fronts where the fighting of the past few days has developed great vigor—the fury of the grand assault is expected to break forth.

For two weeks, ever since the campaign on the eastern frontier began to turn in favor of the Russian arms, the strength of the allied armies has been mounting up steadily. Already unofficial reports, tell of fighting of unprecedented proportions in Flanders, and of another great battle in Alsace.

Yesterday's official reports from the front record repulses to the German attempts to retrieve their lost territory between Becelaere, five miles due east of Ypres, and Passchendaele, seven miles northeast of that town. These are points on the allies' salient thrown out to protect Ypres from German assault. The infantry of the invaders attempted to advance under vigorous cannonading, but they were met and thrown back by the allies.

A despatch to The Temps from Geneva says:—

"The federal council has issued a communication declaring that there is renewed activity by the French and German forces in Upper Alsace. Between Pfetterhausen and the French frontier, upon the route of Rechazy the French have placed batteries of heavy artillery. Southwest of Pfetterhausen, between the village and the frontier of Switzerland, the French also have prepared entrenchments and barbed wire obstacles.

"The Germans have constructed fortifications at Ottendorf, Liebensdorf and on the heights, west of the River Ill, on territory approaching that of the French.

"Since Dec. 1, there has been a great movement of troops and on Dec. 2, continual artillery fire was heard in the direction of Basle."

The following official communication was issued in Paris last night:

"At no place along the entire front has there been any notable incident.

"On our right wing we have made progress in the direction of and near Altkirch.

"During the day of Dec. 2 we made 991 prisoners in the region of the north alone.

"In Belgium there was a rather lively intermittent cannonade between the railroad line running from Ypres to Roulers, and the highway from Becelaere to Passchendaele, where the infantry of the enemy attempted without success to gain some ground.

"In Vermilles we continue to organize the positions captured by our troops.

"From the Somme to the Argonne calm has prevailed all along the front.

"In the Argonne region several attacks of the German infantry were repulsed by our troops, notably the attacks made against the northwest corner of the forest of La Crurie.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges there were some artillery engagements.

"In Alsace there is nothing to report."

EXTENSIONS TO LOCAL INDUSTRY

Chicle Company buy Lot for Warehouse and Railway Siding

The Canadian Chicle Co. had a communication before the property committee meeting stating that they were willing to purchase the lot on George St. immediately south of their factory. This lot is owned by the city and has a frontage of 50 feet. Geo. Lundy of the Chicle Co. has an option on the property which expires at the close of the present year and as the company is desirous of extending their concern they would like to have their property embrace the lot in question.

Mr. Lundy informed the committee that the lot upon which their factory stood was sold to them for $300 and would be willing to pay $300 for the other lot to the south. It would be utilized for warehouses and extensions to their present plant. A siding would be built to the G.T.R. which cuts the rear of the lots and arrangements could, in his opinion, be made whereby the city could use the siding.

It was decided that the committee recommend to the council the sale of the lot to the Chicle Co. for $300. A clause will be inserted in the deal whereby the city will have use of the siding for the payment of switching charges of cars brought onto the siding for city purposes. The members of the committee will look over the ground previous to Monday night's council meeting.

Furniture for Solicitor.

The matter of purchasing a letter filing cabinet for the city solicitor was left in the hands of the chairman with power to act.

Cost More Than Expected.

Chairman Ald. Langford reported that the cost of operating the incinerator was a trifle over $700 as was anticipated. This money is an appropriation from the general taxes and he suggested that the amount left over from the garbage tax revenue be allowed to go to the cost of operating the incinerator. A motion to that effect was carried.

It was decided to accept J. William's offer of land to be used as the city's dumping ground for $360 per year, the year beginning December 1st. The land embraces 10 acres and is in North Monaghan about a mile and a half from the city.

Quebec Murderer To Hang.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—Antonio Di Lena was yesterday afternoon found guilty of the murder of Angelo Greicco, at Cedars, three months ago. Mr. Justice Saint Pierra donned the black cap and black gloves and sentenced Di Lena to be hanged on Feb. 5.

Notice of appeal was at once lodged by counsel for the condemned man.

This is the first occasion in many years in which a Montreal judge has put on black gloves when announcing the death sentence.

GERMANS HAVE LOST TWO-THIRDS OF MEN

Battle of Lodz is Now Virtually at an End and But For the Failare of One Russian Army Corps the Enemy Would Have Been Completely Crushed---Germans Fought Expecting Discharge.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Petrograd Gazette states that the battle which has been raging around Lodz has ended in a gigantic success for the Russian army. Great numbers of German prisoners and numerous guns have been brought into Lodz daily.

The Gazette further states that all the banks and manufacturers in the city have resumed business.

The following statement from the General Staff of the Russian commander-in-chief was issued last night in Petrograd:

"On the left bank of the Vistula, Dec. 3, there was some fierce fighting on the front of Glowno-Lowicz, and on the western roads towards Lodz and Piotrokow.

"On the other fronts there was no especial modifications in the lines.

"On the fronts in the Caucasus, Dec. 3, there was no important fighting."

A despatch to The Telegraph says:

Unofficial indications that the Germans suffered very heavily continue. A message from Lodz states that ten cannon and seventy-five machine guns taken from the enemy have been brought to that town.

The zone whence the Germans succeeded in escaping from the crossfire of the Russian enveloping troops is a perfect charnel house.

All who have visited that vast battlefield unite in describing the carnage as horrible. The trenches are choked with layers of German corpses. In one village, in three successive charges the Siberian riflemen mowed down the German ranks like wheat.

The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs: Newspapers here are beginning to print numerous fragmentary accounts, derived from the wounded, of the recent fighting in Poland. The general impression from all sides is that the Vistula-Warta fighting has been incomparably more severe than anything experienced before during this war on any front. The Germans in the early conflict christened it the Imperial Battle, for they had been impressed by the highest authority that upon their success depended the whole future of the war. As a reward for their success they were promised that they might disband and return to their homes after victory had been achieved.

Then the character of the fighting also compelled the Germans to rely for once upon their manhood instead of upon their machinery. Yet they still persisted in their massed formations against rifle, Maxim or bayonet. Their losses have been appalling beyond anything elsewhere experienced. Experts estimate that the Germans have lost two-thirds of their army in Poland.

There were several critical moments during the fighting at the battle of Lodz. One Russian division held its ground against two German army corps and finally drove them back. But for the late arrival of one Russian army corps the battle would have finished in complete victory a week ago.

The strategic position meant annihilation or surrender, had all gone right. As it was, large numbers of the Germans got out of the trap and the subsequent fighting has been a curious tactical spectacle, with Russians and Germans in alternate strips covering a considerable area of Polish battlefields.

The Kaiser's sons, Oscar and Joachim, are reported to have escaped only by taking flight in an aeroplane. If there was any point besides the war machinery upon which the Germans particularly prided themselves it was their marching powers. Yet, even here, the Russians have shown themselves to be immeasurably superior. The Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, officially noted a while ago that some Russian corps had marched and fought continuously for months, taking fortified positions, and covered over six hundred miles. And the Russians do their marching flat-foot, whereas the German records are made by means of motor traction over the Polish roads.

The most important factor from the allies' point of view in Poland is that the German advance on Warsaw has not succeeded in its object, nor has it had the effect of diverting the Russians from their forward movement through the Carpathians and on to the plains of Hungary, or against the fortress of Cracow, around which they are drawing a closer ring of men and artillery.

With the case of Przemysl, which has held out so long against the Russian attacks before them, military men do not look for the early fall of Cracow and are rather inclined to believe that the armies of Emperor Nicholas will endeavor to keep the large Austrian force inside the fortress and enter Silesia from the southeast.

Kaiser Back In Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 5. — (Via wireless to London.)—His Majesty the Emperor arrived in Berlin Thursday night for a short stay.

The Kaiser has just completed a tour by motor car, in which he visited virtually every point of importance all the way from the Mazurian Lake region to Czenstochow, northwest of Cracow.

His visit to the Polish front was prolonged by the necessity of inspiring the German reinforcements which [illegible] to the aid of Gen. von Hindenburg's column at Lodz, when it was virtually surrounded by the Russians.

INTERVIEW WAS NOT AUTHENTIC

War Office Denies That Kitchener-Made Statement to Cobb

LONDON, Dec. 5. — The official press bureau yesterday issued a statement denying the authenticity of an alleged interview with Lord Herbert Kitchener by Irvin Cobb, in the latest issue of The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia.

The statement by the official news bureau declares that it is surprising that it should have been regarded as possible that the chief of the War Office would use such expressions as are attributed to him in the alleged interview, parts of which were cabled to London and appeared here yesterday.

The denial is made in the name of the War Office, which is equivalent to a personal denial by Lord Kitchener.

The official press bureau last night issued the following statement on the subject:

"With reference to a so-called interview with Mr. Cobb: Although Lord Kitchener saw Mr. Cobb a few minutes Oct. 21, nothing in the nature of a special interview was granted, and the remarks attributed to the Secretary of State for War are imaginary."

Judge (to woman asking separation): "How long have your relations been unpleasant?" Woman: "Your honor, my relations have always been pleasant! It's his relations that are the old grouches."—Boston Transcript.

The Minister of Labor Replies.

Hon. W. Crothers, minister of Labor, in his reply to the council's question as to whether or no there was a fixed scale of prices for military equipment now being manufactured locally, said that he regretted not being able to supply the needed information, but that probably a similar request made to the minister of militia would have the desired result. As the minister of militia received the same question from the council and no reply was forthcoming, the matter is of necessity held in abeyance. It was felt, however, that the ignoring of letters of a like nature is characteristic of the militia department.

Hospital for Sick Children.

This institution has the same burden to bear as most institutions, and individuals of our day have, and issues an urgent appeal for funds. After taking count of the contents of the treasury and the fact that five cases from Peterborough had been treated during the past year, the sum of $5 was voted after the pros and cons had been voiced.

More Peterboro Prices.

A workman in a local factory wrote, asking support in a fight against unfair dealing. This workman claims that after working five nights he received the princely salary of $3 odd. A committee was appointed to look into the case, and, if need be, secure the services of a lawyer, and see if paterfamilias had not something more substantial coming his way after his trying efforts, the benefits from which capital seemed to almost entirely appropriate.

Nat. Nicholls Surrenders Card.

The barber delegates informed the meeting that Nat. Nicholls, boss barber, of Simcoe street, has surrendered his card rather than live up to conditions required by the barbers of those who are privileged to display the fair wage certificate.

Still "The Grand."

Delegates of the I.A.T.S.E. wished it made known that the management of the local Opera House was still hostile. Union men were seen patronizing this house, whilst the other houses of entertainment were on the fair list. Some interest was caused by the report that the manager of the "Annie Laurie Co." had approached Mr. Turner asking that the boys be readmitted. The manager of the Grand was inclined to be conciliatory till a member of the Musician's Union threw the fat into the fire by declaring the struggle not legal. This brother is to be asked to appear before the council at its next meeting and explain.

Public Ownership a Delusion.

Discontent with the present working of the Public Utilities Commission was expressed. It appears that the service is worse and the prices are higher than when the private company operated. The sweets of public ownership of utilities were not as palatable as anticipated when viewed from a distance.

Labor Candidates.

Regarding the proposed list of candidates for aldermanic and mayoralty honors from labor's ranks, the words from war telegrams must be used, "In this district we have advanced."

Herbert Cory, writing from Berlin, says the Germans are very anxious to know when the war will end. As the Allies intend to fight until the cows come home, perhaps the Germans can get the desired information from some livestock authority. myal the Russians will have to give the alphabet an awful toss before they devise one that is as bad as the original.

GUARD MARCHED TO THEIR DEATH

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Daily Telegraph has the following special despatch from Paris:—

Cri de Paris yesterday gave publicity to an astounding story, the absolute authenticity of which is vouched for by an officer of Sir John French's General Staff. During the battle of Ypres the Prussian Guard was flung up to assault the allied lines, and was compelled to retire before a withering fire. But the Prussian Guard never retires! Such is a cardinal dogma in the German army.

The stain must be wiped out with blood. On the morrow, therefore, at broad noonday, the Guard was sent out. Without arms and without artillery support they walked toward the allied lines, marching as on parade. The allied soldiers fired as on a rifle range. Out of 1,000 men who advanced not one escaped. The honor of the Prussian Guard had been vindicated.

DE WET IN JOHANNESBURG.

He Is Marched Through Streets Crowded With Citizens.

LONDON, Dec. 5. — Telegraphing from Johannesburg, Reuter's correspondent says:—

"Pale and haggard, but calmly smoking his pipe, Gen. Christian De Wet, the rebel leader, arrived here yesterday, guarded by soldiers with fixed bayonets. He was taken through the streets, which were lined with the excited populace, and placed in the fort a prisoner, pending a probable court-martial.

"Whether he will be hanged as a traitor cannot yet be predicted. That some factions favor this, however, is indicated by the tone of the national press, which urges Government action against 'those behind the scenes,' who stimulated De Wet and other rebels to action. Those co-traitors, it is added, should be brought to the shadow of the gallows.

Charged With Horse Theft.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Private George Baldwin Spalding, of the Canadian force, is in charge for the alleged stealing of a horse belonging to the contingent. It is stated that when the force landed at Plymouth the prisoner found a horse wandering about, jumped on its back and eventually disposed of it to a dealer.

E. W. Beatty Moves Up.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5—The appointment of E. W. Beatty, Montreal, late of Toronto, general counsel of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as vice-president and general counsel of that company, is announced in an official circular issued yesterday by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 5.—Six bags of oil meal cakes marked "Germany," six more bags of oil meal cakes marked "Turkey," and one bag of cocoa beans marked "Liverpool" in large letters, and "Hamburg" in small type, were discovered in the cargo of the Norwegian ship Sandefjord yesterday morning.

PAPER SEIZED

Seditious Journal Suppressed and Office Dismantled

DUBLIN, Dec. 5. — The machines in the printing office of The Irish Worker newspaper have been dismantled, and the operators have been taken to the police station. The men are not considered to be under arrest, however.

This would indicate the beginning of Government measures against the publication of seditious newspapers.

The Irish Worker is the weekly organ of the Larkinites, and is actively hostile to the recruiting propaganda of John Redmond.

Youths of 18 Summoned.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 5.—(Via Paris.)—The 300,000 youths of 18 years in France, who normally would begin service in the army in October, 1916, are, by Government decree, to be called to present themselves for examination beginning on the 20th of this month. Their military training probably will begin next March. Should the necessity arise these youths probably could be sent to the fighting line next July.

Doctor's Body Found.

GUELPH, Ont., Dec. 5.—The body of Dr. M. D. Sudworth, aged 25, of Ingersoll, was found lying in the ditch on Waterloo road, about 11.30 Thursday night, by Harry and William Galbraith, about a mile south of Sleeman's brewery. Dr. Orten was notified. The body was identified yesterday by R. W. Waterhouse. The whole affair is a mystery and an inquest has been ordered.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU IS DOING GOOD WORK

Finance Committee Gives $75 When Deputation Presents Report — Eighty-one Men Provided With Work — Employment Refused by Thirteen and Relief Officer Acts Accordingly

The finance committee in session yesterday afternoon decided to recommend to the council the payment of $75 to the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Industrial association to enable that organization to carry on their free employment bureau till the 1915 council is inaugurated. It will be remembered the council gave $5 for that purpose a month ago as an experiment.

A deputation from the association was present and through R. J. Soden presented a report which showed that out of 402 applicants 81 men had been provided with positions. Thirteen able bodied men made application for work and refused it when offered them. These cases were reported to the relief officer and the granting of charity governed accordingly. Mr. Soden pointed out that for less than a dollar per head, men had secured permanent positions and in his opinion that justified the expenditure. The deputation further reported that Mr. Langley who is in charge of the bureau is performing his duties in a manner beyond reproach.

Hitherto two trips have been made only in the summer months.

At the meeting of the finance committee yesterday afternoon it was decided to make a grant of $150 to the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, toward the expense of their convention to be held in this city in January.

The committee also decided to make the usual donation of $25 to the Teachers' Association.

"Bonie" Departs for the Happy Hunting Grounds

The editor's white, thoroughbred, registered bull terrier "Bonie" (Napoleon Bonaparte) faded away last night after an illness of some days. He was a good dog, and lived up to the reputation of his breed, having never been licked and possessing many a cat's scalp. He never had much respect for ragmen, but was usually quiet and good-natured with strangers.

He was always somewhat of a stoic, never complaining, and accepting his lot philosophically. He was always partial to raw meat, and never failed to acknowledge receipt of same. He believed in doing his duty to the state, for his taxes were paid. Those who have any debts to collect from him can write them off their books, because he is now hors de combat. He had reached the good old dog's age of nearly ten years. The funeral is private at the crematory.

One Frenchman had 95 wounds and still lives. This fellow is almost tough enough to get a place on a football team.

The Thinking Power

By WILLIAM BLAKEMAN

Something over a hundred years ago, when Europe was making one of those advances in new lines of thought which have marked different stages of intellectual development, when a crop of great French thinkers—Voltaire and others—were attracting attention, a wealthy Parisian lady conceived in some degree those ideas intended for the amelioration of women that are in vogue during the present day.

Mme. Drivaux did not follow the lines of the present movement, wherein women contend for equality with men. Her idea was that women were capable of higher intellectual development than men from the fact that they are made of finer texture. Her plan was to utilize the brute force of men by making it subservient to the superior intellectual faculties of women.

Mme. Drivaux, who possessed an enormous fortune, purchased an island in the Mediterranean sea, upon which she proposed to carry out her idea. She had no difficulty in founding her colony. Some of her colonists were of noble birth; others were commoners, but all were intellectual. She called for men volunteers who must join with a full understanding that the women were to do the thinking, the men to serve as protectors.

Mme. Drivaux's idea in separating her colonists from the rest of the world was that she might make an absolutely fresh start, untrammeled by existing institutions, laws, customs. But a perfect shaking off of the present in order to inaugurate a new future is very difficult. A weak spot in the founder's purpose was that among the hundred women she took with her there were three each of whom was loved by a man. These men, unwilling to part with those they loved, enrolled themselves among the masculine force who were to do the fighting and laborers. Thus at the very outset did the cankerworm get into the roots of the tree that Mme. Drivaux had planted with so much thought, trouble and expense.

Mme. Drivaux had enlisted every man colonist herself, taking care that he was not opposed to her scheme or unwilling to accept the direction of the women, looking to his muscles rather than his brain for his share of the work. But these three "misbegotten knaves," who had joined for the purpose of getting possession of the women they loved, deceived her by being the loudest in their advocacy of her plan and their promises to be obedient and patient laborers and soldiers.

Marriage was not forbidden in the colony, but every man who married was obliged to promise that he would obey his wife. Moreover, he was obliged to agree to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water, looking to his wife for guidance like an obedient husband.

Now, the three marplots who had joined the colony were much put out at having to leave Paris for a considerable time in order to save for themselves the women they loved. Even on the voyage they put their heads together to devise a plan for being revenged on the colonists for the sacrifice they were obliged to make. Naturally it was easy for them to get control of the other men colonists, for the latter being content to let the women do their thinking were not disposed to think for themselves; consequently, associating with men who were disposed to lead them, they naturally followed.

Now, it so happened that soon after the colony was established a ship stopped at the island loaded with a fierce band of Arabs from the African coast, bent on plunder. Mme. Drivaux called upon the men to attack the invaders and drive them away. Jules Champinois, one of the three men who had been plotting against the success of the colonial scheme, said:

"We are ready to drive these men away, but we would be pleased if you would give us a plan of attack. It is our part to do the fighting, but your part to tell us how. Shall we take the offensive or act upon the defensive? Shall we use guns or shall we rely on our bayonets?"

Mme. Drivaux looked scornfully on M. Champinois, stamped her foot and told him to drive the rascals away without asking any further questions.

The women who were about their chief were much frightened.

"This colony is organized," continued the men's spokesman, "on the plan that you women do the thinking and we men the work and the fighting. Our portion of the good things we have is for doing these alone. It is not just that we should be called upon to think and fight. If we must do both we can't see wherein you are superior to us, and we call upon you to surrender the leadership in our favor."

The Arabs were stealing up on these poor women while the men were standing idle.

"We shall be murdered!" "Cowards! Do your duty!"

These expressions on the further approach of the enemy gave place to "For heaven's sake save us and you may have everything!"

"Resign the thinking power or perish!" cried Champinois.

"We resign!" replied a hundred voices.

"Follow me!" and, turning, he led the men against the enemy, who ran to their ships and sailed away.

The next day after a triple wedding the colony broke up and returned to France.

Milady's Mirror

For Greasy Skins.

A greasy, shiny skin is one of the ills to which many of us are liable. One can never manage to look nice with a shiny nose and greasy skin. Don't think that by simply smothering the face all over with powder you will cure this trouble. Try instead this plan: Add a teaspoonful of cloudy ammonia to the water in which you wash. This has a very drying effect upon the skin—not too drying, be it said, but it serves to counteract the excessive action of the pores. Before going out dust a very little powder over your face, but don't dab it on indiscriminately. If you continue putting ammonia in your washing water all through the summer you will find that your skin will lose its tendency to greasiness in due course.

The Old Rag Curler.

There is nothing that will make the hair curl as naturally as the old fashioned rag curlers. However today the fastidious woman is making her curlers out of ribbon, choosing her favorite color for them.

Select ribbon three inches wide and eleven inches long. Double this, twist together loosely and sew narrow ribbon of the same shade at each end. After the hair is rolled over the ribbon tie firmly together with the narrow ribbon ends.

Make two small flat bows with ends four inches long. Fasten one at each side with the ends pinned down toward the ears and you have almost hidden the curlers except where the color peeps through at intervals.

New High Hairdressing.

Hairdressing, though it appears to be very simple, is really a most complicated affair nowadays, for unless one has just the right twist to the hair and, above all, just the right kind of big, loose wave now in vogue, the coiffure will not look smart nor quite as it should.

High hairdressing brought back from the forehead severely demands some softening feature to make it becoming. This is supplied in the big loose waves which are seen in all the newest coiffures. The hair is marceled lightly in waves, which are large and loose, and while these do not take away from the severe effect now so much in vogue they add greatly to the becoming effect of the new hairdressing.

When Feet Are Tired.

When one has much walking to do tired and aching feet are the rule rather than the exception. The following plan is exceedingly effective: Before going out for a very long walk rub a little methylated spirit well into the soles of the feet. Do the same on coming in. You have no idea how refreshing it is and how it helps to cure any undue sensitiveness and prevents the formation of blisters. Never go out for very long walks in very thin silk stockings, for not only is this a most extravagant procedure, walking causing them to wear into holes, but thin stockings are very tiring to the feet.

Oatmeal For the Bath.

If the skin is rough and irritated by heat try the oatmeal bath. Make a number of cheesecloth bags four inches square and fill them loosely with the following mixture: Five pounds of oatmeal, one pound of Florentine orris root (powdered), one pound of almond meal, half pound castile soap scraped fine as powder. This makes a large quantity, but is cheapest when made in these proportions. One of these bags thrown into the warm plunge bath is most comforting and makes the skin soft and white.

Brush and Comb Set.

A compactly built brush and comb set for traveling has recently made its appearance in the shops. Constructed of white celluloid, it has the back of the comb, which is shorter by about two inches than the average size, hinged together with narrow row of bristles. When not in use the two toilet articles can be laid together flat and tucked into a pocket or compartment of the traveling case. The combination comb and brush is particularly convenient for train use, as it can be carried in the pocket.

LITTLE CHANGE IN THE PRICES

Brisk Buying at Market This Morning

EGGS AT 40 CENTS

As one watched the crowds who were marketing today, he could easily have persuaded himself it was a Christmas market. Brisk buying, good prices and surplus produce with little change in prices since last Saturday were the features. All kinds of fowl were offered at prices to suit the average buyer. Nice juicy turkeys went at $1.65, $1.50 and $1.45; dressed geese at $1.00 and $1.10 and chickens for $1.00 a pair. Eggs still cling to top-notch prices with none to be had at less than 40 cents. "Our hens are not laying in anything like usual form," said one farmer. "We have 50 and haven't had any eggs to sell for two weeks.

Potatoes sold at 65 and 70 cents a bag.

Very little roast beef was offered but there was a surplus of pork. Apples were also plentiful and all other kinds of garden produce. Butter was also offered in abundance. Some of the principal offerings and their prices were:—

Butter—30 cents.
Eggs—40 cents.
Apples—$2.50 per barrel.
Potatoes—65 and 70 cents.
Turkeys—$1.50 and $2.00.
Gees—$1.00 and $1.10.
Chickens—$1.00 a pair.
Beef—10 and 11 cents.
Pork—12 and 13 cents.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 4.—Trading was light in options on the Winnipeg market today, and prices fractionally higher. With lower prices on the local and American markets Thursday Liverpool cables were expected to be easier, instead of which they came unchanged. This influenced higher opening figures, December being unchanged and May and July ⅛c higher, following which further advances took place later with a strong undertone. Good export trading was reported in the south, while there was little or nothing doing in that line here today. Heavy contracts for export were made yesterday. Wheat closed ¼c to ⅜c higher, oats unchanged to ⅛c higher, and flax ⅛c to 1c higher.

The cash demand for wheat was fair, exporters buying to fill space. Offerings were moderate. Cash oats, barley and flax were slow, flax prices advancing in line with Duluth.

Inspections Thursday numbered 415 cars, as against 943 last year, and in sight were 300 cars.

Deliveries thru the clearing house were: Wheat 12,000 bushels, oats 171,500, and flax 88,000 bushels.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—Export in Manitoba spring wheat today was quiet, owing to the fact that cables were weaker, and the prices bid in some cases were fully ½c per quarter out of line with exporters views.

There was no further change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, prices for oats being firm, with a fair trade in car lots. The flour market is without any new feature, business being quiet for both local and export account. Mill feed is very firm under a good demand and small supplies.

Demand for butter is slow, but there is a steady enquiry for cheese, and the undertone of the market is strong. Eggs fairly active and firm.

A NATION BUILDER

Canadian Welfare League Cares for New-comers.

Winnipeg's Civic Industrial Bureau holds many interesting things and people, but, tucked away in one of the second-storey rooms I found something and somebody symbolizing much in Canadian national life—the Canadian Welfare League and its secretary, says Florence Randall Livesay in a recent article. A man with the face of a practical idealist, if you can imagine such a combination, is giving himself and his undoubted literary and magnetic powers to the betterment of his country with a fine abandon of strength and energy, tempered with the saving grace of humor and of good sense; delighting in it, since "happy is the man who has found his work."

Toorнto University has sent many of her best men to the West, and, while they do not forget their Alma Mater, they inevitably become absorbed in the new field, and soon are surprised to find themselves quite willing to be classed as "good westerner. Mr. Woodsworth was a student at Victoria College before Manitoba University took him to her sheltering arms, and later he took a post-graduate course at Oxford. While there he made a special study of settlement work, and spent some time in the slums of East London. It was natural, then, that while engaged in a ministerial capacity in Winnipeg he should give full play to the bent shown in his college days, and the work being done by Mrs. Margaret Scott and others in forming the Winnipeg Coffee and Lodging House claimed his energies. That led eventually to the taking over of the system of civic relief by the Associated Charities (formed with this end in view), and after that the Playground Commission, wider use of schools, and many important civic reforms have found in the secretary of the Welfare League an enthusiastic helper.

It is chiefly with All People's Mission and work among the foreign immigrants that his name has up to the present been associated.

Mr. Woodsworth's record will show the necessity for this latest venture into nation-building, and he, more than any other man in Canada, is in a position to know what needs to be done. Practically the only two books on the great subject of work among Canadian foreign immigrants claim him as author, these being "The Stranger Within Our Gates" and "My Neighbor." They are written in a delightfully sympathetic way, and all his statistics and "cases" are so informed with humor and comprehension of the stranger's outlook that one realises that if this reformer had not his whole heart in "doing things" he would have made a high place for himself as a writer. During the past six years he has delivered over 500 addresses from Halifax to Vancouver, at the invitation of various societies.

Then there is his "People's Forum," a Sunday afternoon gathering addressed weekly by men of all nations, a highly successful attempt to make progress in the understanding of the foreigner's viewpoint in Canada, and an assurance to him that the adopted country is anxious to help him to help himself. The Forum has permanent headquarters now in the splendid auditorium of the St. John's Technical Institute.

One of the chief objects of the league is the giving out of all information looking towards the solution of social and economic problems, and raising the standard of citizenship and national life. It is a social service clearing-house, where every community in Canada—city, town, or rural district can learn how to initiate many new activities such as the study of child welfare, care of immigrants, public health, good housing, city planning, formation of philanthropic institutions, industrial organizations, social settlement, and the study of rural problems.

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live. Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

UPHOLDS SMOKING

Famous Medical Journal Has Much to Say in Favor of the Weed

In appealing for a generous supply of tobacco for British soldiers and sailors at the front, The Lancet asked those who objected to the use of the "weed" to lay aside their prejudices and consider what a source of comfort it was, how even at home it "does much to allay the restlessness and muscular irritability engendered by mental and physical fatigue." It said there could be little doubt that tobacco filled an important place in the psycho-physiological affairs of the human race.

"Smoking," says the Lancet, "is a custom that has widely prevailed among men distinguished by their judgment and by their success in the worlds of art, science and literature—men who have played a great part in solving the problems of existence in its many difficult details.

"Huxley once confessed that amongst his fellow students at the hospital he was exposed to considerable temptations to smoke, but on his essaying to acquire the habit he soon found himself on the floor. He gave it up for forty years. On the occasion of a tour in Brittany, however, he found on a very wet and cold day a companion who looked so happy with his cigar before the warm fire within the inn that he thought he would try to smoke again. And then I found myself a changed man. I found that I was in the position of a lamentable pervert, although the person who led me astray was most distinguished and a late president of the British Association. From that day I date my ruin. For, from that day, whenever smoking is going on, you may be pretty sure that I join it.'"

TRY SHORTER SEASON IN THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Ante-season Training May be Abolished to Reduce Expenses of Clubs

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Conditions imposed by the war have necessitated a policy of all-round retrenchment on the part of the Canadian League. The season will be shortened two weeks, opening on May 19 and closing on Labor Day as usual. At the annual meeting here yesterday President J. P. Fitzgerald advocated the abolition of ante-season training as a further means of reducing expenses. No change was made in the circuit and none is contemplated at present, although there was no emphatic statement that none might be made before the opening of the 1915 season. The circuit will remain in Class C., with salary limit of $1,400.

Ottawa again proved to be the best paying town, with London next and Hamilton third. Toronto was a great disappointment. The percentage paid into the league's sinking fund was as follows:—

Ottawa	$2,269
London	1,616
Hamilton	1,091
Brantford	613
Peterboro	605
Erie	753
St. Thomas	455
Toronto	282

In connection with the local club it might be pointed out that it played only one-third as many games as the others at home, and had few Saturday and no holiday dates.

The league showed a balance of $1,300 on the season, with all debts paid. President Fitzgerald was in the chair, and the following delegates were present: London, S. Stevely, St. Thomas, J. H. Chantler, Erie, Geo. H. O'Neil; Ottawa, F. Shaughnessy; Toronto, J. J. McCaffery, Geo. Lee; Hamilton, J. E. Frid; Peterboro, W. H. Denham.

PRESTON CLUB IS UNDECIDED

As to Entering a Senior O.H.A. Team This Season

Preston, Dec. 5. — The management of the local hockey club has not yet decided how many teams will enter the O.H.A.. Two teams are sure, but whether the third will be entered will not be decided until next week. The management is continually being asked if it is going to play senior O.H.A. this year, but the question remains unanswered. The management is prepared to enter a team in the O.H.A.

"If the other teams of Western Ontario are prepared to play senior why they can rest assured that the Preston team will be right in line," said one official. "A group consisting of the following teams would make one of the finest districts in the O.H.A., and the winners would go some distance before being defeated: Sarnia, Stratford, London, Paris, Berlin and Preston." There is a possibility that Hamilton would join the ranks, and the local management is anxiously waiting to hear from some of the other cities as to their intentions as to hockey this coming winter.

COMMENT
As You Like it

THE REGRET felt by fans of Hamilton on learning of "Dug" Palmer's athletic career being so abruptly closed, is well voiced by Bobby Robinson in the Hamilton Spectator by the following:—

"Palmer's misfortune is deeply regretted by every hockey and rugby enthusiast in Hamilton. The Galt boy long ago established a grand reputation as a hockey player. He endeared himself to local fans last winter when he played for the Hamilton Centennials. He made his football debut in this city a year ago as a member of the Hamilton Rowing Club senior O.R.F.U. team. This season he was found with the Tigers, for whom he played good rugby. He was always a clean player who went into the games because he liked them; an ideal sportsman in every way. He has the sincere wish of every athletic follower in this city for a speedy recovery."

"OLD DOC" RITTER, the famous rugby coach of Regina has announced his intention of running for alderman of that city. Ritter was surely a great player in days past on the gridiron and if he employs the same aggressive above-board and impartial tactics around the council board which he has used on the gridiron he will prove to be one of the best aldermen Regina ever had. The sporting editors of the Province and Standard say they are behind Fred Ritter for alderman, first, last and all the time.

TRENTON WILL BE out of O.H. A. hockey this winter. The rink at that town was burned last year and has never been rebuilt. It hardly seems possible that Trenton should be out of the game for their team was always a hard proposition for other teams in this vicinity. It is to be hoped that another year will find them returning to the fold.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Canadian League yesterday the local representative suggested the appointment of a committee to consider the question of the rain and game guarantees so that the smaller towns would pay a smaller sum. No change was made. Ottawa will still pay $75 and the other clubs $50.

PETERBORO JUNIORS met last night and decided to get busy at once for the opening of the season. Judging from material in sight the boys will make a strong bid for O. H. A. honors. Most of the players are training and the rest will begin next week. They will hold a workout this afternoon on Boiler's Creek.

THE "LEMON" HAS JUMPED

"Rube" Marquard Signs With Brooklyn Federals

New York, Dec. 5.—"Rube" Marquard, one of the New York National League Club's trio of leading pitchers, signed a contract yesterday to to pitch for the Brooklyn Federal League Baseball Club, according to an announcement made by President Robert B. Ward, of the club yesterday afternoon.

Secretary John B. Foster, of the New York National League Club, when questioned regarding Marquard's status as a free agent, said that the pitcher was under contract to the Giants in a series of three interlocking contracts, which covered his playing services for 1915 and 1916, and gave the New York Club an option on his services for 1917.

Foster scouted the idea that Marquard could play for any other team than the Giants for the next two seasons and intimated that the case would be taken to court if the southpaw endeavored to jump to the independent league.

President David Fultz, of the Baseball Players' Fraternity, stated last night that the report of Marquard's signing with the Federals was hard to believe, but that, if it were true, Marquard undoubtedly would be expelled from the Fraternity.

Mr. Ward stated that Marquard had signed the Brooklyn Federal League contract in triplicate, in addition to making an affidavit that it was a free agent in a baseball sense, and had received and receipted for an advance payment under his Federal League contract.

VERDUN IS QUITE SAFE

"Invested" City Free From Germans for Twenty-five Miles

IN THE FRENCH LINES, Dec. 5.—Verdun, the great central doorway of the Lorraine frontier, is not only banged, barred and bolted against the invader, but it covers an area, if not of perfect peace, at least of perfect security. Verdun has been advertised by the German commanders as being subject to a close investment. They even claimed to have captured some of the forts. No doubt the German people imagine it is besieged. I wish some of their representaives, if they have any free men who could tell them the simple truth, could have accompanied us in at least a part of this tour of inspection, which has been of extraordinary interest. No better proof, perhaps, could be offered in such small compass of the futility of the adventure in which the Prussian generals have involved them.

Verdun has never been besieged. Its communications are untaken. It is the centre of a district in which there is no menace. On north, west and east there is at least 20 miles distance before the zone of German gun fire is reached. The road to the city through Argonne is safe, and as quiet as the road from York to London. On the south the Germans touch the Meuse at only one single point, St. Mihiel. To reach it from Metz there is but one single difficult road, and all along that line the position of the Germans is exceedingly precarious. Around a semi-circle north of Verdun the French armies make slow but steady progress. They are prepared for winter as well as any armies can be.

PREPARING FOR SIEGE.

City of Strassburg Feels Pressure of French Advance.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—G. F. Bertelli, the war correspondent writes:—

"Private information has reached me from the Swiss frontier showing that the French progress in Alsace, which has been considerable in the past week, is causing the utmost alarm to the German defenders and constitutes a serious menace to Strassburg. The Germans are feverishly preparing to defend that famous fortress. Dozens of private woods and parks which might serve to cover an advancing French army have been razed in the southern and western suburbs of Strassburg. The French progress near Colma is formidable, while Guebweiler is almost completely surrounded. The Germans have also mined several quarters of Muhlhausen in order to dynamite the town at the moment of the French entry, which is considered imminent."

THE RELUCTANT SCHOLAR

OH, Willie's teachers all declare
  Since he's getting bigger
It's very strange he does not care
  To read or write or figger!

But Willie's father said that he
  Has felt fierce agitations
Through reading things that proved to be
  Extreme exaggerations.

And Willie's father said that once
  His heart was deeply smitten
And that he proved himself a dunce
  Through things that he had written.

And Willie's father further spoke
  And said his gifts tremendous
For figgering were what left him broke
  When he sought wealth stupendous.

To be effectively employed
  A proper education
With some restraint should be enjoyed
  And prudent moderation.

And that is why his father, kind,
  When others cry, "The Silly!"
Observes: "He has a cautious mind.
  I have great hopes of Willie."

"Why, how can you tell?" asked her mother.

"'Cause there ain't nothin' more left on his plate," was the reply.

The Sunday school class was singing "I Want to Be an Angel," and the teacher said to one little fellow who was silent, "Why don't you sing, Willie?"

"'Cause I don't want to be an angel just now," was the reply.—Kansas City Times.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. George Spicer of Trenton was in the city yesterday.

Mr. W. B. Barton, of Portland, Maine, is visiting in the city.

Miss Gertrude Reid, who has been training in the military hospital in Quebec, returned to town on Wednesday.

An "at home" will be held in St. George's Church rectory on Tuesday, December 15th, of which fuller particulars will be given later.

Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Brace, of Caledonia, formerly of Peterboro, celebrated their golden wedding on Wednesday.

The pupils of St. Mary's Convent presented Very Rev. Dean McColl with a handsome hat-rack. Miss Kathleen Burke made the presentation.

Friends of Mrs. John Deannard, Lake Street, will be pleased to learn that she is rapidly convalescing after her recent operation for appendicitis. She is as St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mayor Buller was in Toronto yesterday attending the meeting of the Grand Council of the Loyal Order of Moose and was elected Past Dictator.

Mr. Bravender, from Winnipeg, passed through the city on his way to New York this week, and is returning to the West on Saturday. His mother and sister will join him in Chicago.

The crown prince is giving interviews to the papers, and says that he is a soldier. He may think he is a soldier, but the evidence he hands down would not get past any good jury.

There has been considerable change in the status of the British nation, since Dettingen, 171 years ago, when the last British king was on the battlefront. And yet, as an occasion of inspiration to their troops, there still appears use for them there.—Hamilton Spectator.

Friends of Mr. Harry McDonald of Perry Street will regret to learn that he is in St. Joseph's Hospital after being operated on for an attack of appendicitis. The operation was performed last evening and reports today state that Mr. McDonald's condition is quite serious. Dr. McNulty is in attendance.

The vocal recital in the Collegiate on Monday by Miss Dorothy Allan and Mr. Maurice Park promises to be one of the best programs ever given in the city. The program is of an unusually high standard and contains some of the best operatic arias known. As the proceeds are to be given to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund, it is to be hoped the public will respond in large numbers.

The final yearly meeting of the Life Underwriters' Association was held at the Oriental Hotel on Friday at one o'clock and took the form of a luncheon. The chair was taken by Mr. T. W. Robinson, the president of the association, and about fourteen members were present. After the luncheon, two very able papers were given. The first by Mr. Sedgewick, on "Industrial Insurance"; the second by Mr. Haslam on the same subject.

The concert which will be given by the children at the Conservatory this evening is sure to be most enjoyable, and it is to be hoped that a good audience will be present to encourage the little performers. There is certainly nothing prettier to be seen than a number of little ones going through their parts, and the class of teaching provided at the Conservatory makes the work of even the younger pupils quite worth hearing.

The L.O.L. of District No. 3 held a very successful basket social last evening in the W.O.W. Hall, the proceeds of which will go to the building fund for the new hall to be erected on Brock Street. The band of L.O.L. No. 5 marched from the Simcoe St. hall to Brock St. and then returned to the W.O.W. hall.

It is estimated that some 250 people were present and thoroughly enjoyed the evening. W. J. Hancock acted as auctioneer for the selling of the baskets.

BRITAIN WILL TAKE MORE STRINGENT METHODS TO STOP LAYING OF MINES

All Lightships, Buoys and Signals in Specified Area Are to be Withdrawn or Shifted and Special Pilots Provided for Bona Fide Neutrals.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—That it is the intention of the Government to take more stringent measures to hinder the operations of mine-laying and other hostile craft in the English Channel is indicated by a notice issued last night. This notice says that after Dec. 10, within a specific area of the channel, all lightships, buoys and signal lights are likely to be withdrawn or shifted. Advice is given merchant vessels that navigation within this area will be exceedingly dangerous without the aid of pilots who are to be stationed in certain ports.

The North German Lloyd steamer Berlin, which was recently interned at Trondhjem, Norway, had, according to a statement issued by the British Admiralty last night, probably been engaged in extensive mine-laying operations.

When the Berlin put into Trondhjem, the Admiralty says, she was "almost empty of coal and with her speed considerably reduced, due, presumably, to fast steaming."

Continuing the report says:—

"She has especially been fitted for mine-laying, but so far as known, she now has no mines on board, the probability being that these have been sown on the high seas under cover of darkness. From past experience, it is known that the track of merchant shipping, neutral as well as British, is favored locality for this operation.

"German floating mines are constantly being sighted. On many occasions these mines have proved to be still dangerous. Merchant vessels should, therefore, be warned of the grave danger to which they are exposed. They must bear in mind that waters which, owing to their great depth, heretofore have been regarded as comparatively safe, must now be navigated with caution."

HE HEADS THE SALVATIONISTS

New Commander of Army in Canada Has Had Wide Experience.

Commissioner William J. Richards, now Commander of the Salvation Army in New Zealand, has been appointed Commissioner for Canada. The appointment of such a capable administrator and organizer as he is known to be, has met with wholehearted approval from all sections of the army's work in this country.

Commissioner Richards has had a very diversified experience during his connection with the Salvation Army, having been a British Provincial Officer and Chief Secretary for the City Colony Section of the Men's Social Work. He has also been a territorial commander for Denmark, South Africa, and his present command, New Zealand. In every one of his commands he has met with substantial success. In each of the countries in which the commissioner has served he has been remembered by his outstanding quality of thoroughness. Whenever he visits a town a careful record is made to the date, numbers present at his services, the amount of offering, the hall in which the services are held, and the subjects on which he spoke. At Capetown, while on a visit a short time ago, the Commissioner spoke on two hundred and fifty different subjects. This method, therefore, prevents him from repeating himself.

The children of Commissioner and Mrs. Richards are to be found engaged in Salvation Army work in various parts of the world. They are in Java, South Africa, South America, Germany, New Zealand, and Great Britain.

Some interesting stories of the Commissioner's younger days have been recorded by him when in the company of old friends. While still young in years he married a Salvationist, their wedding being conducted in accordance with Salvation Army procedure. During his first days in the Salvation Army William Richards had a difficult time endeavoring to break the tobacco habit, but soon he became an aggressive Salvationist.

After young Richards had been a short time a soldier at the corps of Merthyr Tydvil in England, the General visited the town, and hearing Richards speak, called him to one side and said: "I want you to go to the Training Home." And after three or four weeks' training Richards with his young wife were sent to take charge of the Salvation Army corps at Tunbridge Wells. When they arrived they found their new charge in a disaffected condition. There had been a split in the corps and those remaining loyal to the organization were but few in number. There were but three soldiers on the platform with the new officers on the first night, and these new officers had never conducted a service.

The corps at Tunbridge Wells is a large one to-day. At the time mentioned, those who remained loyal to the principles of the corps were people of experience and ability, and when the three soldiers on the platform had spoken young Captain Richards said to himself: "I must go home; I can't speak like these people; they can never respect me as their leader." He was a dispirited young man as he with his wife went from the service to their lodgings, and sent a letter to the chief of the staff describing his feelings and his circumstances. He received a reply: it was: "Go on."

This he resolved to do and to fit himself for his work by hard study. To that end he rose at five o'clock each morning. Sometimes during the dark cold mornings of the winter it was hard practice to maintain, but he would lock himself in the room in which he studied and, pushing the key under the door out of his reach, would make himself a prisoner until his self-imposed task was done.

Late Navigation

When the sturdy little "Geneva" steamed up the Otonabee this morning she set a record for late navigation, as far as the memory of Lock Master William Collins dates back. She brought up fifty passengers, who made quite an imposing procession as they walked up George street from the wharf, most of them going to the market.

Navigation was considered over on the Otonabee and Rice Lake two weeks ago, when several inches of ice formed. The subsequent warm spell and rains soon put this to rout, and made navigation again possible.

PEOPLE OF SMITH ARE INDIGNANT

There's a man at Bridgenorth who knows more than anybody else in the world. He came to the office of a contemporary of his own polilitical persuasion and told them that the Peterboro Home Guard was nothing more than a political organization. A man who would talk like this and discount the efforts of the kind ladies of Smith, on behalf of the suffering and distressed ought to be taken out to the town pump and given a much needed washing.

He fancies himself an idealist when as a matter of fact he is a blatherer. In the meantime there is so much indignation among the right thinking people of Smith that only consideration for his stupidity prevents more strenuous methods.

ROBINSON LEADS THE LIBERALS

Ex-Premier is Chosen by Large Convention

FREDERICTON, N.B., Dec. 5.—At a conference of Liberals, in which all parts of New Brunswick were represented, here yesterday, Hon. C. W. Robinson, ex-Premier of the province, was chosen as the leader of the party in the next elections. Hon. Mr. Robinson accepted in an optimistic speech.

Along with the choice of Hon. Mr. Robinson as leader, the conference adopted resolutions suggesting planks for his platform, which, if adopted, at a regularly called convention to come later, will take both the crown lands and the railroads out of politics and ensure a proper and efficient management of both.

The choice of Mr. Robinson as leader was made by a large committee, representing every county in the province, and was unanimously endorsed by the leaders at the conference at yesterday afternoon's session. Mr. Robinson, in accepting, declared it was time for regeneration, and that public men must be guided by the principles of right and justice, and no longer by the trickery of political expediency.

THE "TURCOS"

French Colonial Troops Are Full Blooded Arabs Officered by Whites

The announcement that, in an heroic charge, a battalion of Turcos was almost wiped out, seems to have puzzled not a few people, who apparently think they are an Oriental corps which in some mysterious way has been mobilized to assist the allies. The confusion arises from the fact that "Turcos" is a slang name for the Tirailleurs, one of the best of the French colonial forces. The Tirailleurs, indeed, are a corps of sharpshooters, who have been practically trained from boyhood to fight. The greater proportion of the Turcos are Arabs of pure blood, though the officers and non-commissioned officers are mostly French. Excluding the French element, all the Turcos are Mohammedan, and death has no terrors for them. To die in war is for them to enter the Mussulman Paradise.

In years gone by they fought amongst themselves, tribe against tribe, and at one time used their swords against the French. Ultimately they became French subjects, and are now only too glad to have a go at the enemies of France. The Turcos are born fighters, possessing extraordinary powers of endurance, for they have been brought up to "rough it" from infancy. Furthermore, as Mr. C. W. Randle points out, they are accustomed to living on next to nothing.

The Turco's staple diet is boiled semolina, seasoned with some simple sauce and sometimes eaten with vegetables. A little mutton or goat-flesh is occasionally added, but the semolina is the mainstay. Few soldiers carry such a weight on their shoulders as the Turcos. Their knapsacks weigh from some 80 to 100 pounds, for, in addition to his own kit, each man carries some portion of the camp equipment. Then there is, of course the rifle.

With their black, straight hair, surmounted by a red fez, and their black beards, and wearing a sort of blouse or loose tunic with baggy Moorish trousers, strong boots of a greyish leather, and cloth anklebands, they make one of the most picturesque corps at present engaged in the war.

A Tug of War.

The well-dressed, portly man stood for several moments watching the brawny drayman who was laboriously tugging at a large, heavy laden box, which seemed almost as wide as the doorway through which he was trying to move it. Presently the kindly disposed onlooker approached the perspiring drayman and said with a patronizing air: "Like to have a lift?"

"Bet yer life," the other replied, and for the next two minutes the two men on opposite sides of the box worked, lifted, puffed and wheezed, but the box stuck fast. They went at it again, but it did not move an inch. Finally the portly man straightened up and said between puffs, "I don't believe we can get it in there."

"Get it in?" the drayman almost shouted. "Why, you blamed muttonhead, I'm trying to get it out!"

Million More Acres Sown.

It was learned at the Ontario Agricultural Department that Ontario is seeding down one million more acres of wheat this fall than ever before in her history. This follows the appeal of the Federal and Provincial Governments for the expansion of cereal production in view of next year's demand from Europe. Definite figures are not yet obtainable.

DR. HODGETTS TAKES HOLD

He is Now Canada's Commissioner For Red Cross Work.

Dr. Charles A. Hodgetts, of Ottawa, who has been appointed commissioner for the Canadian Red Cross Society in succession to the late Col. Burland, of Montreal, who died recently in London, was for many years secretary of the Provincial Board of Health of Ontario and chief medical health officer of the province with headquarters at Toronto. He resigned this position a few years ago in order to take charge of the health department of the Dominion Conservation Commission, with which organization he is still identified. He is looked upon as one of the most competent and authoritative of Canadian officials in matters pertaining to health.

Dr. Hodgetts sailed recently for England and proceeded at once to report to the British Red Cross Society, of which the Canadian Red Cross Society is a branch, and whose particular duty will be to look after the sick and wounded from the Canadian overseas contingent. Dr. Hodgetts will direct the distribution of supplies sent over from Canada and especially those sent from the headquarters in Toronto. The Canadian public will be kept informed of the work, its progress, and its needs through the chairman of the Toronto Executive Committee, Noel Marshall.

Dr. Hodgetts states that he feels tremendously the responsibility of the work placed in his hands and says he will endeavor to the utmost to see that it is performed as efficiently as possible. Dr. Hodgetts has accepted the position on a voluntary basis and will not be paid for it. He went to England to fill the new position with the approval of Premier Borden and Chairman Clifford Sifton, of the Conservation Commission. No better choice probably could be found in Canada for the commissionership of the Canadian Red Cross Society, as Dr. Hodgetts has been actively engaged in medical health work for the past 20 years. He was the honorary secretary of the Canadian Red Cross Society when it was formed 16 years ago and it was he who carried on the organization's work in connection with the South African war. He subsequently became the first life member of the organization in Canada and for over 20 years he has been prominently connected with the St. John's Ambulance Corps. For the past 15 years he has been doing similar work in connection with the Royal Artillery Medical Corps, branch of the Canadian militia. He is now a lieutenant-colonel in that body, and was for five weeks stationed with the first contingent at Valcartier looking after the medical arrangements there. He is everywhere throughout the Dominion looked upon as the foremost medical health authority in this country.

Dr. Hodgetts was born in Toronto in 1859. He is a graduate of Victoria University and the Ontario College of Pharmacy and has taken postgraduate courses in the leading hospitals of Great Britain, Germany and France. He was house surgeon at the London General Hospital for a time and also at the Toronto General Hospital and resident assistant surgeon at the Stafford Infirmary, England. He was medical inspector of the Provincial Board of Health, later secretary for a number of years, and subsequently registrar general of the province before being made head of the Dominion health department in connection with the Conservation Commission. He is the author of a large number of important works on health and holds high office in a large number of medical organizations, being vice president of the American Health Association and a prominent officer in a great number of similar societies.

Insurance Men Warned.

Advice has been received at Ottawa from the Imperial Government that some time ago the Board of Trade issued an announcement warning insurance companies against the business of insuring cargoes in neutral vessels, from capture. The announcement was as follows:

"It has been brought to the notice of the Board of Trade that British insurance companies have insured or re-insured goods shipped on neutral vessels against the risk of capture, or detention, by His Majesty's Government, or allied Governments.

"The Board of Trade are advised that such contracts of insurance, or re-insurance, against the risk of capture, or detention, by Great Britain, or her allies, are prohibited by the law of England, and they think it necessary to warn insurance companies and underwriters against such business."

Neutrality.

Mrs. Newlywed—We are neutral, aren't we, George?

Mr. Newlywed—Yes, dear.

"We mustn't show any bias, must we?"

"No."

"Then I did just right."

"In what way?"

"Why, I gave all our French mustard and our German soap and our English breakfast tea and our Russian caviar to Mary, the cook. Mary said she didn't think her folks were neutrals—and she was quite sure they needed the soap and things. Wasn't that thoughtful of me?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHY SHOULD WE BUY AT HOME?

Because our interests are here.

Because the community that is good enough for us to live in, is good enough for us to buy in.

Because we believe in transacting business with our friends.

Because we want to see the goods we are buying.

Because we want to get what we buy when we pay for it.

Because some part of every dollar we spend at home stays at home and helps work for the welfare of our home town.

Because the home man we buy from stands back of the goods, thus always giving value received.

Because the man we buy from pays his share of taxes.

Because the man we buy from helps to support our poor and needy, our schools, our churches, and our homes.

Because, when luck, misfortune or bereavement comes the man we buy from is here with his kindly expressions of greeting, his words of cheer, and, if need be, his pocketbook.

Let us make Peterboro a good place in which to work and live.

It's easy and certain if each one will contribute his share.

Legend of the Teapot

The Chinese claim to be the first users of tea as a drink, and how it originated is told in a pretty little legend that dates from 2,000 years before the coming of Christ.

A daughter of a then reigning sovereign fell in love with a young nobleman whose humble birth excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her.

One day in the palace garden the sweethearts met, and the young man endeavored to give her a few flowers, but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants that all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and toward evening she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and stalks. Every day afterward she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated in the same way.

Imitation being the sincerest form of flattery, the ladies of the court tried the experiment and with such pleasing results that the custom spread throughout the kingdom—and the great Chinese tea industry became one of the greatest businesses in the world.—London Tit-Bits.

Public Works Going On.

The program of public works under construction by the Government is being carried out in spite of the financial stringency. The expenditure of ordinary and capital accounts up to the end of October exceeded the expenditure on these accounts last year by about eight million dollars.

To minimize unemployment, all works under contract are being carried on just as the Ministerj of Finance in his August budget intimated would be the case.

New works will only be entered upon as the source of revenue from which expenditure might be met, become apparent. Since the outbreak of war the money markets of the world have been closed to public borrowing.

WILL YOU DO YOUR DUTY ?

HELP BOOST THE PATRIOTIC FUND

THE Patriotic Fund Publicity Committee wants to gain the attention of the people. It is the function of this committee to put the facts arguments, pleadings, and if necessary imploring that will enable the goal of $50,000 to be reached.

"How," says an enquirer, "are you going to do it?" Here's a starter.

On Monday morning the employes of the Ackerman Company factory will donate their pay for that day, which will include the wages of the men and the salaries of the staff. Even Mr. B. F. Ackerman is to get into the line, takes off his coat, and will work with the men in order to be in line with the others.

Now, this idea of giving the day's work is the result of a proposition made to the men, and in fact all the employes, and which has been most heartily accepted. Approximately $175.00 will be added to the fund from this source. All honor to the men and women who are willing.

The General Committee of the fund are preparing a slate, setting out, in anticipation, what could be realized. Of course, the slate is in some respect conjectural, but includes the following:

Two at $5000.00	$10,000
Three at $2500.00	7,500
Ten at $1000.00	10,000
Ten at $500.00	5,000
Fifty at $100.00	5,000
Fifty at $50.00	2,500
Fifty at $40.00	2,000
One hundred at $25.00	2,500
Fifty at $20.00	1,000
Two hundred at $10.00	2,000
Small amounts	2,500

We can very well learn from the experience of others and from what has been done in other places. Take Berlin, for example, and a very good one, too. It probably heads the list of Canadian cities for extent of giving, population and resources considered. It is notably and magnificently good.

Berlin's Canadian Patriotic Fund.

The Berlin Patriotic Fund has now well nigh reached $100,000. This is a splendid showing for a city the size of Berlin. The figures below will show how this large amount of money was contributed:

From manufacturers	$26,000
From city council commission and officials	16,975
From mechanics and clerks	16,220
From business men other than manufacturers	12,113
From commercial travellers	2,939
From legal fraternity and officials	2,845
From Collegiate Institute staff and pupils	1,697
From hotelmen	1,500
From bank staffs	1,109
From physicians	940
From lodges and societies	850
From public school pupils	682
From dentists	450
From stret railway employes	380
From fire department	156
From St. Jerome College and students	116
From the Assyrians	76
Fgom city clergymen	40
From the Chinese	10
From citizens not included in the foregoing	10,936
Total	$86,859

To have raised nearly $100,000 for a patriotic purpose in a city of 19,000 population is no small thing. It is an average of over $5 per head.

The mechanics, clerks and general public contributed $27,166, showing that the response on the part of our citizens was widespread.

Berlin may well congratulate itself on the outcome of its effort and those who so capably managed the campaign for it.

How well will Peterborough do? That remains to be seen. It will depend on the spirit and will of the people. If each one gives what he or they can easily spare the goal will not be reached. We must give until we feel hurt to accomplish the final sum.

Many associations and organizations are working to raise sums all to be devoted to the general good. These moneys will find a use along different channels. In connection with the detail of these efforts there is one feature that should be discontinued and that is the incessant assault made on the merchants to make donations of goods. It is not right, it is not seemly. By themselves these contributions are not large, but in the aggregate they amount up. The requests for goods or service come from customers to the stores where they trade. He must cut prices, and reluctantly, for he knows that the acquiescence is only the prelude for another attack.

In justice to the merchant he should get credit. He never will as long as he is importuned to make donations. Better if he, if all merchants would refuse to be bothered, but make one substantial subscription and be done with and receive the credit he deserves. There will be concerts, games, contests, in the future, and now is the time to shut down on this. Give a substantial amount to the Patriotic Fund and be in a position to say so and stand off all applicants.

A grant of $5000.00 to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund as a special war time grant, from the City Council, means on a total assessment of $10,000,000, approximately 50 cents on each one thousand dollars of assessment.

The citizen who pays taxes on a house and lot assessed for $1,000 would pay in taxes, as a special war contribution, fifty cents. Other assessment in proportion.

On this basis will any British citizen refuse to endorse the action of the City Council in making a grant of $5000 to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund.

There is a good deal of uncertainty and some anxiety with regard to the carriage and delivery of small parcels being sent to relatives and friends at Salisbury Plain, and on the Continent. Inquiry at a local Express Office showed that for delivery of a small parcel the Express company would charge $3.50. This charge seems excessive. If there is any organization taking charge of such service as the despatch of such parcels, the fact should be made known. We are informed that Mrs. Percy McLean has charge of such a service for the Daughters of the Empire, to whom inquiries may be addressed.

An Early Start.

ROYAL RELATIONS

The death of the King of Roumania brings yet another direct descendant of Queen Victoria to a European throne. The wife of the new ruler is a daughter of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg, and consequently a granddaughter of Queen Victoria. It is remarkable that most of the European Sovereigns should stand in the relation of cousin one to another. King George, the Kaiser, the Czarina, the Queen of Spain, and the new Queen of Roumania are all cousins and grandchildren of the late Queen. The Queen of Norway is our own King's sister, and cousin of all these; while the Crown Princess of Sweden, and future Queen of that country, is also first cousin to all of them. The Czar, the King of Greece, and the King of Denmark, and King George are all cousins. King Albert of Belgium and the new King of Roumania are cousins. The Queen of Greece is a sister of the Kaiser and a cousin to several of the rulers and their consorts already named. The King of Norway is our King's cousin, and a brother of the King of Denmark.—Westminster Gazette.

Whitefish in New Country.

With a view to developing the fisheries of Hudson and James Bays upon the completion of the Hudson Bay Railway and the establishment of a line of steamers from Port Nelson to the outside world, the naval service department sent three expeditions last summer to report on the fisheries of these northern waters. The party which went to the east coast of James Bay has returned and reports having found conditions north of the east Maine river excellent for establishing a white fish fishery.

PLANS FOR A GREAT HIGHWAY

W. A. Maclean Wants Fine Road From Windsor to Montreal.

Mr. W. A. Maclean, head of the Highways Department of the Ontario Government, and a technical expert of the Ontario Good Roads Commission, which brought in the report at the last session of the Legislature outlining a scheme for the building of a comprehensive highway system in Ontario, is now succeeding in interesting some influential public bodies and leading good road advocates of Ontario in a plan for the construction of a splendid trans-provincial highway from Windsor to Montreal, and Ottawa, or some point on the Quebec boundary, with proposed branch lines.

The development of the plan is, of course, an exceedingly large undertaking, and as yet is only in the embryo stage, but in view of the almost complete development of railway transportation, and the immense sums of money which have necessarily been expended thereon, and in view of the successful issue to which Hydro-Electric development in this province has been carried, it would seem to follow that the next logical activity should be road transportation, which is demanded by the increasing population of the province, and the increasing need for good market roads and good main highways.

The estimated length of the proposed roadway in the Province of Ontario is about five hundred and thirty-five miles, and if constructed of permanent concrete or strongly macadamized, as the Toronto-Hamilton section is to be, will cost in the neighborhood of ten million dollars.

The proposed route of this roadway lies through the midlands of Ontario, presumably from Windsor through London, and Hamilton to Toronto, then follow the original Indian trail down the Kingston road and from there to the Quebec boundary, with a branch line to Ottawa.

While Ontario has some excellent roadways, they are nearly all located north of the district through which this road would be built, and frequent complaints are heard regarding the condition of roads along this proposed route, and the building of such a trans-provincial highway would form the backbone for a chain of better roads all across the province.

The location of this road would seem to serve the best purpose, following the line indicated previously, not only because it would lie through the most thickly-populated section of the province, but because there are a number of smaller sections of roadway already planned by municipalities along the route, which would form part of the finished scheme. The Toronto-Hamilton road, which is now well under way, would thus be made use of, as would the Ottawa-Prescott road which is being taken up very actively by citizens of Ottawa, and in the building of which the Government will assist. From the proposal to build a Toronto-Hamilton highway, the movement spread to Port Hope and Cobourg, where the citizens were interested in the construction of a lake shore system between those two cities. The project is now taking shape not only as a scheme, but also practically, in the movements of different municipalities along the line. Representatives also of the townships between Toronto and Oshawa have held gatherings to consider the building of a road from Toronto. These roads mentioned, and others already planned, would be included in the trans-provincial highway by special arrangement.

The Government will make arrangements for maintenance, at least for a time until arrangements can be made for permanent maintenance.

The Mayor Was Mad.

Mayor Mederic Martin, who has been roaming the cities of the United States recently on a "smelling" jaunt, made his bow to the Board of Control upon his return in a towering rage. When Mederic was on the tour someone usurped some of his civic authority with disastrous results to his worship's temper. One of the first things that his eagle eye saw when he returned was the unadorned doors of the civic automobiles. Some one during his absence issued an order to paint the civic crest and big letters "City of Montreal" off the civic cars. Mederic was mad when he saw what had been done.

He made his attack first in the Board of Control.

"Who did that?" he demanded.

"Please, sir, I didn't," four controllers were quick to reply.

"Things have come to a pretty pass in this city when things like that happen when I go away. But I'll find out who did it, and then——" and he stormed until he was tired. So someone is going to join the unemployed of the streets if the mayor is a good Sherlock Holmes.

Bridge Builders to Go?

A scheme is being considered by the Militia Department for sending with the next Canadian contingent a strong engineering corps of experienced bridge builders and bridge repair men, as there is a pressing need for these in France and Belgium for such corps are wanted in large numbers to meet the damage done by the retreating armies. There are hundreds of excellent bridge builders in Canada available for this work and as there is a comparative cessation of railway building at present many skilled engineers, it is thought, will volunteer.

A Story of Venice

By JAMES VOLNEY

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Anne had been bored for two days, and she took no pains to conceal the fact.

Since she had joined them at Milan three days before, after a month in Lucerne, Belle, her newly wed sister, and John, her new brother-in-law, had kept an anxious eye upon her, for the family always dreaded those periods when Anne was bored.

Anne did not like Venice.

On the plea of writing a letter she had remained at the hotel, while Belle and John visited the shops in the piazza, promising to meet them in front of the cathedral in time for a ride at sunset.

She was strolling leisurely across the great square when she noticed a tall young American—you can always tell him abroad—gazing up at the bronze horses.

"I WOULDN'T TELL HIM IF I WERE YOU."

He was alone, and as he turned away he met the glance of the bright looking American girl.

"I wish I knew him," sighed Anne. "He's the first American I've seen here that doesn't look like a professional tourist. And then he could ride with us this afternoon, and I wouldn't have to feel that I'm the third that makes the crowd when I'm with Belle and John."

Here she caught sight of that couple, Belle enthusiastically feeding dozens of the dirty blue pigeons which infest the square, while a half dozen photographers were clamoring to take her picture as thus engaged to send to her friends at home.

"Let's go to Lido," suggested Belle. "It isn't far, and we will be back in time to meet the train."

There was no dissent, and John aided her to step into the gondola. He stretched out his hand toward Anne to perform a like service for her, but she was gazing intently at a tall young man who was strolling by.

"There's some one from New York," she said to Belle and John. She raised her voice and called just as the young man turned, "Mr. Henderson!" She waved her hand toward him. He hesitated a moment and then came toward them.

"So glad to see you here!" exclaimed Anne enthusiastically. "My sister and new brother-in-law," she introduced briefly as she shook hands with him. "It's fine to meet an American one knows. We're just going out for an hour's ride. Won't you join us?"

The young man accepted the invitation and took the cross seat at the rear of the boat, sitting beside Anne, while the others sat farther toward the front. "Mr. Henderson is a friend of Ella's," Anne explained to the others.

"I was so surprised to see you," she said. "I didn't know you were over here, and I haven't heard from Ella but once since I left New York. Did you know me when I called to you?" she asked pleasantly. "I hardly expected you to, because we had met only that once at Ella's."

"Certainly I knew you," he replied readily. "In fact, I thought I recognized you when you passed me back there near the cathedral, but you glanced at me and didn't give any sign of recognition," he added, glancing at her face, which was slightly flushed.

"I was about in the same state," Anne answered. "I thought I knew you, but I wasn't certain. But now you must tell me all about Ella and what they were doing when you left. I sailed in May just a couple of days after I met you. When did you sail?"

"About the middle of June," he replied. "But I'm afraid I can't tell you of what was going on at that time, as I was so busy getting my business in shape I didn't get around with that crowd much."

"But you have certainly heard from Ella lots of time, haven't you?" she inquired.

"Well, to tell the truth, I haven't heard a word from her since I came over here," he said slowly. "Why did you think I would have heard?"

"From what I heard in New York the little time I was with Ella I certainly thought there was to be a wedding in October, and in the one letter I have received from her since then she said nothing about any change of plans. Of course, however, I don't want to pursue a painful subject."

"I assure you the subject is not so painful," he said after quite a pause.

"By the way, did you hear about Mamie and Kate?" he exclaimed suddenly.

Anne gazed at him with a startled look on her face, then shook her head.

"No. What have they done now?" she asked.

"It nearly prostrated Ella, although she was to blame in the case of Kate. You know Kate was always high tempered, and one morning, I don't know exactly what she did, but Ella gave her a beating, and she ran away. Yes, it was shocking," he said in reply to Anne's exclamation of horror. "Ella really thought a lot of Kate, but of course Mamie was her favorite."

"Did Kate come back?" inquired Anne with considerable interest.

Henderson appeared puzzled. "What do you mean?" he asked.

"Never mind Kate, though," said Anne hurriedly. "Tell me about Mamie."

"It was only the next day that Mamie met with a terrible accident," he said. "Ella had ridden out on Long Island with some friends. They stopped at a florist's garden, leaving Mamie at the gate. A trolley car came along, and Mamie, evidently not seeing it, stepped directly in front. She was terribly hurt. There was no doctor near, and no one could do anything for her while she was suffering. Ella saw that the end was only a question of a few hours, and she borrowed a pistol from the florist and shot Mamie through the head, killing her!"

Anne gasped and turned pale.

"I don't believe it," she exclaimed. "It is horrible!"

"It is true," said Henderson positively.

Anne was silent for a time. Finally she turned to him and asked:

"Were you at the Turners' garden party?"

He shook his head.

"I suppose you heard of what Lily did there?"

Henderson looked surprised.

"No?" she queried. "It was rather shocking, but Ella shouldn't have taken Lily with her. There were lots of people there and—er"— Anne turned her head in embarrassment. "Well, Lily jumped in the lake, just for fun, of course, and swam around it several times."

"I had heard nothing of such a proceeding," said her companion coldly. "I hardly think it could have happened. Even Lily wouldn't do such a thing."

They were nearing the piazza by this time.

"If you are going on to the station I had better get out here," he called to John, and the latter gave the necessary directions to the gondoliers after expressing polite regrets that Henderson had to leave them.

Anne turned toward Henderson.

"You know Lily, of course?" she questioned.

He laughed and then said frankly: "I'll confess that I have been puzzled several times this evening, and one of the puzzles is Lily. Who is she?"

"I'll tell you if you tell me who Kate and Mamie are," replied Anne.

"Agreed. Kate and Mamie are Ella's blue ribbon mares. I thought every one knew them."

"Lily is Ella's Pomeranian that always wins the prizes at the bench shows. Her picture's been in the papers dozens of times, and I thought every one knew her. Do you really know any one of the name of Ella?" she asked her companion abruptly, turning and staring him directly in the face.

He was not confused at all as he laughed and replied:

"I can't recall any Ella among my acquaintances just now. Do you know of any?"

"You are to be congratulated on your imagination and nerve," said Anne angrily. "Ella is one of my dearest friends, and I really thought I knew you when I first called to you. When I discovered my mistake we had already started on the ride, and I didn't like to denounce you then."

"Very kind of you," he said dryly. "But the fact remains that I was kidnaped by you."

Anne laughed.

"You were really heaven sent. I would have bored Belle and her husband, and they would have bored me while we were waiting for the train. We are going on to the station now, but I am rather puzzled as to whether I should tell the one we are to meet about this."

It was a sort of question, and Henderson replied:

"To whom would you confide it? Who is it that is coming?"

"The man I am to marry as soon as I reach home," she said gently.

The gondola had stopped. Henderson shook hands with her.

"I wouldn't tell him if I were you," he said, bending over. "I'm going on to the hotel now to join my wife, and I shan't tell her."

"I knew at once she was trying to make game of me," he muttered as he went along. "I wonder if the little impostor is really engaged to be married, and I wonder if she believes I am married."

"I wonder if he is really married and if he believes I am engaged," smiled Anne as the gondola glided toward the railroad station.

Home Furnishing

Classifying the Living Room.

There is usually only one living room in the smaller priced apartments or houses. Besides the dining room, kitchen, bath and bedrooms there is only this one room of indefinite character which can be furnished at will as a library, music room, den, study or a plain parlor. Its future destination is left to the judgment of the owner.

Any one of the above named characters may be given this general room. For instance, if the young housekeeper is musical and owns a piano the room at once should be classified as a music room. If there are a good many books belonging to members of the family the room takes on the character of a library. If there are a handsome writing desk and a writer in the family it may serve to make the room a study.

More often, however, this one room is a sort of general living room without any definite character, just a place of comfort and cleanliness where the family assemble after dinner for a period of rest and pleasure.

In the latter case comfort is the thing to be considered, and following close upon its heels is prettiness, for it is almost impossible to be perfectly comfortable in an ugly room. It is not necessary for the young housekeeper to spend a great deal of money in pursuit of either comfort or prettiness. The daintiest kind of rooms are those furnished in wicker or reed and chintz or cretonne.

Double Use For Dining Rooms.

A certain custom that is much in practice abroad in the smaller apartments and houses may well be adopted here. Over there whenever the dining room and parlor adjoin they are papered in the same way. Between meals the dining room table is treated as a library table, covered with periodicals, books, pictures, etc. Outside of the usual number of stiff backed dining room chairs there is nothing to suggest a place to eat. These stiff backed chairs are placed around between easy chairs. There is perhaps a couch laden with cushions, a bookcase, a desk and other furniture usual in the living room.

This treatment presents another useful room to the family, for, after all, a dining room is practically useless, save for three hours at most during the day. In the foreign way, however, the dining room is very often more popular than the formal parlor. This idea may well be adopted by the young housewife who finds herself limited for space.

Getting More Closet Space.

An unused back stairway can be made into two splendid closets, one on each floor, for a comparatively small outlay. Downstairs, opening out of the dining room, a fine preserve closet can be evolved, lining the unused space with dovetailed boards and building in shelves.

Sometimes this closet will be big enough to hold a barrel or two or a trunk. If there is a window for this closet all the better. If not a piece of glass can be put into the panel of the door leading into the dining room or pantry.

On the second floor the space can be utilised for a linen closet. In many houses these two closets will be found more useful than a breakneck stairway which is apt to be selected by the architect in lieu of the closet room more desired by the average housekeeper.

Dyeing a Carpet on the Floor.

To dye a carpet on the floor, says one housewife, have the desired color of dye boiling hot. Keep it on the stove and use a cup and a narrow paint brush in applying it. Paint one stripe, then skip one, then the next; never two side by side, else the colors will run and there will be no straight edge to the stripes. After these have dried paint the remaining stripes. Weaken the dye for delicate shades.

You may make new colors. Blue and yellow make green; blue and red make purple, etc. Try a little and see what colors you obtain. As the dye in the cup cools pour it back and take hot. Don't try to color dark light. It is impossible.

The Fair One With the Golden Locks

By RYLAND BELL

I first fell in love with Gwendolin Winchester's hair. We hear much of golden hair, but I have never seen but one head of hair the real color of gold. That was Miss Winchester's. She wore it as loose as any hair can be dressed. Indeed, it resembled a balloon in its shape.

Having fallen in love with the young lady's hair, I proceeded to fall in love with the girl herself. We boarded in the same house; consequently I saw her often. But she kept very much to herself, and none of us became familiar with her. Sometimes she would sit with me after dinner for a short while, but none of the other boarders was so honored. At such times, especially when we sat side by side, I noticed a dampness in the air which seemed to come from my companion. I once asked her how she made each individual hair stand out by itself, and she said that she washed it very often. There was a great deal of dust floating about, and it got into her hair. This was the cause of the frequent washings.

After giving her a number of invitations I finally succeeded in inducing Miss Winchester to go to the theater with me. When at the raising of the curtain she took off her hat and displayed her wealth of hair many persons turned their eyes upon it admiringly. It seemed to me that not only its hue was golden, but that in one or two places it had a golden sparkle. I asked her if she ever used a gold powder. She looked at me in a startled way and said:

"No. What makes you think so?"

"Because there is a place in your hair which sparkles as though you had put gold powder on it."

She put her hand up and asked me where was the spot I referred to and was not satisfied till I directed her to it.

Miss Winchester held a position of some sort, but she told none of us where or what it was. She went out about 8 o'clock in the morning and returned at 4. On her return she went into her room and locked the door. I understood that she wished to rest till dinner. I could not understand why, if she needed rest, she took the trouble to wash her hair so often. Women usually make a great ado about washing their hair, and when they do are usually to be seen sitting about with it hanging loose. Miss Winchester would wash her hair between 4 and 5 o'clock and come down to dinner with it done up at half past 6. I once asked her how she dried it so rapidly and she said by fanning it. This added to my wonder that she should take so much trouble after a day's work.

I asked the young lady on several occasions to give me a lock of her beautiful hair, but she always declined. One evening when we were sitting together a lock came loose. My business requires me to carry a small pair of scissors in my vest pocket, and I surreptitiously cut off the strand without her being aware of what I had done.

When I went to my room I held the strand near the gas jet to examine it. On it I noticed a particle of a substance that reflected the light. Among my knickknacks I kept a magnifying glass—not a scientific instrument, but such as could be carried in the pocket. I brought it to bear on the particle and saw that it was either stone or metal. I judged that it was metal, since one of its minute faces reflected the light. Moreover, moving the light about on the lock I detected other particles, though most of them were much smaller than the first.

I don't know what prompted me to do so—idle curiosity, I suppose—but I put the lock in a glass of water and stirred it to separate the particles. They settled to the bottom of the glass. I poured most of the water off, and the rest of it, including the particles, I poured on to a sheet of white paper. This I held over the gas jet till the water had evaporated and the particles stood out on the white paper infinitely small bits of yellow sand or metal. Fishing a little horseshoe magnet out from among my other trinkets, I picked one of the particles up with it. I then knew that it was metal.

I said nothing to any one about the matter. Indeed, I thought very little of it till one afternoon, being in a building, I saw Miss Winchester coming out of an office on the door of which, under the firm name, was the word "Assayers." Assayers may be expected to handle gold dust, and a suspicion at once came to me that the particles I had found in Miss Winchester's hair were golden. I had preserved them and made a further examination to find that my surmise was right.

I ceased my attentions to Miss Winchester, but I dreaded to have it discovered that she was carrying away gold dust that did not belong to her in her hair and, asked for a private interview with her, told her what I had seen and how it had revealed what she had stolen.

She was dreadfully cut up; begged me to keep her secret, and I agreed to do so on her solemn promise to abstain in future.

I never met Miss Winchester again. Somehow after that when I came near a girl with golden locks I could not avoid looking to see if there were scintillations of gold dust.

Humor and Philosophy

WILL the leaders of aesthetic culture please note that poverty can't be beautiful as long as it is uncomfortable?

An excellent reason for keeping your temper is found in the fact that nobody else wants it.

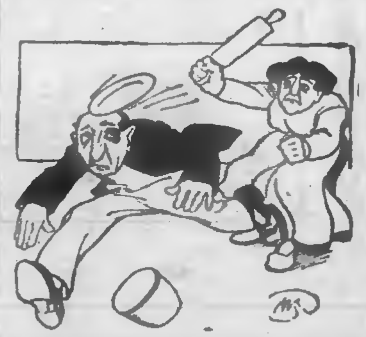
Being pretty, according to a girl's philosophy, is being plenty.



A woman's club is sometimes literary and sometimes culinary, but always lively.

Woe of the Improvident.

With the dying of the summer
And the coming of the chill
Several little things may happen
To unload a passing thrill
On the man who spent the season
Without giving thought or heed
To the winter days approaching
And the things that he would need.

There are problems that are pressing
And occasion much distress
When the chilly winds of autumn
Come to offer their caress.
In July and changing August
Clothes don't count for such a sight,
But they're something of an item
When the ground is painted white.

All the undertones, unfeeling,
Play upon the minor note,
Asking in a startled whisper,
How about the overcoat?
There's a shyness of provisions
In the bin and on the shelf.
It's a mortal cinch the icebox
Will not go and fill itself.

There are many things annoying
When a man is not prepared
For the blizzing of the blizzard,
And his feelings are not spared.

On his duties to renig.
If he didn't save in summer
In the winter he must dig.

A Substitute.

"Can you keep my daughter in the manner to which she has been accustomed?" asked the grouchy old parent.

"I think so," said the young man. "She has been living with you, hasn't she?"

"She certainly has."

"Well, we might get a pet bear."

Couldn't Use It.

WOLVES OF LABRADOR.

Story of a Child and the Squaws Who Tried to Save Her.

A Labrador missionary, says Mortimer Batten in the Wide World Magazine, told me a curious story which occurred on the Labrador coast some years ago. One night the little daughter of a certain brave was missing, and, on discovering the child's tracks in the snow, a party of squaws set out to look for her.

What was their alarm when, a little way from camp, they found that the footprints of a great gray wolf accompanied those of the child. The brute did not appear to have harmed her, but had apparently frisked along ahead, enticing the child farther and farther from camp. In all probability the child mistook it for a dog and followed readily, though the superstitious Indians, of course, believed that the brute had exercised some devilish influence over her.

Darkness was creeping on and, though much afraid, the squaws continued to follow the tracks of the wolf and the child. Night found them far from home, when what was their horror to find that they themselves had been deceived and were now surrounded by wolves!

Only one squaw survived the night of horror that ensued to return next morning to bear tidings of the calamity to camp.

DE WET TRICKY IN FIELD AND OFFICE

His Traitorous Conduct While Minister of Crown Made Third Time He Fought the British.

A movement which was said to have been on foot to offer Earl Kitchener a corps of picked British and Dutch Africander scouts for use with Field Marshal French's army under the command of General Christian De Wet was given a rude jolt, if indeed it ever really existed, when De Wet turned traitor to the flag under whose folds he had been treated so generously and took the field at the head of a rebel commando.

General De Wet established for himself during the South African War the reputation of being the ideal guerilla chieftain. For years he was the despair of the British force, and against him was launched column after column of mobile troops in the hope of running him down. To the end he escaped capture. When British rule was established in the Orange Free Colony he, like General Botha, accepted the new conditions and became a member of the Legislative Assembly of the Orange Colony for Wedefort, and since 1907 held office under the Crown as Minister for Agriculture.

A Boer farmer by birth and upbringing, he took part when still a young man in the defeat of the British at Majuba Hill in 1881. He was a man of influence in the Orange Free State, and for many years was a member of its Legislature. It was not, however, until the outbreak of the South African war that he had the opportunity of displaying the peculiar ability which made him famous.

GENERAL DE WET

At first he was with the Free State contingent in the operations in the the northern portion of Natal. He distinguished himself at Nicholson's Nek, and was promoted to be Field Cornet and soon afterward was made Commandant. Then, as the point of danger shifted to the western frontier of the Orange Free State, he was sent in that direction, and he became one of the principal Boer generals at Magersfontein.

About this time he distinguished himself by a characteristic coup. With 300 men he stole around the British flank and made a dash for the British lines of communication. This time, however, he found the enemy too well guarded, and he was obliged to retire to await a better opportunity.

A little while later he was able to inflict on the British under Sir Hector Macdonald a severe check at Koodoosberg, and then, as Sir John French was making his historic march to relieve Kimberley, he managed to capture a British convoy of 180 wagons, thereby crippling French's transport all the way to Bloemfontein.

Appointed Acting Commandant General of the Free State forces, it fell to him to extricate the Boer forces after the capture of Cronje at Paardeberg and to conduct the retreat which ended with the fall of Pretoria. He then kept up guerilla warfare with many scattered bands.

At Sanna's Post, at Honnig Spruit, and at Roodeval, the Royal Horse Artillery, the Royal Irish Rifles, and the Imperial Yeomanry felt his might, and, if what he accomplished had little effect on the main military situation, it produced intense uneasiness in the British camp and showed that only after long and weary fighting could the final subjugation of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal be effected. From every trap De Wet managed to extricate himself with remarkable skill and the end of the war found him still at large.

Language of Flags

Ever since flags were used in war, it has been the custom to have the emblem of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. That was a token not only of submission, but of respect. In these days, when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed into common use. The flag flying at half-mast is a sign that one is dead who was worthy of universal respect. The space left above the flag is for the flag of the great conqueror of all—the angel of death.

LABOR AND THE WAR

Manifesto of British Trades Union Congress Urges Volunteers to Enlist

It has often been emphasized by labor leaders that organized labor is opposed to war, and as such statements are apt to cause individuals to think that in the present conflict the Labor party in the British Empire are not in sympathy with the action of the Imperial Government in the matter, the manifesto issued by the British Trades Union Congress Parliamentary committee should clear away any doubts.

The circular was issued to officials and members of affiliated societies and reads in part as follows:

"The Trades Union Congress Parliamentary Committee, had under consideration the serious position created by the European war, and the duty which trade unionists in common with the community in general, owe to themselves and the country of which they are citizens.

"They were especially gratified at the manner in which the Labor party in the House of Commons had responded to the appeal made to all political parties to give their co-operation in securing the enlistment of men to defend the interests of their country, and heartily endorse the appointment upon the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee of four members of the party, and the placing of the services of the National Agent at the disposal of that committee to assist in carrying through its secretarial work.

"The Parliamentary Committee are convinced that one important feature in the present European struggle has to be borne in mind, so far as our own country is concerned, namely, that in the event of the voluntary system of military service failing, the country in this its time of need, the demand for a national system of compulsory military will not only be made with redoubled vigor, but may prove to be so persistent and strong as to become irresistible. The prospect of having to face Conscription, with its permanent and heavy burden upon the financial resources of the country, and its equally burdensome effect upon nearly the whole of its industries, should in itself stimulate the manhood of the nation to come forward in its defence, and thereby demonstrate to the world that a free people can rise to the supreme heights of a great sacrifice without the whip of Conscription."

KAISER AS A BREWER

Makes Beer as One of His Numerous Business Investments

The Kaiser is reputed to be a good business man, with a shrewd eye to the main chance. His love for a bargain is such that he has often condescended to embark on comparatively trifling speculations. Recently, for instance, he became the proprietor of a cafe-restaurant at Potsdam close to his castle gates.

The Kaiser also receives dividends from a lager beer brewery in Hanover, and he is the sole owner of the big and flourishing porcelain works at Cadinen, which return him a profit of about 9 per cent. on a capital of $5,000,000. Then there is the Kaiser's more or less secret connection with the Hamburg-American Line. He is believed to have $3,000,000 invested in the "Hapag."

A Use For Seaweed

From ordinary seaweeds a London chemist claims to have extracted a gum that is proof against fire, acids and moisture and that is a better insulator against electricity than vulcanite.

Loads Coal Ready Mixed

Economy of fuel consumption in steamships often requires the mixing of two or more kinds of coal and an Englishman has invented a coaling barge that mixes coal as it delivers it into a bunker.

Handles Steel Rails Rapidly

An eastern railroad has built a machine operated by compressed air that loads two cars at once with steel rails or unloads them and places their rails ready for laying at a rate of four a minute.

"WAIT AND SEE" MATCHES

So Tommy Atkins Calls Them "Asquiths"—Other Nicknames

Soldiers' letters from the front continue to reveal the aptitude of "Tommy Atkins" in the invention of nicknames. There have been a number of puzzling references to "Asquiths," and the expression remained a mystery until one writer explained that this was the new name for French matches. They are so called because you have to "wait and see"— a famous expression once used by the British Premier when halted by the Opposition to disclose the Government's plans with reference to the veto bill.

The Kaiser is now generally referred to as "Crazy Bill" and the Crown Prince as "Five Bob Bit." German snipers are known as "Little Willies."

The outer line of trenches, where men are posted at first to draw the German fire, is known as the "drawing room," and the inner line, where the attacks are really met, is called the "reception room." The ground at the rear, where the dead are buried, is called the "dormitory."

In the navy they refer to Admiral Von Tirpitz as "old Tirps" and called Sir John Jellicoe "Hellfire Jack." Submarines are called "wasps."

A Sunday Morning

By F. A. MITCHEL

James Weatherby awakened at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning and lay staring at the walls of his room. On them were a dingy daub of a water mill and an engraving of Benjamin Franklin. Being in a court, not a ray of sunlight could permeate the apartment.

Six mornings had Weatherby awakened in this room, and this was the seventh—not the seventh day of the week, but the seventh day since he had awakened in his own little home. Turning on his side, his eyes rested on one of those framed words one sees here and there in lieu of pictures. It read "God Bless Our Home" and under it "Remember the Sabbath Day." He thought of the Sunday mornings that he had awakened at home. Little Jim climbed out of his crib and joined his father in bed, while Mrs. Jim went downstairs to start the breakfast. Big Jim, on his back, would hold little Jim up at arm's length, his feet under the child.

Then had come quarrels between Weatherby and his wife. Mrs. Weatherby was frugal, and Jim was careless with his money. He was hard for an economical wife to manage, and sometimes she would lose her patience with him. At last Jim declared he would no longer stand her harrowing, as he called it, and left her.

This was a week ago. As Jim lay looking at the words "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day" he went over and over again in his mind those happy Sunday mornings he had spent at home. After he and little Jim had had their play he had taken his bath, put on his Sunday clothes, and on that morning he had always helped Jimmie to dress. Then the three had met at the breakfast table, on which there was always something nice provided for Sunday morning.

While Weatherby was looking at the mottoes on the wall and thinking of his home the words were having their effect on his heart. It seemed to him that there was a connection between the two. "God Bless Our Home" caused him to think what home was, how different from the lonely room to which he had moved, and "Remember the Sabbath Day" set him to thinking in a quiet vein. After all, was not the economy his wife had urged necessary? Suppose he should be suddenly taken away. And suppose his wife should soon follow him. What would little Jim do? His father pictured him hustled off to some charitable institution or, worse, trying at a tender age to make his living on the streets.

The thought made Jim restless. He got out of bed, splashed a little water on his face, dressed himself and went downstairs. In his pocket were his week's wages that he had received the day before. He had been tempted to spend it in a saloon and went there to do so, but somehow the place didn't look as attractive as it had often looked when he knew that his wife would chide him on his return home. The full amount was intact.

He stood in the sunlight, thinking. It was 7 o'clock. His Sunday morning breakfast hour at home was half past 8. That home was three miles away, but he would gladly walk it to have his breakfast at home. He walked down the street, passing one restaurant after another, trying to force himself into one of them to get a meal. But his stomach rebelled.

"I can go home," he said, "and eat with Molly and the kid. But what use? There would soon be more trouble about the expenses, and every time I paid a car fare instead of walking home after a hard day's work I'd get a scolding."

Then the thought of little Jim left on the world came to him again.

He was walking in the direction of his home, and as he thought he walked the faster. When he had gone a mile he stopped. Then he went on for another mile and stopped again. A third time he stopped and stood looking at his home a short distance away.

A clock struck 8. Molly was getting the breakfast. Who was helping little Jim dress himself? He could get on his clothes, but could he get the buttons in the holes? Weatherby could see the window of the boy's room and fancied him trying to "button himself up." Involuntarily Jim started forward.

A few minutes later Molly Weatherby, standing over the range, heard the kitchen door open. Turning, she saw her husband. He had a roll of bills in his hand and handed them to her.

"It's yesterday's pay," he said. "Take it. You can run the finances better than I. I never want to see a cent of the money again."

Molly threw her arms around his neck.

"Where's the kid?" Jim asked presently, and without awaiting a reply he went upstairs.

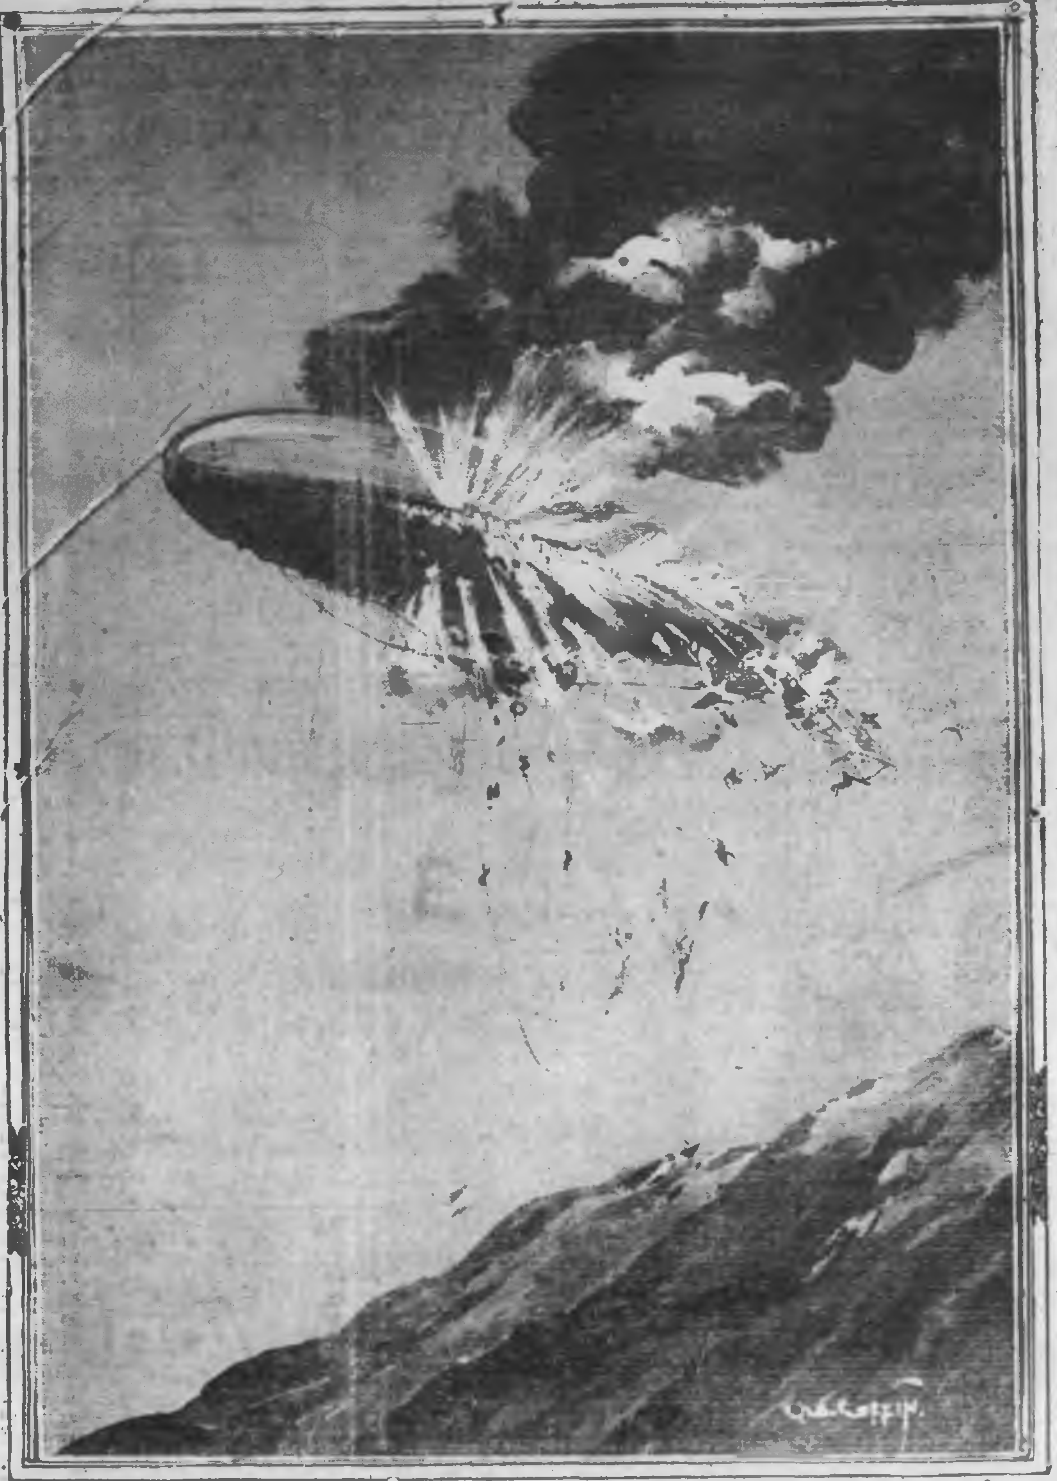
"Hello, pop!" cried Jim. "Ain't I glad you came! This button is too big for this hole and won't go in at all."

Jim hugged the boy, then helped him to finish dressing. After that they went down to breakfast."

"Oh, Jim," said his wife, "somehow I couldn't bear to leave out the muffins you always eat for breakfast, though I didn't suppose you'd be here. Wasn't it lucky?"

"It wasn't exactly luck," replied Jim. He was thinking of the mottoes "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day."

Any joke is good enough if it is joking time.



RAMMING AERIAL CRAFT A WAR DEVELOPMENT

Habits.

Imagine Hercules as oarsman in a rotten boat; what can he do there but by the very force of his stroke expedite the ruin of his craft? Take care, then, of the timbers of your boat and avoid all practices likely to introduce either wet or dry rot among them. And this is not to be accomplished by desultory or intermittent efforts of the will, but by the formation of habits. The will, no doubt, has sometimes to put forth its strength in order to strangle or crush the special temptation. But the formation of right habits is essential to your permanent security. They diminish your chance of falling when assailed and they augment your chance of recovery when overthrown.—John Tyndall.

Indians To Fare Well.

Glen Campbell, chief inspector of Indian agencies, reports that the Northern Indians will not suffer any hardships as a result of a slump in the fur trade, but will earn a comfortable livelihood by hunting game and fishing.

Duncan Scott, the deputy superintendent-general of Indian affairs, has made arrangements to prevent any great hardships occurring to the Indians.

Taking No Chances.

"Wife, what does the doctor say about your case?"

"He thinks there is nothing radically wrong. Still, complications may arise, so I guess I'll spend a month at the seashore to be on the safe side."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

New Steamship Line From Montreal.

The next season will see a new steamship line running from Montreal to England in competition with the North Atlantic shipping pool, according to the latest report in shipping circles. The new line, it is declared, is only incidental to a co-operative enterprize being organized in Montreal. In conjunction with the incorporation of the co-operative a society steamship charter is to be asked for. The steamers will carry whatever goods are imported by the co-operative society.

It is further reported that the Midland Railway Co. of England will give the line, which is to run to their docks at Heysham, near Liverpool, very low rates in the hope of developing transocean trade.—Montreal Star.

BANDAGING EXHIBIT FEATURE OF CAMPAIGN FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

Home Guard Will March Out and Slides Depicting War Scenes Will be Shown

A feature of the publicity end of the Patriotic Campaign will be the Red Cross bandaging exhibit which will be put on during the afternoons of the days of the campaign. Mr. Might, of Turnbull's, has given the use of the north window for the three days of the campaign. In the window will be presented the operation of bandaging and caring for wounded men.

Four of the young lady nurses from the hospital will assist, and four of the cadets from the Collegiate will be the wounded. The whole scene will be highly realistic.

It is intended to put on the demonstration in the afternoon from 3 to 5, and in the evening from 7.30 to 8.30. Should there be only one demonstration given it will be at from 4 to 6 p.m. The young ladies assisting have duties at the hospitals and the demonstrations will have to suit their convenience.

Dr. Cameron has the display in hand, and it promises to be a good and telling feature.

Four of the cadets selected report for instructions tonight, and promise to be as decorus as possible and try and look as if suffering from serious wounds and generally broken up.

The committee are heartened by the fine subscription from the Peterborough Club. This is not the only amount of $500 that is coming. There are others. At least five lots of this amount are expected. Will you be one?

So far as arranged, the following hurrahs will develop:

Tuesday evening at five o'clock the captains and men of the teams will gather at the committee rooms for final instructions and arrangement of the lists for canvassers. This will take at least two hours, and when finished, so many as can get away will go to the Opera House to hear the addresses.

The Home Guard will muster on Tuesday night and parade, one-half going to the Opera House and the other to the overflow at the Market Hall. Both meetings will be addressed by the visiting speakers.

Wednesday evening will be the lantern slides display. It will be put on from the committee rooms, the pictures being thrown from the window above. The sheet will be stretched on the west side of George street and it is expected that a fair view can be had from the corner of Brock street. The slides include a series kindly loaned by Mr. T. F. Matthews of the Valcartier Camp. From Mr. Keyes many of the British dreadnoughts and warships. The committee are also securing a fine assortment of scenes in the Belgian battlefields and the operations of the Allies. A further assortment of the Valcartier camp and a number of slides of local men identified with the movement. In addition, are being made some special slides of the 57th contingent at Salisbury camp, and a group of an officer who has gone and the kids that are left behind . The whole display will be well worth seeing.

Thursday night another parade of the Home Guard. These men are fine, and having a fine assortment, it is no trouble to show the goods. While we all hope they will never be called on to fight, it is a mighty good thing to be ready. The bands will accompany each parade.

In all the churches the pastors were most kind and helpful yesterday and urged the claims of the fund and also the several meetings. All this is appreciated.

A reference may be made to the sermon of the Rev. J. R. Webb, at Murray Street Church, on "The Grace of Compassion." At the conclusion be said: "When I chose the subject on which I have been speaking, the whirlwind canvass for the Patriotic Fund had not been decided upon. I cannot, however, refrain from saying now that this week will present a splendid opportunity for the cultivation of the Grace of Compassion. God forbid that we should judge each other in this matter, but we should mightily judge ourselves. Nothing less than compassion or 'suffering together' will do.

"There must be no shuffling this week. I will not speak of those who have gone to the front as a 'motley crowd' until I have measured up to something like their courage. I will not speak of soldiers' wives receiving more than they did last year until I have well weighed the sacrifice they are making. I will not speak as though we were handing out charity when I know those sons and husbands are earning more—not getting more—earning more than any business or professional man in this church.

"Sir Edwin Arnoly says, 'Love's glory, not Love's gore, redeems the world,' but the greatest glory of love is seen only when blood is flowing. May Peterborough see Love's glory this week as never before."

This afternoon sixty boys from the ward schools start out on a hustle to deliver all over the city the three thousand circular appeals that have been addressed and enveloped. The routes have been laid out, and by evening every citizen who has been listed will have had before him the appeal. Welcome the boys—they are doing a good work.

The publicity committee desire to acknowledge the real, practical help that has been given to the work by the young ladies and young men attending the Peterborough Business College. These, as the request of the committee, undertook the work of addressing 3,000 envelopes and folding and inserting in the same circular appeals. The work was well and very quickly done, quite to the King's taste, being on the King's business. It all helps; besides, it makes a practical saving in expense, just as the delivery of the circulars by the boys cheats the postoffice of $30 in postage. But these are strenuous times, my lord, and we must be stirring.

The names and addresses of 276 old boys and old girls of Peterborough have been bunted up and an appeal has been sent to each. No old boy or girl in Canada has been asked, that is, Peterborough people away from home. It is assumed that each is doing his or her part where located, and no doubt they are.

The chairman of the publicity committee asks that any one who knows of a Peterborough old boy living in the States, that the name and address be phoned in to phone 50,000, in order that he may not be overlooked. If he has already been appealed to, he will not be a second time. But let no guilty man escape. Send in the names. Do it now.

HOME GUARD TO BE INSPECTED BY MINISTER OF FINANCE

The Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association and Home Guard will be inspected by the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance of Canada, in the Armouries tomorrow, Tuesday evening, at 7.30 o'clock.

A march past will take place at 7.45 p.m. down George Street, the saluting base will be at the north West corner of George and Hunter Streets.

The regiment will parade with bands at the Armouries at 7.00 p.m. sharp. All officers and members having decorations and medals are requested to wear the same.

Seats will be reserved in the Opera House and Market Hall at the Patriotic meeting by the committee in charge of the same.

By order,

F. D. KERR,
Capt. and Adjutant.

NO ACTION BY GOVERNMENT

In Regard to the Case at University of Toronto

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Dec. 7.—When asked this morning what would be the policy of the Government regarding German professors at Toronto University, given leave of absence on full salary, Hon. W. H. Hearst said the government's control over the university does not cover the case.

"Our predecessors," he said, "made provisions so that the university could be kept free from politics or party feelings and a grant of money goes to the university automatically."

The matter was not one, he added, with which the government was called upon to deal.

ENGINES LEFT RAILS WHEN DOUBLE HEADERS COLLIDED NEAR KEENE

CREWS ESCAPED INJURY

Failure on the part of a flagman to warn a train crew of the presence of a train on a siding, caused another bad smash-up on the G. T. R. on Saturday afternoon about half a mile east of Keene. By jumping when they saw a collision inevitable, the crews escaped uninjured.

Two double-header freight trains met about half a mile east of Keene station, one going east in charge of Conductor O'Connor, and another westbound in charge of Conductor Hansford. The impact was severe enough to derail three of the engines but no cars were derailed.

An auxiliary from Lindsay was called out and had the line cleared for traffic by Saturday midnight. The passengers on the up-coming Belleville train No. 99 were transferred to the Lakefield train, which went through to Lindsay.

Although Mr. MacNab, local G. T. R. agent, was not sure of how the wreck happened, a reporter was informed by trainmen who were there that it was the fault of a brakeman who failed to warn the westbound train of the other freight which was on the siding. There is a curve on a down grade at the point, and the trains were not discovered until within seven or eight car lengths of each other. The sand brakes were promptly applied, but too late, the engines meeting with considerable impact.

There is a double siding where the accident occurred. The engine going esat was to take half of its train into the double siding and come back for the rest of it. The train going west should have waited but failed to do so, causing the collision on the siding.

PROPORTION OF IRISH IS HIGH

Redmond Defends Countrymen Against Disloyalty Charges

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Speaking at a great demonstration at Tuam, Ireland, yesterday, John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, replied to statements that Ireland was not doing her duty in the present crisis. He quoted official statistics, showing that despite the fact that emigration had drawn from Ireland the flower of her population, there were serving with the military forces of the crown on Nov. 30, 89,000 Irishmen, who had been in the army before the war began or who had joined as reservists or recruits. If to that were added tens of thousands of Irish recruits who were joining the colors in Great Britain or were now in the ranks of the Canadian, Australian or New Zealand contingents, he said, it was safe to say from 130,000 to 140,000 Irishmen were with the colors.

Mr. Redmond declared that 52,000 of the 89,000 Irishmen in the home army were Catholics. He said that 10,112 Ulster Volunteers had gone to the colors from Belfast, while in the same city the Nationalist Volunteers who represented only a quarter of the population had contributed 3,153. This, he believed, was only the beginning of what Irishmen would do.

Mr. Redmond says the men who opposed the treaty of peace between the Nationalists and democracy of England must be divided into "Separatists, Socialists, or common or garden cranks," but that they were not and never had been home rulers. When the constitutional movement had been brought to a triumphal end and Ireland had her own Parliament they would disappear, he declared.

MIND IS MADE UP

Roumania Will Take Her Place With Allies

GENEVA, Dec. 7.—(Via London.)—The Journel de Geneve publishes a despatch from Bucharest which says that Roumania has definitely decided to enter the war on the side with the allies. This decision, according to the despatch, is in accordance with the wish of the entire country, including King Ferdinand and all the Roumanian statesmen with the exception of the Minister of Finance, M. Marghiloman.

The question of when Roumania will make her entry into the conflict is still being discussed, however, one side desiring to avoid a winter campaign; but the military authorities express the fear that Servia may be defeated before the spring.

The attitude of Bulgaria still remains doubtful. Greece, Servia and Roumania have proffered certain concessions, which, however, Sofia seems not to consider a sufficient inducement.

Tunnel Blown Up.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 7.—The great tunnel near Tychjetchar (Takija) has been blown up with dynamite, thus severing communication between Servia and Roumania, according to advices from Nish to The Rotterdam Courant.

SCENES FROM THE ALLIES' BATTLEFRONT

Enos Bacon Witnessed the Horrors of War at the Aisne and Other Points

FOE CAN'T STAND STEEL

Thrilling stories from the trenches and along the battle front in Europe were told last night by Enos Bacon, known as the "Yorkshire Nightingale," who has just returned from the firing line, and who spoke in George Street Church yesterday.

He was seated in the rotunda of his hotel when a reporter was introduced.

Seemingly loth to recount his experiences, he nevertheless was prevailed upon to narrate one or two.

With a look upon his face almost of pain, he closed his eyes, as if again in the midst of the scenes he went on to describe.

"It was terrible," he said. "If I could only efface some of it from my memory.

"I can see it again—the blood, the wounded; hear the cries and the deafening noise of guns.

"I saw one young boy with both legs gone, cheerfully loading and firing his gun at the enemy. His face was illumined by desperate lines of determination for one so young, as he shouted to me with a laugh: 'I can pop off a few of the beggars yet.'"

Fear the Bayonet.

Mr. Bacon dwelt on the deadly fear inspired in the hearts of the Germans by the bayonet. They can't stand cold steel in any shape, and it is with the bayonet that our boys excel.

"I have heard them squeal like pigs as they saw our boys bearing down on them with gleaming bayonets. I was talking to one Lancer who had impaled six men at one charge on the sixteen-foot weapon he handled so deftly.

"When the boys are in the thick of the fight they actually see blood. There seems to be blood in their eyes. They become wild, maddened animals, knowing that unless they get their man they will be brought down first."

Mr. Bacon earned his robriquet, the "Yorkshire Nightingale," by his bird-like singing. He has a voice of double range and rare sweetness, and was requested to sing frequently, when the soldiers were lying in the trenches. This caused the entrenched Germans to marvel greatly and convinced them that a woman was singing in the Allies' trenches.

Mr. Bacon was enabled to get to the firing line by a special pass, owing to his brother being wounded, whom he desired to be with. He was at the battle of the Aisne and several other engagements.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1914

THOSE PATRIOTIC POSTERS.

ATTENTION has been called, by a communication which appeared in the Review and in the Examiner on Saturday, to the posters which are advertising the campaign for the Patriotic Fund. As Mr. Stocker admits in a letter in another column, these were printed in Montreal and are a gift from himself. While Mr. Stocker never inquired for prices on these posters from the local printers, who have large and well-equipped printing plants for doing these things, yet he has the right to get his printed matter in Montreal or other outside places, if he so chooses. While there certainly are printers out of work in Peterborough, and while the authorities are doing all they can to provide employment, yet a man is not compelled to get his printing done in Peterborough. That the local newspapers are giving large amounts of free advertising to assist the campaign for the Patriotic Fund is quite true. That they have suffered from a shortage of orders and have had a most difficult time in meeting their payrolls, amounting to several hundred dollars weekly, besides other financial obligations, is also true, but, in spite of this, Mr. Stocker has the right to get his posters where he pleases. While the Review has been advocating a "Buy at home" campaign and using what powers it has to improve trade in all lines, and has been keeping as many printers at work as it possibly could, yet people are not compelled to get their printing at the Review, and if Mr. Stocker wished to go to Montreal, he has a right to do so. Mr. Stocker does not say at what price the Montreal firm printed the posters, but that matter is not of so much importance now. We trust the incident will make no difference to the campaign, and that everybody will work hard just the same for a fifty-thousand-dollar fund. Mr. Stocker's energy and patriotism are to be commended, and people should try and work harmoniously for the success of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund.

IT IS BETTER TO GO OUT WITH HONOUR THAN SURVIVE WITH SHAME.

DURING a memorial service held in honour of the late Captain Norman Leslie, of the Rifle Brigade, at Glasslough, County Monaghan, Ireland, the Primate of Ireland read the following extract from a letter written by the gallant officer, while at the front:

> "Try and not worry too much about the war, anyway. Units, individuals, cannnot count. Remember, we are writing a new page of history. Future generations cannot be allowed to read the decline of the British Empire and attribute it to us.
>
> We live our little lives and die. To some are given chances of proving themselves men and to others no chance comes. Whatever our individual faults, virtues, or qualities may be, it matters not, but when we are up against big things, let us forget individuals and let us act as one great British unit, united and fearless.
>
> Some will live and many will die, but count the loss naught. It is better far to go out with honour than survive with shame."

Truly, a most excellent and manly philosophy. These are words that a man can die with, and, whatever the faults of the writer, be his sins great or small, they show that, above all the mistakes, weaknesses and sordidness of the man, there was still the will to make the supreme sacrifice of his life for the well-being of his fellowmen.

The writer expresses the highest and noblest sentiment in man, and, what is almost equally important is that his words show of what stuff Britain's "contemptible little army" is made. Men going to war with thoughts like these have the morale of heroes behind their sword strokes and rifle pointing. An army of such men cannot be defeated. It may be destroyed, but break into rout—never. The German hosts have beaten against a relatively small army of such men, as a tidal wave dashes against a mighty cliff of rock on the seashore, only to ebb again with sullen roar, broken, and gathering for another attempt. After all, it is not volume or vast numbers so much as spirit that will be the deciding factor in this war. Numbers, to a certain extent, are necessary, but the enthusiasm that has brought thousands to uphold the honour of the flag and our Empire from the four corners of the earth, will, we believe, prove to be the wall of rock against which German militarism will beat in vain.

But, if the greatest calamity in history, the fall of the British Empire, is to take place, and the fortune of war is not always with the obvious winner, let us go out with honour. Let us break and wear ourselves into extinction rather than survive with shame.

THE GERMANS did their best to fan civil war in Ireland, but the Irish have a greater or as great a love for the Empire as Germans have for the Fatherland.

VENTILATION OF STREET CARS.
